A stud dog said to be valued at $500 is missing from the Palisades kennels at East Killingly, from which kennels this breed of dogs was introduced into this section of the country and hundreds of the animals have been bred there. There is a belief that the missing dog was stolen, although few men would have the nerve to undertake getting one of these powerful animals away from his home at night. No trace of the dog has been found hereabouts.

At Dayville Friday men were engaged in clearing snow from one of the ponds from which ice is harvested each year, just north of the car house of the Connecticut company. It is expected that the ice will be approximately 10 inches in thickness when harvesting is undertaken there about the first of the coming week. Filling of small houses used by farmers for storing ice for cooling their milk is underway in the surrounding country.

A four-year old cold, now on test at the Shepard Hill farm of W. S. Brown, near Central Village, has given 1056 pounds of milk during a period of 13 days. During this period 30 pounds has been the smallest amount of milk obtained from this cow, which is a pure bred Freisian-Holstein, in any 24 hours.

Deputy game wardens throughout the county have been notified by the fish and game commission of the appointment of Charles M. Letters of Putnam as county game warden to succeed Harry E. Battey, formerly of East Killingly. Mr. Battey, the retiring warden, has held the appointment for a number of years.

Men in the plant and commercial departments of the S. N. E. T company in the Putnam, Danielson and Moosup divisions and their wives motored to New London Friday evening for a bowling contest between Danielson-Putnam and the New London teams of the company. During the evening there was dancing at the Mohican hotel and a lunch.

Resolutions recognizing Judge W. Fenner Woodward as judge and Charles S. Francis as deputy judge of the town court of Killingly will be introduced in the general assembly next Wednesday by Representative E. L. Darbie. Mr. Darbie also will introduce a resolution, in accordance with a vote of the last annual borough meeting, asking the big legislature to so amend the charter of the borough of Danielson as to allow of its having jurisdiction over its sidewalks, and removing this power from the town of Killingly, of which Danielson is a part. Such an amendment merely will restore to the charter a provision it formerly included and is wanted so that the borough may undertake a sidewalk building program without expense to taxpayers of the town are not residents of the borough.

Not many hills in this territory deter motorists who are accustomed to winter driving, but there is a notable exception in the Dark Lantern Schoolhouse hill in the eastern part of this town beyond South Killingly. During the ice periods just prior to the heavy storm of last Monday some drivers have turned about rather than risk a descent of it, even with chains on their machines. The hill is not difficult to negotiate with a good car under normal traveling conditions, but in ice periods presents an aspect that tries the nerve of even the coolest of drivers, and real careful ones will not attempt it.

Assessors continue to be engaged with details of completing the grand list of the town as it is being compiled from lists submitted by the taxpayers during October last. The work is exacting and requires days of the assessors' time before it is complete and ready for the use of the board of relief when they begin their work with the coming of February.

There is a possibility that Henry S. Evers, alias, Barlow M. Diamond, who is serving a sentence of six months at Brooklyn jail, and has about half of it completed, will be turned over to federal officers for prosecution under the Dyer bill at the expiration of his term in Brooklyn. Evers was one of a pair of Brooklyn, N. Y. youths who were captured in Willimantic early last fall after a telephone message from the state police barracks here asked that they be held if seen passing through that city. They were wanted at that time for discharging a revolver at Gardner Sumner in Woodstock after he had warned them away from his orchard, where they were stealing fruit. Sometime after they were taken into custody it was discovered that the nearly new Cadillac car they were driving when captured was a stolen machine and that it had been taken from where it was parked near a New York theatre while the owner, an official of the Consolidated Gas company, was attending an entertainment. The car, which was insured, has since been paid for by the company that carried the risk and is the property of the insurance company. The machine remains at the state police barracks here.

A decided improvement, or one of the recurring downward curve in a graphic chart, in the morality of Windham county during the past year is indicated by the fact that only 15 prisoners are being held at the county jail this week end, while on the corresponding date of last year there were 43 prisoners at the institution. Practically all of these are serving sentences imposed upon them either in the superior or minor courts of the county.

Speaking of snowstorms that stand out predominant among the hundreds that have occurred in this territory in the past 50 years, Judge James N. Tucker said at his home in East Killingly Friday afternoon that one accredited to January, 1867, was the most spectacular in his memory. This storm began in the very early hours of the morning, continued throughout the entire period of daylight and far into the following night.

It was a howling northeaster, clouds of snow being driven in on the wings of a gale. So thick was the snow and so strong the wind that it was impossible to see buildings 150 feet from one's home. A weird and strange spectacle greeted the next sunrise. The highways were piled high with snow and barricaded with mountainous drifts. No plow would avail against these barriers across the highways and shoveling had to be resorted to that the roads be opened. At the hill near the Bartlett cemetery a giant drift barred the highways and through this a tunnel was dug for the use of travel for days thereafter.

Judge Tucker estimates that this fall of snow would have been about two feet on the level, but it was so whipped about by the gale that it piled up in remarkable fashion, creating greater difficulties for humanity than was experienced in the aftermath of the famous blizzard of March 13, 1888.

Figures covering the distribution of expenditure of roads in the town of Killingly covering the period from August 1, the beginning of the town's financial year, up to January 3, 1923, were made available at the office of the selectmen on Friday.

Also of special interest to the taxpayers will be the figures showing that the case of Miss Gertrude A. Wardell vs the town of Killingly has cost the town up to the first of this year $2,205.94, this representing legal and court fees, and the case has not yet come to trial. This is the case in which Miss Wardell, formerly a supervisor of music in Killingly, brought suit against the town after she had been summarily dismissed from her position.

Figures also made available Friday show that the cost of the new footbridge over the Assawaga river to Riverview was $3,310.60.

PUTNAM

Friday morning at the chapel of the Second Congregational church funeral services for Mrs. Abby Child were conducted by Rev. Simeon E. Cozad, new pastor of the church. Numbers of relatives and friends of Mrs. Child attended the service. Burial was in North Woodstock.

Charles M. Letters of this city is the new game warden for Windham county, succeeding Harry E. Battey, formerly of East Killingly, and South Woodstock. Mr. Letters' appointment came as a surprise. He formerly was for years assistant postmaster in Putnam and is an ardent sportsman, thoroughly familiar with the greater part of the territory in which he is to serve. Deputy game wardens who have served under Warden Battey have been notified of Mr. Letters' appointment. As is the custom from time to time a change has been made in the office of county game warden, Mr. Battey relinquishing his place for the appointment of Mr. Letters.

A Meriden despatch published throughout this state in editions appearing the first of the year told of the death in that city of Charles A. Burr, 78, and known throughout the state as a building mover. The despatch stated that Mr. Burr was believed to be the last survivor of the crew of the Monitor, which defeated the Confederate ram Merrimac in the world's first battle between ironclads on March 6, 1862. This assumption is an error, as this city in the person of Thomas Taylor, colored, has a survivor of the crew of the Monitor. Mr. Taylor remains active and clearly recalls the famous encounter, in which he participated as a boy who only a few days before had escaped from a plantation where he had been held as a slave from birth.

Attorneys here received on Friday the revised copy of the Practice Book, edition of 1923. This is the first revision since 1908. The book shows all revisions and modifications of forms used in practice before the bar of Connecticut and also gives the procedure in matters of declaratory judgments, as provided for in a measure so ably advocated before the last session of the legislature by Judge Allyn L. Brown, then a senator representing the Nineteenth district.

The following are the newly elected officers of the Sunday school of the Methodist church: Superintendent, D. B. Gilbert; assistant superintendent, L. F. Battey; secretary, Thomas H. Richmond; treasurer, J. H. Marsh; superintendent primary department, Miss Grace I. Bennett; superintendent cradle roll, Miss Ruth Frat; superintendent home department, Mrs. N. B. Burton; organist, Mrs. Ella Wilcox; chorister, L. J. Tripp.

The heaviest accumulation of snow this winter was being removed during Friday from streets in the business section by Supt. Frank Dumas and his force of workers. By late afternoon the busiest streets of the city had been quite thoroughly cleaned of surplus snow, but more remains to be taken away today. Over at the railroad station snow was being loaded into a big gondola car to be hauled away and disposed of, numbers of railroad workers being engaged in the snow removal work.

A. badge will be issued to each member.

Sketches of the proposed new home of the Putnam Savings bank show a two-story structure to be built of red brick with white limestone trimmings and with doors and windows in Colonial style. The building will be 43x66 feet. The lower floor will be entirely given over to the bank's business, while the second floor will be arranged for use as offices. The drawings show a building attractive to the eye and one that will add greatly to the appearance of the section in which it is to be located.

Putnam's high school basketball team is to try an innovation Wednesday evening of next week when it will play two of its games in the Quinebaug Valley league—one game against Tourtellotte High school of North Grosvenordale, the other against the Woodstock academy team. Putnam has an exceptionally fast and strong team this season and hopes to win a double victory next Wednesday. This evening the team will be in Southbridge to meet the team representing Mary Wells High school.

Indicating that progress is being made the construction, the special building committee supervising the erection of the addition to the Israel Putnam school met Friday morning an authorized the payment of $3,000 to the contractor for work that so far has been accomplished.

WESTERLY

The regular weekly session of the Third District court was held Friday morning with Judge Oliver H. Williams presiding. The case of John Ruisi, M. D., vs Nathan Collins of Wood River Junction was heard and decided. This was a claim for $90 alleged to be due for medical attendance and an operation performed on George Corey, who was employed by Collins. Two of Corey's fingers were caught in a machine which he was operating in sawing wood for Collins at his place of business at Wood River.

Collins claimed that after the accident Corey ran into his house and blood was flowing freely from the wound and he requested Mrs. Collins to telephone for a doctor. She was unsuccessful in getting in touch with Duckworth of that locality and called the Westerly doctor to attend to Corey. The contention of Collins is that he did not himself order the services of the Westerly physician and was in no way responsible for the bill.

He admitted that because of Corey's financial condition he did pay him ten dollars at that time to be applied on the bill, but at no time did he consider himself liable. It was pointed out that two fingers which were badly cut and later amputated by the Westerly doctor and his charge for the same was fifty dollars and the rest of the bill was for subsequent attendance. After hearing the evidence Judge Williams rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $90 and costs. An appeal was claimed to the superior court. George R. McKenna appeared for the plaintiff and Clarence L. Roche for the defendant.

The Robert Brooker Camp, No. 6, Spanish American War Veterans are to start a campaign at once to collect funds to erect a Hero memorial at a cost of about $4,000. The memorial will be erected in Wilcox park and permission has already been granted for its erection there. Various entertainments have been planned to raise the funds and a public subscription will probably be taken up. The bronze statue of a Spanish war veteran weighs about 700 pounds and will be mounted on a granite boulder six feet high and a bronze tablet will adorn the front of the stone. It will be turned over to the trustees of Wilcox park. The committee in charge of collecting the funds are the following: Henry E. Palmer, chairman; George F. Leonard, secretary; Henry Sutcliffe, Edward J. Burdick, Shelby C. Nichols, Charles H. Ward, Abram P. Datson, Herbert Tayor, Everett E. Whipple, Bourdon A. Babcock, Thomas D. Lenihan, Isaac P. Javitt and Arthur N. Nash.

The magic and mystery entertainment given by the Duval brothers in Finn opera house Wednesday evening was not very well attended on account of the snow storm; but those who were there were well repaid. It was a great treat for the school children, who were rewarded for perfect attendance by the American Legion post with free tickets.

NOANK

The storm which swept over the village Wednesday and Thursday was one of the worst in years. Fortunately, the wind did not blow hard, so it failed to attain the height of a blizzard. There was about 12 inches of snow on the level, and in consequence trains and trolleys were entirely off schedule. Several cars were stalled all night.

At noon Thursday the trolleys started as near schedule as possible, but later in the day were delayed at different points, making travel rather uncertain.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Carpenter entertained a party of friends and relatives at their home New Year's day.

The power boat Sadie A. Nickerson, Capt. Peter Grant of Nantucket, Mass., came in with 35 barrels of flatfish which was shipped to the New York market.

William J. Ellis, who has been employed in Bridgeport by the T. A. Scott Co., has finished his duties there and returned to his home in the village.

Miss Margaret Glynn of Springfield, Mass., is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rollins of Prospect Hill.

Gallup for the prudential committee. The officers elected are: Clerk and treasurer, Deacon A. M. Grant; member of prudential committee, W. B. Gallup, auditor, F. C. Lumis. Walter E. Lanphear of Newton, Kas., a former pastor. Rev. Mr. Knott gave a review of his work during the past year. DEBT FUNDING COMMISSIONS DELAY MEETING UNTIL MONDAY

Washington, Jan. 5.—Actual discussion between the British and American debt funding commissions will be delayed until Monday, treasury officials declared tonight after Secretary Mellon and Assistant Secretary Wadsworth, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the American group, had received Chancellor Baldwin, of the British exchequer, and Montague C. Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

Significance was attached to the call of the British commissioners to the treasury, although Secretary Mellon declared it was only a call of courtesy. The visitors were with Mr. Mellon half an hour, having gone direct from a formal call on President Harding where members of the commissions explained they had discussed everything in general and nothing in particular. Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Norman will see Secretary Hughes at the state department early tomorrow and later will go to the capitol to meet Vice President Coolidge.

Members of the American commission indicated they were going ahead with plans preparatory to meeting the British delegation. It was said that the first meeting might be delayed until Tuesday, if the Monday date was not convenient to all who will participate in the discussions.

Little additional information was forthcoming today concerning any proposals the British delegation may make in the nature of a funding plan. The belief gained ground, however, that the negotiations would not be completed at this time, partly because of the announcement by Mr. Baldwin that they would sail for home January 20, and for the further reason that the British delegates were believed likely to present some proposals which could not be accepted without changes in the present American debt funding law. Treasury officials, however, remained silent on the many reports current as to the British proposals.

The British commissioners are to be extensively entertained while here.

Branford—Mrs. Louise Hosley returned to her home in Montowese street from the colonial hospital in Middletown, where she underwent an operation two weeks ago. Mrs. Hosley is improving slowly.

RULING AGAINST THE FEDERATED SHOP CRAFTS

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 5.—Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, in United States district court here today denied a motion by attorneys representing 400,000 federated shop crafts employes who went on strike last July, to dismiss the bill introduced by Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, on which the injunction restraining the strikers from interfering with railroad transportation, was based.

The shop crafts motion for a trial in open court was granted, however, although decision in defense motion for a jury trial in the equity case was reserved by the court until the calling of the trial. The trial date was fixed for May 2. The order directing that a special examiner take evidence in the case in various cities was set aside.

The court in its decision, refusing to dismiss the preliminary injunction and the bill, upheld the government contention that the case was one of equity jurisdiction, as originally contended by the attorney general at the time the injunction was asked as the basis for its action.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Citizens of Norwich celebrated New Years quietly in 1873. Starting the year right there was a week free from railroad accidents. Interesting bits of Norwich history of 50 years ago are taken from the Bulletin of those days as follows:

Monday, December 30, 1872—The snow is piled so high in the streets that a person whose rubber boots don't come up to his collar bone, is obliged to use a step-ladder to reach the sidewalk from his sleigh. The depth of the snow has made it impossible to continue the horse railroad service and sleighs are being used on the Bean Hill and Greeneville runs hourly. The weather still remains cold, the mercury standing at 16 degrees below zero this morning.

A large boarding house is to be completed in Ponemah early in January. It will be lighted by gas and heated by furnaces, a decided improvement on the old style.

Some time before daylight Christmas morning the billiard saloon of Melvin Foster was entered by a thief, who cut a hole in the panel of the outer door, unlocked it, and entering the saloon took a sum of money from the money drawer.

Albert W. Aiken, with his New Year Company, played the new drama of frontier life entitled "The Red Coyote" or "The Flower of the Prairie" last evening in Breed Hall.

Tuesday, December 31, 1873—At a meeting of the First Citizen's Monument committee appointed at a public meeting in June, 1869, to arrange for the publication of a memorial volume of Norwich soldiers, Senator Buckingham presided. Amos W. Prentice and E. P. Slocum were appointed a committee to receive proposals for the publishing of the volume which is to [illegible] some 500 pages with steel engravings of all officers. The Mince Pie of Our Mother.

O, the mince pie of our mother! As the Winter time drawn near,
All the slumbers are pervaded by a haunting, deadly fear;
Turkey, chicken pie, and pudding, none of these my rest can break—
'Tis the havoc of the mince pie, such as mother used to make.

I can hear the screams of children—then the midnight air is stirred
As some strong man in his anguish loudly shrieks a tabooed word;
And some maiden fair and slender wails of hearts that bleed and break—
They are victims of the mince pie, such as mother used to make.

Even the tramp Whom it was given,
juicy, brown and full of plums,
Though he ate it with such pleasure, to its deadly power succumbs;
Vicious maledictions hurling, through long hours he lies awake—
In the clutches of the mince pie such as mother used to make.

Yet I know that when I meet it at the table; plump and brown,
I shall eat it, every morsel, for I cannot turn it down;
Well, I love the noble turkey, modest blue-point, dainty cake—
Pudding, too—but O, you mince pie, such as mother used to make.

Beautiful Hands.

I've looked on hands whose form and hue
A sculptor's dream might be Yet are those weary, and way-worn hands
Most beautiful to me.
Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
Though the heart was weary and sad,
The patient hands kept toiling on
That the children might be glad.

I sadly weep as looking back
To childhood's pleasant days,
I think how those hands rested not
When mine were at their play.
Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
They're still and empty now;
For time and pain have left their mark
On hand and heart and brow.
Alas! Alas! this parting time
And the sad, sad day to me
When 'neath the flowerets, out of sight
These hands must folded be.

But O, beyond this shadow-vale,
Where all is bright and fair,
I know full well those dear, worn
hands
Will palms of victory bear,
Where crystal streams, through endless years
Flow over golden sands,
And where the sick grow strong again
To clasp my mother's hands.

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS

January 10.—Meeting of Club No. 1, at Franklin hall, Willimantic.

CONDITIONS IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It is some time since I wrote but I have read and enjoyed the Corner. I feel very much pleased with the fine showing it is making—so many letters and every one with something interesting in it. I have especially enjoyed the letters recalling old times and the people of long ago. I often find references to people and families I used to know, and especially to places where I lived or visited.

Our winter has not been very cold, but the cold has been continuous until last week. Twenty below zero was the coldest reported near us, and now it is almost too warm for a fire. It is pleasant to have the outside door open at noon.

Several of my friends ask why we do not sell out here and go to some of the warmer western states. This state is no colder than most of the others, and the clear, bright sunshine and the dry air makes these cold winds more pleasant than in damp climates. I never came so near freezing as I did once in going to school over the "Topliff" hill, just north of South Coventry. And it was only 30 below zero that morning. And I have seen little children under school age sliding down hill all day with the mercury at 25 degrees below at noon in Wisconsin. The coldest weather I ever saw was in the east of Wisconsin, in Pierce county, when for two mornings a self-registering spirit thermometer stood at 50 degrees below. For nearly a month the mercury froze in common thermometers. Yet no one stopped work or stayed in the house.

One reason why we do not feel cold as you do is because we dress for it. No woman in Connecticut ever did when I lived there—if she wore light wool stockings she thought that was enough. Here, women wear heavy men's stockings, and heavy all wool underwear, most buying men's all wool, heavyweight wear, and they usually wear boys' heavy "knickers" over them. Men's underwear is always thicker and cheaper than women's. Over this they wear a heavy shirt and woolen dress. They all wear heavy shoes, many wear boys' shoes to work in, with rubber overshoes, reaching nearly to the knee. A man's coat is generally used for a working wrap, with a heavy cap or hood, and wool lined leather mittens. Most women have a fur coat to ride in—not the costly coats offered for women in stores, but a man's or boys' fur coat, with her own wool coat under it. With fur or leather mittens, a fur cap or hood, and a good feet warmer and robes, one can ride for hours without feeling cold.

As the land is cultivated, and trees planted, the climate becomes milder. The wheat belt has moved one hundred miles north within the last twenty-five years. The Minnesota prairies were as cold and windswept when I came west as those of North Dakota are now. Types and cultivation have made a great difference.

One sister asks what will keep stove from rusting when put out. Why put it out, Sister? A good stove is a fine piece of furniture, and a fire should be made in the living room every damp, rainy day in summer. Health really requires this. It has been many years since I put my stoves away summers, and I find that most people follow the same course. Last summer, I put it over over my cook stove and used it for a table when I used only an oil stove.

Conditions are very bad here for the farmers—even worse than last year, for the debts of last year are unpaid. The county put a lien on the grain to pay for the seed, so they cannot sell any except to the county, until the seed bill for last year is paid. Most of them failed to pay taxes last year, and there is a lien from the township constable on four, three over the top with cold mashed potatoes dotted with butter and put back in the oven until the top is nicely browned.

I wish to thank the one who sent me a pretty calendar.

May it be a happy and prosperous New Year for all the members of the Social Corner.

SOME SWEET SACRED HYMNS.

Dear Folks: There are several factors that go to make church service on a Sunday morning seem ideal, and one of these we think is the music. The country church choir in many places is not what it was at one time. Some of the sweetest singers have joined the invisible choir. Others have moved away, and their places at their posts of duty are not being filled. Congregational singing is now more to be depended on. We admit that the order of church service at the village church is beautiful but the old custom of the minister reading the church hymn (we think quite important) is largely being done away with. As we sing over the old songs, songs that are still ever new, at the morning service, we are lifted higher to the mountain peaks of our experience. Such songs are:

Doxology.

Safely through another week; tune, Sabbath.

Another six days' work is done; tune, Alpaeus.

This is the day the Lord has made; tune, Marlow.

Come thou fount of every blessing; tune, Nettleton.

Joy to the world, the Lord has come; tune, Antioch.

Gracious Spirit Love Divine; tune, Fulton.

All hail the powers of Jesus' name; tune, Coronation.

O God, the Rock of Ages; tune Miriam.

Come we who love the Lord; tune, Glory.

Come let us join our cheerful song; tune, Azmon.

We may not climb the heavenly steeps; tune, Invitation.

Salvation, O the joyful sound; tune, Simpson.

Come let us join our cheerful; tune, Songs of Praise.

We may climb the heavenly steeps; tune, Invitation.

O could I speak the matchless worth; tune, Ariel.

Behold what wondrous grace; tune, Ferguson.

There are also many others.

J. E. T.: We were by your place on Christmas eve. Never before have we seen the Norwich homes look any prettier or more brilliantly lighted than on the evening of Dec. 24, 1922, and the hitching was out, too.

We saw the wonderful Christmas pageant again this year. We wish we could see it every year.

A Happy New Year to all the folks.

I am sending a poem that has been a great comfort to me. Perchance it may be to someone else.

LIFE'S ENDEAVOR.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: As we face the New Year let us endeavor to do something each day to help others over a rough way who are less fortunate than ourselves. The aged and infirm may we be considerate of them and bring cheer and comfort into their lives as they journey down life's hill.

And the children may we not forget them. Although not blessed with any of my own, yet I never hesitate to correct one and explain to them right or wrong, so as to guide them in the path of righteousnes and truth in which we all believe.

We pass this way but once so while we may, let us bring comfort and delight tothose we meet upon the way.

And I am sure our own lives will derive some benefit therefore. Let us say with (Rose Terry Cooke): Daily, hourly, loving and giving, in the poorest life makes heavenly living.

So may the New Year be a happy one to you all, with our editor included. Happy to many others whose happiness depends on us.

Shall they who look into my face or hear
My spoken word, this day one more of cheer,
Bear still a friendlier token in the eye,
Because I chanced to greet them, passing by;
It is the tiny roots that feed the tree;
No flower too small if sweet, to glad the bee;
The little gifts, a word of praise, a smile,
They make the day so tenderly worth while.

I remain

TRUE BLUE.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: New Year's greetings to the editor and all the members. It is my heartfelt wish that this year may bring to all of you the very best that life can bring. Let us gladly welcome the new year and face whatever it brings with hope, courage and charity towards all. To make this a happy new year, let us make someone else happy.

In the past year there has been some very helpful letters in The Corner. I hope we will hear from some of the old writers who haven't written very lately, as they have written some interesting letters in the past, and would be glad to hear from them again. What has become of Canterbury Bell? We haven't heard from her for quite a while.

Theoda: Yes I have got my dicentra. I sent away to the florist for it. If it does well, will tell you about it later. I have never had good luck with one but am going to keep trying until I do, as I think it is the prettiest shrub that grows.

Dorinda: Am sorry that I disappointed you. I was disappointed, too. Perhaps the visit will be the better for the waiting.

Amelia: Why are you so silent? It has been some time since you wrote to The Corner. Give us a letter.

Best wishes for all.

KENSEY.

MAKING USE OF BRAN.

Dear Sisters of the Corner: I feel it is time for me to write and keep up the Corner letters. Certainly a few cannot be expected to do it all.

My attention has recently been directed to the fine cleaning qualities of ordinary bran. Hot dry bran may be successfully employed for cleaning any number of clothes, curtains and household effects.

It should be put into a deep receptacle and left in the oven till it becomes thoroughly hot. But that does not mean burnt. Care should be taken that that does not happen, and, so that a supply of hot bran may be constant while the cleaning process is going on, it is as well to have two lots, so that one thing heating while the other is being used.

Furs, tweeds, curtains, upholstery, wallpaper, tablecloths, cushion covers may all be cleaned by this method. Hands of the hot bran must be well rubbed into the article and then brushed out again. This must be repeated again and again till the object appears fresh and clean.

If it is wallpaper that is being tackled, the bran should be applied with a soft clean sponge, and the whole surface done over systematically.

Bran is also largely used for washing. Particularly when it is desired to prevent colors from running. Delicate dresses and blouses, chints, cretonne and other colored fabrics remain unhurt after the process.

Take several hands of bran and tie up in a bag of muslin, leaving enough room for the bran to swell. This should be placed in about half a dozen pints of cold water and brought gently to the boil. After simmering for 20 minutes, pour off the water into a bath, and fill up again for another stewing of bran water. The first lot is sufficient soap jelly to make a lather. Very little soap jelly will be necessary, as the bran has such a softening effect on the water.

The result of the second boiling of the bran bag should be used in rinsing waters. It will revive the colors and give a slight stiffness to the articles.

If a fur is very dirty, it is a good plan to leave it filled with bran for 24 hours afterwards it must be shaken until free from all trace of the cleanser.

The best wishes of the season's greetings and a long life to the Social Corner is the wish of

CENTURY PLANT.

1923 MODEL.

Dear Social Corner Friends: Anyone will be out on having the latest model in all material things. Only an article having every single one of the latest improvements will satisfy us.

But in the human affairs we still cherish old-fashioned ideas and thoughtless customs and careless ways which long ago should have become unknown and no longer used by anyone.

Why not be equally insistant that every single thing in human affairs be done in the best way?

Frank's father was the only support of his widowed mother and several younger sisters while he was still in his 'teens. But he succeeded in building up a large business and became very wealthy.

Of course he wished his only son to have every advantage, but he did not remember that without effort no benefit can be gained.

The father had studied evenings and in that way had gained a good education. He had always taken a part in the church and community work and enjoyed a full and happy life with many interests.

Frank had no ambition, took no interest in education, was a lifeless discontented incapable man because there had been no need of his making an effort or doing his work.

Clara's parents were heartbroken because she married a worthless young man. Her parents had become wealthy through their own efforts, but indulged their only daughter in every way, mistakingly thinking that they were giving her more advantages than they had had.

The only child of a wealthy couple, afterwards the wife of a professional man, said: "It is the most horrible thing that could happen to a girl, to bring her up so ignorant and incapable. Father and mother did not allow me to learn to do any kind of work or take any responsibility in the home. Of course I did not realize what I was losing until too late. Now I envy every capable woman I meet. It takes so much time to learn to be capable and to change all your ways and habits after you are grown up."

The child will be a reasonable, understanding capable person in each line of work and ideas in which he is trained and allowed to work and accomplish by his own efforts.

In the lines that he is not taught he will be guided just by animal instincts. We often wonder why a person otherwise respectable commits some crime.

Just the animal instincts. We should understand and expect that. Crimes never call for more laws and severer punishments. They call our attention to our lack of proper teaching in homes and schools. We are the ones who should receive the punishments.

The two things that are most essential for every child to know are, first, that he understands and respects the rights of others and second, that he knows how to protect himself from those who do not respect the rights of others.

We make many ecorts for "safety"—safety first. The time to teach safety is from the time when the little child first begins to move around until school age. If properly taught during this time, the idea and effort has become automatic and the boy will not needlessly get in danger or jump from the bridge or ride his wheel down the steps or do other dangerous things because others are doing them or because he is dared to do it. A child needs to be taught to resist dares and jeers and comradeship with bad companions.

The chief trouble with the schools is that, for various reasons, but largely because of lack of right teaching before school age, they have been gradually turned into just memory work. The child is not allowed the time to take his books and quietly work at a subject until he has conquered it.

Our greatest men were boys who never went to school much but studied at home because they wanted to know. They not only knew books but knew how to write the books and laws that others commit to memory now.

For health and light and air, a small one-room schoolhouse may be superior, but if only the question of getting the education is concerned, one teacher can manage one hundred in a school room just as well as a small number. If the children are getting an education, the school room is just a comfortable place where each child is studying his own lesson.

The few things that the teacher should be allowed to teach can be listened to by all at once or by many more just as well.

Our childrens' school life is too short and too precious to be wasted by the teacher in teaching.

If you wanted to learn a subject you would wish to take your book and study it, without interruption by anyone, and the school child needs the same chance to study and learn in the same way.

The demands in the towns and cities are for more and larger schoolhouses.

The children are kept in school rooms too much now. What we need to plan for is to keep them out of doors much more in pleasant weather.

Yet the children learn from plainly written books as quickly and in the same way an adult would study. Then a little time spent at all the things they are now taught, and much more of the time out of doors and more in excursions to natural objects and to other places of interest and benefit.

Too many of the children by the time they reach the fourth grade are ready and anxious to leave school.

Unless they had the right training in the home, they have not learned to study and have no further interest in school or in books.

Let's demand the latest improvements in all human affairs and use the test: Is it a 1923 model? Is it the best known, and will it bring the best results?

Wishing everyone a Happy New Year.

JEREMY.

MAINE GETS A BLIZZARD.

Dear Social Corner Friends and Editor: A Happy New Year before I forget it to one and all. Christmas day dawned warm and gray, not a bit like what we generally have. In fact for three or four days it was unusually warm. But this is what comes Thursday and Friday following—a real blizzard, spelled with a big B at that. The wind howled in fury and the snow blew first one way and then another.

Well, the autos are sure tied up for a while at least. With snow three feet on a level I see where we are going to have some winter weather, yet.

After snowing and blowing for two days it cleared off Friday evening and the beautiful moonlight glistened on the snow so fine and white. And today the bright, warm sun more than repays for all the inconvenience of the cloudy weather.

How much our lives are like the weather—sunshine and shadows? The spring of 1909 we had a storm just like this one and that winter in fact the town team was kept busy cleaning out the roads. Not long ago I went with my class, the J. B. S. A. class, of which I am a member, to Sabbath Day Lake schoolhouse to a lecture. Well, we were to go I knew, but just when or how I didn't know. But soon a two-horse sled drove to the door and there was the chore calling for me to hurry up. I soon had my wraps on and was seated with this rest, as quilts were spread on the floor of the sled and we sat in two rows back to back, with plenty of blankets to spread over us. We were on our way in good time as the lecture was to begin at 2 p. m. It was four minutes of the hour when we unloaded, ready to listen to the good news we were sure we would hear. On our way you could often hear someone call out "Watchman, tell us of the morning," for our driver sat on a high seat, high above our heads. It was a very frosty day and so we were glad when we got in where the warm fire was.

Only one bluejay comes for his corn so far and a poor old crow; with only one leg, found his way to get a feed, but I am afraid he may have perished in the storm.

I wish to thank those who sent me cards. As I have been quite ill for the past two weeks I did not do much at sending cards or presents. I wish you could all see how pretty the snow looks, all billowed and all in ripples, just like the swell of the ocean. I cannot think of anything else to compare it to.

All good wishes to the Social Corner and friends.

THE MEDICINE CLOSET.

Dear Social Corner: Judging by the weather the weather man gave us during the month of Decebmer he must either have an awful disposition or chronic dyspepsia. Any way if he has any more of the same kind in his sack I hope he will let me know before he broadcasts it so I can find a nice warm soft bear and crawl in beside him and hibernate. I wonder what the bear would say. I think I would make tracks for the tall timber so fast I could keep warm for a while anyway.

This kind of weather makes one look to their medicine closet quite often so I thought a few hints about it might not be amiss.

First in the kitchen closet one should have a bottle with a mixture of equal parts of linseed oil and lime water for burns. Shake well before using and apply freely to burns. The relief from pain is almost magic. Be sure the linseed oil is pure.

City people who can run in to a drug store do not need a medicine chest so much as country people, but a well stocked closet in the country saves hours of suffering while waiting for the doctor and many times makes a doctor unnecessary.

One should have at least three aluminum cups, an eye cup, a nasal douche, an atomizer for spraying nose and throat, and very important, a clinical thermometer.

Many times if you can tell the doctor over the phone the patient's temperature and pulse, with any other symptoms, he can tell you just what to do so he will not have to come to the house. This saves expense for even those doctors who charge for a phone call only charge the price of an office call, which is cheaper than a house call. I don't blame them for charging for a phone call for, excepting teaching, perhaps, doctoring is the hardest profession there is.

Oh, dear, by pen just loves to play hopscotch so we shall have to take a hop back to the medicine chest again.

Other things quite important to have are, boric acid solution, arnica, camphorated oil and carbolic acid or other antiseptic.

If you have weak or sore eyes bathe them frequently with the boric acid solution in the eye cup. Use warm—only experience will show you about the degree of heat, but the eye is very sensitive so use great care until you know how warm to make it. The boric acid is mild antiseptic for minor sores, too. To make the solution get the dry powder at the drug store and use a level teaspoon to a cup of boiling water. When cool pour in bottle for future use. When you feel a cold coming on use warm camphorated oil freely on the throat, chest and back, especially under and between the shoulder blades. Many times you can break up a cold this way without medicine. Keep warm and dry, whether out doors or in. In applying dry heat for toothache or earache a warm sand bag is good. Have two bags and keep one to replace the cold one. If you cannot get the sand use small salt bags.

In applying wet heat to sprains, bruises and strains, put a cup of hot water in a small saucepan of hot water on back of stove, in cup of water put a couple of teaspoons of arnica and wet cloths in this. To wring out without burning hands squeeze in potato ricer, or if you haven't one put in colander or strainer and press out with cup or anything you have handy.

In using poultices, have two and keep one hot in colander over hot water.

The aluminum cups referred to above I use as follows: One for heating the boric acid solution, one for the camphorated oil and one for carbolic acid or other poisonous solutions sometimes used for sores. If you wish to label cups or bottles use tirro tape as it sticks better than paper and you can write on it.

All these hints have been given to me by physicians at different times and cities and I have brought up a family on them so I know they are good. Your family physician, if he is the right kind, will tell you what to keep in the house and how to use them, and if he isn't the right kind you better discharge him and get one who rather helps you to keep your family well than take all your money.

There are plenty of good physicians now so you do not need to hire a money grabber or quack.

I think I see the editor looking for his pencil to mark this "to be continued," so I will stop before he has a chance.

ROXANNA.

JUDGING OTHERS.

Dear Corner Members and Readers: The habit of judging people, is one of the commonest of humanity's petty weaknesses, especially that of judging people entirely by their conduct to ourselves. This habit has sometimes a very confusing effect. For instance, we hear Mrs. A. talking of Mrs. B. with great scorn. She "is not a lady," Mrs. A. would not know her for anything. "Always tries to keep clear of such people, though unfortunately, society is becoming more and more crowded with them," and so on. One day Mrs. B. calls on Mrs. A., a thing she had before neglected to do (which neglect had been the cause of the trouble) and we now hear Mrs. B. is charming, a sweet woman, the best of companions and a thorough lady. Mrs. A. did not mean to be guilty of misrepresentation, far less untruthfulness on the subject; but she had allowed the petty slight of the other lady's not calling on her to become such a burning grievance that it ended in warping her own mind to the distortion of fact. Mrs. B.'s eventual politeness changed the focus through which the other regarded her, and now she could not do or be anything that was not right.

It is, of course, natural to be affected by other people's conduct toward us; it would be unnatural to wish to make friends with those who obviously do not like us; but to make our opinion of other people's moral and mental qualities dependent on their social attitude toward ourselves is the paltriest, poorest of judgment—in fact, it is not judgment at all, but a mere prejudice. It is the same sort of mental attitude which causes people to be guilty of one of the commonest sorts of bad friendship—that of indulging in general abuse of a former friend because some purely personal feeling has weakened the friendship. The fact that Clara is not so gushingly friendly towards Ethel since her marriage is not sufficient reason that the latter should find her former intimate to be without a single virtue; but she frequently does so. The principle of abstract justice (even in our thoughts) is not an easy one to follow where our own feelings or vanities are concerned. But it is at the same time a fact that its absence serves to make one who can say of another from her heart, "I do not think she has behaved very politely to me, and I am consequently not disposed to like her; but I believe her to be a good and nice woman," shown herself to be superior to one of her sex's commonest weaknesses. But, alas! the women, or men, either, who can do this sort of thing are very rare, indeed. Unfortunately most of us have a feeling, often unacknowledged to ourselves, that we can "get even" for petty slights by gossip or making more or less unkind remarks about our friends, which afterwards we wish we hadn't spoken.

I thought I had a friend. I loved her so, well that I believed in her to the uttermost. She would call up, "you busy?" she would say—and I was always ready for her. She would always have some sewing on a dress for me or a dress to make. Always I would say, "I will work for you in return." I never thought for one moment she was just using me," and would help and make until her bill seemed large. She did one dollar's worth of work for me, and then she stopped coming and she still owes me $5 worth of work. I did think I would give it to her. But people who know about it say, "Why should you give her that, you have to work." Now I can't feel the same towards her as I did before, and it almost hurts when I know how she talks. Yet at the same time she will be nice to others. I almost feel like saying, "She is a fraud" and yet if I say anything it is bound to come back and hit me like a ball, so I have resolved, even if it is the New Year to make out my bill and send it, and call her a nice lady, whether she pays it or not. The bill is honest. It is up to her for I haven't sent her a bill or given her a chance to refuse paying, so I think it is better to be true to her and true to myself.

Mary Mullen says, "It is difficult to be always true to ourselves, to be always what we wish to be, what we feel we ought to be. As long as we feel that, as long as we do not surrender the ideal of our life, all is right. Aspirations represent the true nature of our soul much more than our every day life.

ETHELYN.

EIGHTH BABIES.

Dear Corner Members: Poor little wizened-up baby, blue-veined, waxen-faced, fretting to itself in a feeble little voice, and clutching the air with its tiny fists, as if trying to grasp from the atmosphere the nourishment it lacks.

The eighth baby! The one in every eight, which according to the census bureau, dies before it is twelve years old.

"But it isn't my baby," we say gratefully, gathering our little brood around us, and looking adoringly at the fat, rosy cheeks and healthy kicking limbs of the latest addition to its number.

"Nor my baby!" says the childless married woman, almost fedonclied to empty cradles at the thought.

"Nor my baby!" announces the bachelor girl of anywhere from 25 to 40, with a hitch of relief.

Yet the eighth baby is everybody's baby, for it is the product of community indifference. When every town and city has provided instructive nursing service for its mothers, either through public funds or private contributions, when milk inspections, housing laws, the problems of garbage disposal and water supply, and all the other agencies of hygiene and sanitation receive as conscientious attention from each of us as the condition of our own baby's milk bottle, or his right to plenty of fresh, sweet, outdoor air, then there will be no eighth babies.

Years ago, I remember meeting a most unassuming, motherly sort of woman, whose home was in what then was Indian Territory. It transpired in the course of the conversation that she had 13 adopted children, and as fast as one grew up and passed out of the house or home, she took another under her motherly wing. She was known to everybody as "Ma Rogers" and her cheerful, kind face made one feel that she lived gloriously up to her title.

KITTY LOU.

BREEZE RESPONDS TO THE CALL.

Dear Social Corner: I have had it in my mind that I would write for some weeks. I know many have said don't let the advs. p'ece out the Social Corner page still I some way had a feeling that the advs. would be more interesting than a letter from me, as so many might be looking after bargains before the holidays. As Twice Twenty thinks it is time for a March Breeze and May B's I respond to the call.

A short time before Thanksgiving I had the pleasure of visiting Plymouth and thought I would write about it. Perhaps many of you have been there and as the time has passed I will only mention that I think if those that landed there could stand on that high point of land and view the surroundings it would present a very different view from the bleak and barren country which met their gaze then. A beautiful memorial—Pilgrim monument—is there and from this point can be seen Miles Standish's monument and beautiful estates and drives. We also visited Pilgrim hall. I think they might have brought the "rock" with them to step out on as it is not very large. There are many interesting places to visit there.

Thanksgiving came and with it, the spirit of get-together and now Christmas has passed with so many remembrances from friends that are spared—some far, far away.

I hope to meet with the Social Corner again some time as I attended once at the Buckingham Memorial.

A happy New Year to the editor and all readers.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

OWLS

Norwich Nest, No. 1396, held its regular meeting Tuesday evening at Owls' hall, Main street, with President Edward Cook in the chair. Regular routine of business was transacted.

The annual installation of officers which was scheduled for this meeting was postponed until Tuesday, January 8th, owing to the illness of several of the officers to be installed.

At the next meeting following the installation the entertainment committee will serve refreshments. It is planned for a full turnout for this meeting and an interesting program has been prepared.

RED MEN

Mohegan Tribe, No. 64, met in regular session Wednesday evening in Steiner's hall, with Sachem Joseph A. George in charge. Routine business was transacted following which the installation of officers took place in charge of Deputy Great Sachem Benjamin Rose of New London, assisted by Great Chiefs Clark, Crane and Thompson, also of Nonowantuc tribe, No. 42, New London. The officers installed were as follows:

Dean; keeper of the forest, Peter Gauthier; guard of the wigwam, Daniel M. Dean; trustee for three years, Rufus D. Hurst.

MACCABEES

Members of the Women's Benefit Association of Maccabees were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Bogdonsky at their home, 42 North street, Wednesday evening. Although a very stormy night there was a large number in attendance. An oyster chowder with all the fixings was served. There were vocal and musical selections on the piano and violin by the Misses Madgett and Gladys Hixon and they also played for the dancing which was enjoyed by all. A feature of the evening was the dancing of the Virginia reel. The guests departed at a late hour through the deep snow, voting Mr. and Mrs. Bogdonsky royal entertainers.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

There was a full attendance at the meeting of Clara Barton tent, No. 7, held Tuesday evening at Buckingham Memorial. This was the first meeting of the New Year, with installation of officers, presentation of gifts and a general good time. The following were the officers installed: President, Mrs. Josephine Hewey; senior vice president, Miss Lillie Wolf; junior vice president, Mrs. Gene Evans; chaplain, Mrs. Lillian Winning; treasurer, Mrs. Lillian Brewster; council No. 1, Mrs. Jennie Newbury; council No. 2, Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury; council No. 3, Mrs. Lucy MacDougall; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Alice Brinkman; secretary, Mrs. Florence Swan; guide, Miss Gladys Newbury; press correspondent, Mrs. Lillian Jewett; guard, Mrs. Anna Turner; assistant guard, Mrs. Mary Clark; musician, Miss Elma Doty; color bearers, No. 1, Mrs. Lena Pukalski; No. 2, Mrs. Carrie Prentiss; No. 3, Mrs. Elizabeth Mackey; No. 4, Mrs. Hattie Belle Parsons. The installation was impressively carried out by Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury, department president for Connecticut. For her faithful service throughout the year, the retiring president, Mrs Jennie Newbury was presented a handsome electric lamp, by Mrs. Atterbury, in behalf of the tent. To this, Mrs. Newbury responded with thanks, expressing warm feelings towards the tent, especially the officers, for their loyal support during the year. To Miss Elma Doty, for a number of years pianist for the tent, Mrs. Atterbury presented a $5 gold piece.

Following installation the members enjoyed a Christmas tree party. When entering the room each one was presented a number, and when the several numbers were called as the articles were removed from the tree, the one who held the corresponding number went forward and received her package, there being a gift for every one present. Mrs. Atterbury presented the gifts. At the close a social hour followed with refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee, served by the committee. The salute to the flag brought the meeting to a close.

GROTTO

At its first regular meeting of the New Year held Monday night, Jan. 1st, Nemrod Grotto opened in form with Monarch George N. Chappell presiding over an attendance of fully 100 members. Much interest was shown in several new motions brought up in lauching activities for the new year. Among them was the signing of a contract with a producing company for the presentation of a musical show known as The Glorious Girl under the auspices of the Grotto. Broadway theatre has already been obtained for the production which is dated March 12th, matinee and evening performance, and the following committee named to promote its success;

General chairman, Prophet Nelson J. Ayling; chairman ticket committee, Prophet William Davenport; chairman publicity committee, Prophet Richard Lewis; chairman program committee, Prophet Charles F. Wells; chairman details committee; Prophet, Alexander Finlayson.

This show, comprising about 150 local performers, is recommended to far exceed and be an entirely different production than the Cameo Girl by the same producing company that was shown last year under the auspices of another Norwich organization.

The Grotto is also under direction of its regular entertainment committee to hold its first dance of the year in the Wauregan House Ball room on Jan. 26th, and on Wednesday Jan. 1st, to put on a full form ceremonial as its last class initiation during term of its charter officers.

The annual meeting and election of officers takes place Friday, Jan. 19th with installation at the following regular meeting Monday, Feb. 5th.

With a membership now of 325 the local organization bids fair to reach the healthy number of 500 members before the year of 1923 closes as plans are already under way to work classes in Willimantic, New London and Mystic during that time.

LADIES AUXILIARY, A. O. H.

On Wednesday evening in Buckingham Memorial, Division No. 54, Ladies Auxiliary, A. O. H., held a large and interesting meeting, much business being transacted.

The joint installation of officers will take place Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. in Steiner's hall, Main street. All divisions in New London county are to be represented.

CRIMINAL COURT DISPOSED OF OLD AND NEW CASES

During the morning session of the criminal superior court here Thursday a number of cases were disposed of before Judge Allyn L. Brown.

Paul Bickford and Herbert Potter pleaded guilty to stealing an automobile in New London belonging to M. J. McMahon. They drove to this city where they were arrested. Bickford was sent to the state reformatory and Potter was given a jail sentance of five months.

Nolle pros absolute were ordered in three old cases that came over from the former term of court, viz: James Hannifin, theft of motor vehicle; James McCarthy, statutory burglary; John Tenyck, statutory burglary.

The case of George E. Bates of Preston, accused of aggravated assault last July with an axe upon Theresa C. Elsal, was continued.

Nolle pros absolute were ordered in the cases of Joe Gomes of New London on the charge of indecent assault upon a New London girl, and in the case of Henry Healy of New London on the charge of indecent assault upon several small New London girls.

If cost is the standard of excellence it is certainly better to give than to receive.

PAID $2 MILLION IN TAX PENALTIES IN CONNECTICUT

Owners of Connecticut property paid over $2,000,000 during the past year in penalties for failure to file their tax lists within the period allowed by law, according to a compilation made Wednesday in the office of State Tax Commissioner Blodgett, based on returns of local assessors from all the towns. Property valued at $220,321,589 was involved in the tardy tax lists submitted by the owners who were thus penalized.

In some cases the taxpayers were evidently attempting to evade their taxes, while in others their tardiness was due to oversights. Fairfield county had the worst record, being responsible for $1,758,913 of the aggregate of $2,002,153 of penalties for the entire state. Greenwich taxpayers alone paid nearly a million dollars in penalties. New Haven county penalties aggregated $8,483,515 and Hartford county $2,5[illegible]. Delinquent taxpayers in Hartford [illegible] $1,795,054 of the total for that county, whereas the aggregate of the penalties paid by such taxpayers in New Haven was $1,393,185.

Total uncollected taxes for the entire state on all lists amount to $7,625,515.11. Clinton, Essex, Goshen, Norfolk, Torrington, Ashford and Marlborough are the only towns which reported the collection of the entire tax bill of their taxes. The lowest percentage collected in any town was 57.02 per cent. in Oxford. Glastonbury, Manchester, Preston, Thompson, Sprague Saybrook and Putnam collected between 95 and 100 per cent of their rate bills.

The general property tax collected throughout the state, including the personal tax as of April 1, 1922 was $38,234,330.43, which was 89.95 per cent. of the total levy on the state grand list. Out of $4,272,898.22 remaining uncollected on the last grand list for which the collection period has closed, $183,064 was in uncollected personal taxes.

Bridgeport reported $48,840 in uncollected personal taxes, New Haven $60,866, Hartford $9,784, Waterbury $3,058, and New London $483. "The uncollected taxes in the cities of Bridgeport and New Haven are entirely out of proportion with the uncollected personal taxes reported from any other municipality in the state," according to Commissioner Blodgett.

Marlborough was shown to have the least number of dwelling houses of any town in the state, having 93 listed for taxation. New Haven, with 17,161, was reported to have the largest number.

216,000 Houses in State.

The reports filed with the tax department by the boards of assessors indicate that 299,676 taxable lists were returned in 1921, an increase of 31,403 over the number returned in 1919. The number of dwelling houses listed for taxation on the 1921 list was 216,542, an increase over the number listed in 1919, of 7,400.

Barns, sheds and other outbuildings to the number of 136,887 were entered on the list. Houses and building lots to the number of 363,707 and 3,752,825 acres of land were listed in 1919, as compared with 2,765,723 in 1921.

Voluntown Land Cheapest.

The reports indicate that the average assessed value of dwelling houses last year was $3,148, an increase of $462 over the average value reported in 1919. The averaged assessed value of barns, sheds, ice and store houses increased from an average of $333 in 1919 to $384 reported on the list of 1921. Land increased in value from an average assessed value per acre of $42, reported in 1919, to $46 per acre reported on the list of 1921. The lowest assessed value per acre of land assessed on the list of 1921, continues in the town of Voluntown, $3 being the average value per acre of land in that town.

The towns of Eastford and Griswold are next lowest in the state, the average assessed value per acre in those towns being $5.

Average House Values Varies.

The total value of dwelling houses listed for taxation purposes in the city of New Haven was recorded as $85,135,754, the average value of each house being $4,961, while in the city of Hartford 11,855 dwelling houses were listed, the total value of which aggregated $108,319,018, the average assessed value per house being $9,114. Bridgeport compares favorable with New Haven in this item of taxable property.

Horses Decrease

The 1921 abstract of taxable property indicates that 51,359 horses were entered for taxation purposes, their average assessed value being $75. A slight decrease is noticeable in the value reported for 1921, as compared with the value reported in 1919. The value of neat cattle was entered as $6,766,470, the number entered for taxation remaining practically the same as the number listed in 1919, while the total value of such property decreased slightly. The number of mills and manufactories entered on the list of 1921 was 3,999; the total value of such property amounted to $238,558,178, the average being $59,766. A total of 17,762 stores, shops theatres, banks, hotels, offices and public garages were listed by the assessors; the total value being $209,664,464.

Suffered Breakdown After Husband's Death

Was in a Serious Condition Until She Began Taking Wincarnis

"During my husband's illness I had practically worn myself out through work and worry, and so when he passed away, I had almost reached a state of collapse. I would feel so exhausted that it was all I could do to get about, and yet when night came I could get no sleep. I was fearfully nervous—the least little thing would make me jump.

"I read one day about Wincarnis and decided to try it, and it certainly has done wonders for me. I began to improve wonderfully and by the time I had taken the first bottle my appetite had come back. I was much less nervous and was getting some sleep at night. I have taken only a few bottles and now I am entirely well. My insomnia is gone, and I really feel like a new woman."

CHILDREN'S CHRISTMAS MONEY GOING FOR THRIFT STAMPS

With the opening of the winter term, much of the money received by Norwich children from Santa Claus will be exchanged for savings stamps, through the machines installed in the school buildings by the Norwich Savings Society, Arthur H. Brewer, president.

In former years, the greater proportion of such gifts would be speedily expended in trivial or useless ways. Now, however, the majority of the children of the town spend their money in an earnest, purposeful economic way, feeling new and important responsibilities, as they become bank depositors by means of a method so simple that even the poorest child can adopt its ready aid.

The handy stamp machine in his particular school offers the pupil the golden opportunity to start a bank account, for a single penny can be exchanged for a thrift stamp—and this is the starter for what may influence the child's whole life.

At the close of the fall term, the Norwich Savings Society had installed a total of 20 stamp machines in 20 school buildings of the town, the pupils having regular bank accounts through this means totalling $1021 and the amount of money thus saved reaching the surprising total of $9,624.73.

This very successful department of the banking house is in charge of Chief Clerk Guy B. DuBeare. While it entails extra labor upon the bank's force, its acceptance was so prompt by the city and town children and it is helping to make so many depositors of the small folk who exchange their stamps for bank books, after a dollar's worth has been saved that not one word except expressions of satisfaction can be heard from any member of the busy bank staff.

Women forget a lot of things they never would forgive if they could remember them.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS STRONG.

New York, Jan. 5.—Professional interests recovered today from their uneasiness over the disturbing foreign political situation and continued to bid up stock prices while speculators for the decline, who had offered stocks freely yesterday, hastened to cover. Profit taking caused some irregularity in the late dealings, but gains outnumbered the losses at the close.

Establishment of a renewal rate of 3 3-4 per cent. for call money, the lowest in several months, had a favorable effect on sentiment. The price was later marked up to 5 per cent, however, on government withdrawal of $40,000,000 from local depository banws. An abundance of time money brought a further recession in the rate, 45 day loans being arranged at 4 1-2 per cent. and the longer maturities at 4 3-4. Commercial paper rates also eased, the bulk of the business being done on a 4 1-2 per cent. basis.

German marks dropped to 1.15 cents a hundred, a new low record, in the early dealings, but rose later to 1.19 cents. The French franc, which had fallen as low as 6.93 cents, snapped back to 7.06 while demand sterling advanced half a cent over last night's close to $4.64 7-8.

American Can provided one of the features of the stock market, touching 83 1-4, the highest price it has reached on the present bull movement, which began in the summer of 1921, and closing at 82 5-8, or 4 1-4 points above last night's final figure. Continental Can advanced 1 3-4 in sympathy.

U. S. Steel touched 108 1-2, but fell back to 107 for a slight fractional loss at the close, the day's transactions totaling approximately 50,000 shares, or only a little more than one-third of yesterday's total. Studebaker was unchanged on the day and Baldwin closed at a net loss of 1 point.

Payment of dividends on the common and preferred stocks of the "Cloverleaf" railroad, owned by the Van Sweringer interests of Cleveland, infused new strength into the railroad shares. Chesapeake & Ohio, of which the Van Sweringens are reported to be seeking control, climbed nearly 3 points and then fell back a point at the close, buying apparently being based on speculative expectation of a higher dividend return in the not far distant future. Gains of a point or more [illegible] were recorded by "Soo" Missouri Pacific preferred, Norfolk & Western and Reading second preferred with a number of other showing good fractional gains.

Some of the outstanding strong spots were American Agricultural Chemical, Atlantic Refining, Dupont, Otis Elevator, Mack Truck, Loose Wiles Biscuit, U. S. Pipe, Remington Typewriter common and second preferred, Lorillard, Tobacco, Fisher Body preferred, General Baking and National Cloak & Suit, the gains running from 2 points to 9. BOND MARKET.

New York, Jan. 6.—Weakness of French and Belgian bonds featured today's bond market, while considerable strength was exhibited by railroad issues that have been under pressure during the week. While the declines in the French and Belgian bonds were directly due to the news from abroad of the break-up of the conference at Paris, it was pointed out that the net losses in the day's trading was comparatively small and was taken as an indication that investors are not unduly pessimistic in regard to the foreign situation.

The Belgian 7's and 8's, French 7 1-2's, Czecho-Slovakia 8's, Framerican 7 1-2's, Serbian 8's, Seine 7's, and Mexican 5's, declined 1 to 1 1-2 points and Havana Electric Railways 5's lost 2 3-4 points. Argentine 5's advanced 1 point and Sao aulo 8's gained 1 1-4 points.

The St. Paul issues were under pressure and declined 1 to 5 5-8 points. The Denver and Rio Grande 1st 5's lost 1 point and the refunding 5's lost 2 points, while the Denver and Rio Grande consolidated 4's and the 4 1-2's gained 1 1-2 points. Brooklyn Rapid Transit 7's, certificate 7's and stamped 7's each lost 1 1-2 points. In the industrial list Bethlehem refunding 5's, Otis Steel 7 1-2's and Remington Typewriter 6's lost 1 point each.

Gains of 1 1-2 points were made by Seo 6 1-2's, New Haven 4's of 1956, Lake Shore 4's of 1928 and Erie convertible 4's, Series D. The gain of 3 3-8 points by Cerro De Pasco 8's featured the industrial list. Producers and refiners 8's with warrants gained 1 1-2 point, Brooklyn Union Gas 5's, 3 1-2 and Fisk Rubber 8's and Virginia-Carolina Chemical 7 1-2's a point each.

The Liberty issues were slightly weaker showing the following losses of cents per $100: 3 1-2's, 10; 2d 4's, 2; 1st 4 1-4's, 10; 2d 4 1-4's, 6. and the unc called Victory 4 3-4's, 2. The others were unchanged.

The International-Great Northern reorganization syndicate announced that all the company's 1st mortgage 30 year 6 per cent. and adjustment mortgage 6 per cent. bonds have been sold. Several other syndicate managers announced that their books had been closed and their issues heavily oversubscribed.

A public offering of $50,000,000 Armour and Company of Delaware 5 1-2 per cent. first mortgage bonds will be made Monday at a price not yet announced but expected to yield about 5.85.

A syndicate headed by the National City Company bid $100,307 for the entire issue of $20,160,000 City of Detroit 4 1-4 and 4 1-2 per cent. bonds it was announced today. A condition of the offer was that the city would issue no more bonds for 6 months except in anticipation of taxes and that particular phase of the offer is now being considered by the city before the award is made.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—After a hesitating start, wheat turned upward in price today, owing largely to scarcity of offerings and to indications of demand for shipments to Europe by way of the Gulf of Mexico. Closing quotations were unsettled, 1-4 to 5-8c net higher with May 1.18 3-4 to 1.18 7-8 and July 1.11 1-8 to 1.11 1-4. Corn gained 5-8 to 3-4@7-8, and oats 3-8c to 1-2c. In provisions, the outcome ranged from 5c decline to a like advance.

At first, the wheat was depressed by reports that foreign selling orders were being executed here, but on the downturn of prices some of the most active or recent traders on the bear side turned buyers, and found difficulty in purchasing on the advance which ensued. At this juncture, word was circulated that Germany had taken 320,00 bushels and that other export business in United States wheat was in prospect southwest, besides, 150,000 bushels here was reported as having been sold to Europe.

Failure of top prices to hold well was a feature in the wheat market as the day drew to an end. Some of the buying which had taken place appeared to have been based on hopes that the reparations tangle would speedily assume a hopeful aspect, but in the absence of any such development the amount of new buying at the last proved insufficient to sustain values in the face of enlarged sales to realize profits.

Corn and oats showed some independent strength as a result of brisk demand from western feeders and owing to scarcity of rural offerings.

The subject of his address will be "Truth of Chiropractic." Dr. Hinrichs is a graduate of the Palmer School of Chiropractic, Davenport, Iowa, having been valedictorian of his class which numbered 229, representing many states. Five months previous to his graduation in June, 1921, Dr. Hinrichs capably assisted in the spinergraphic department at this school, and before leaving Davenport, was offered a position on the faculty. Dr. Hinrichs is popular in athletics and while in Davenport, was secretary in the boys' department and instructor in the foreign department of the Y. M. C. A.

His lecture on Monday evening pertaining to his chosen profession, is being looked forward to with interest by his many friends here. Through the courtesy of the executive committee of the league, the meeting is open to women friends.

Following out an annual custom and one much appreciated by residents and school children, John Rogers, with his faithful horse Jim attached to a snow plow, broke paths on Thursday morning through Wauwecus street and a part of Otrobando avenue, near his home. This kind spirit has been shown toward neighbors in that section, by some members of the Rogers family for a number of years.

Mrs. Mary White of Danielson, arrived Tuesday to visit for a few weeks at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy of Town street. She was accompanied by her other daughter, Miss Annie White who remained for that day, at her sister's home. Miss White who is a teacher, has returned to Greenwich, and resumed her school duties, after passing the Christmas vacation at her home in Danielson.

The prayer meeting at the parsonage Thursday evening, was a preparatory service for the celebration of the Lord's Supper, which will be observed at the First Congregational church, Sunday morning, following the regular service.

Thomas P. Bacheler of East Town street is to give the address at the Sheltering Arms service, Sunday afternoon, Miss Helen Lathrop Perkins, soprano, will have charge of the musical part of the hour.

SIX MEN WERE KILLED IN RACE RIOT AT ROSEWOOD FLA.

Rosewood, Fla., Jan. 5.—(By The A. P.)—Armed posses of white men, numbering between 200 and 300, tonight were searching for Jesse Hunter, escaped negro convict, search for whom last night, in connection with an attack on a white girl, resulted in the killing of two white men and four negroes and the wounding of four other white men. Sheriff Elias Walker said only six were killed despite reports of a larger number. In a telegram to Governor Hardee, the sheriff said the disturbances had quieted to the extent that it was believed local officers had the situation well under control.

Following the clash between the races, the negro section was fired and nearly destroyed. Six houses and a negro church being burned.

All negroes have fled Rosewod and are believed to be hiding in the woods for protection.

C. P. Wilkinson, a merchant of Sumner, and Henry Andrews, superintendent of the Cummer Lumber company, at Otter Creek, were killed when they advanced on a negro house last night to see Slyvester Carrier, negro, who was believed to know the whereabouts of Hunter. Their companions then rained bullets on the house, the negroes returning the fire. The number of negroes in the house was estimated at twenty-five.

Before dawn, the white men's ammunition was exhausted and the negroes escaped before the supply could be replenished. A search of the house revealed that Sylvester Carrier and his mother, Sarah Carrier, had been shot to death. Lesty Gordon, a negro woman, was shot to death as she was leaving her burning dwelling, if was reported. This afternoon, the body of Mingo Williams, negro, was found on a road about twenty miles from Rosewood. He had been shot through the jaw.

The white men wounded were:

Cecil Studstill, Bryan Kirkland, and Mannie Hudson, all of Sumner, and Henry Odon, of Otter Creek. Several negroes also are believed to have been wounded.

The community has been aroused since the attack on the young white woman at Sumner Monday. Hunter, who escaped from a road gang in Levy county, was accused in connection with the crime, which was said to have resulted in Carrier saying his act was an example of what the negroes could do without interference.

The white men went to Carrier's home last night to see if Hunter was there and to warn Carrier against further talk of that kind. Hunter was serving a prison term for carrying concealed weapons."

It was believed he was in the house at the time of the clash.

HEARING ON OUTLAWS IN MOOREHOUSE PARISH

Bastrop, La., Jan. 5.—(By The A. P.)—The state of Louisiana, through the state's attorney general tonight had set up the groundwork of its investigation into masked band outlawry in Morehouse parish—the identification through half a dozen witnesses by trinklets and bits of clothing, of two headless and mutilated bodies thrown to the surface of Lake La Fourche by a mysterious explosion as those of Watt Daniels and T. F. Richards, missing Mer Rouge citizens.

Identification of the bodies was the first move in an open hearing which it is promised will culminate in one of the most sensational exposes of masked band depredations ever unfolded.

The slaying of Daniel and Richards has been referred to by Governor John M. Parker, of Louisiana, at whose direction the hearing inaugurated today, was undertaken, as "klan murders."

J. L. Daniel, father of Watt Daniel, made the most positive identification.

Fondling the battered case of a wrist watch, the aged man declared it a keepsake to his "boy" when he "went to war."

The watch with bits of clothing was removed from one of the bodies, it was testified, when they were taken from Lake La Fourche.

"It was my watch," Mr. Daniels said. "It has my name engraved on it. When Watt went to war, I gave it to him. I told him 'some day this may identify you' but I never dreamed that it would be under such circumstances."

He also identified a belt, a collar band of a shirt, and fragments of trousers found on the body.

J. L. McIlwaine, Mer Rouge merchant, another witness, identified fragments of the trousers as corresponding with material used in clothing sold by him to Daniel and also a small piece of cloth taken from the bodies declared to be tha of Richards as corresponding with clothing he sold him.

Prior to calling of the elder Daniel and McIlwaine to the stand, J. C. Nettles, a fisherman, told of finding the bodies floating on the surface of the lake, and T. Semmes Walmsley, assistant to the state's attorney general, and A. E. Farland, department of justice agent, had identified the clothing and trinklets as those removed from the bodies.

7-YEAR OLD GIRL PLACES HAND ON SLAYER OF MOTHER

Newark, N. J., Jan. 5.—Virginia Brigham, 7 years old, toko the state today to testify against William Battles, 19 year old negro, accused of slaying her mother, Mrs. Charles S. Brigham, of Orange, N. J.

Leaving the witness stand after the court had asked her if she saw the man, the girl walked up the aisle and placing her hand on the shoulder of the accused boy, identified him as the person she saw in the house on the day her mother was killed.

At this juncture, Mr. Brigham, husband of the victim, who was sitting near Battles, leaped for the defendant, but was forced back to his seat by court attendants.

Virginia testified that she was aroused from a nap by a noise in the cellar. "What did you do?" she was asked.

"I went dikenstairs and I said, 'Where is my mamma?' Some one said from the cellar, 'She's gone for a loaf of bread.' I went upstairs, but came down again and there was a colored boy there."

FACTORS RESPONSIBLE FOR INADEQUATE TRANSPORTATION

New York, Jan. 5.—Lack of a practical transportation policy on the part of the government. The treatment of railroads wages and working conditions as political rather than economic matters and the "hobbling" of the interstate commerce commission are the chief factors in existing inadequate transportation, A. J. County, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad system, told a meeting of the Bond club today.

Declaring that the present rejuvenation of business will be halted unless the transportation lines keep pace with it, he insisted that the railroads will be unable to progress rapidly enough until they have been divorced from all political activities.

"Take the railroad situation out of politics," he said. "We hobble the interstate commerce commission by too many laws and political pressure. They are judge, jury and high executioner and, to prove their impartiality, congress and a large part of the public have heretofore insisted on the latter qualification.

"Why not pay these hard-working commissioners well insure them a proper tenure of office, but insist that, like the heads of other governmental departments, they must insure adequate transportation service? Why retain commissioners whose chief duty and chief recommendation, until quite recently, was to publicly disparige the railroads. Starve them into submission and be hostile to the present system of ownership?

"The nation suffers from inadequate transportation because it never has had a practical transportation policy, and has not one today."

Railroad heads, he added, realized the heavy cost put upon industrial, agricultural, mining and manufacturing interests throug hinadequate transportation, but asserted that many of these interests helped to make the shackles that bring about their own heavy losses by encouraging demands for reduced rates and restrictive laws."

WERE RUSSIAN CROWN JEWELS SMUGGLED IN SAILOR'S COFFIN?

New York, Jan. 5.—Government officials today frankly admitted they were investigating reports that Russian crown jewels to the value of $4,000,000 had been smuggled into this country in the coffin of an American sailor and buried in the National cemtery in Brooklyn.

While authorities in Washington continued to disclaim official knowledge of previous efforts to locate the jewels in the Brooklyn grave, as set forth yesterday in a copyrighted story published by the Chicago Daily News, it was announced both here and in Washington that the story of the smuggled jewels, now that it had been printed, would be thoroughly investigated, but that the dead would not be disturbed unless sufficient evidence should be produced to warrant opening the grave.

William B. Williams, special agent of the treasury department, who previously admitted that he was working on "a Russian jewel case," preserved strict silence today until Assistant Secretary Clifford in Washington had issued an official statement, announcing that an investigation had been ordered. Then he asserted that no court order for opening the grave would be sought until the inquiry had developed further.

Meanwhile the grave of Seaman James Jones, who died on the army transport Edellyn at Gibraltar in August, 1920, on the way to the United States from Vlaostok and into whose coffin the jewels were reported to have been slipped, remained undisturbed under its mantle of snow.

A band of reporters, who assembled at the cemetery after dawn and who remained there during the day, obtained from Superintendent Buschman confirmation of the fact that Jones was buried in the cemetery. Mr. Buschman, however, declined to point out Jones' grave among the 5,000 under his supervision.

While no armed guard was stationed at the grave, Mr. Buschman let it be known that he had a shotgun handy in his office and that he was keeping a sharp watch.

HAYSHAYS SAYS PUBLIC MUST DECIDE STATUS OF ARBUCKLE

New York, Jan. 5.—Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., today issued what he termed his final word on the case of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle.

Mr. Hays' statement was issued after a long conference yesterday with his committee on public relations, concerning the status of the comedy, who was banned from the screen after the sensational death of Virginia Rappe, screen star actress, at a drinking party in San Francisco.

Mr. Hays expressed the belief that Arbuckle should have a chance to "make good," after Arbuckle had been acquitted of a charge of slaying her.

His "final" statement follows: "All suggestions which have been received from all viewpoints, and they are many and varied, will be referred to the proper parties. This is the kind of question that must be left finally to the judgment of the public on the one hand and on the other hand to those who have business associations with the individual and the individual himself. I have removed the artificial situation of one man being or appearing to be the judge in such matters either for one hundred and ten million people, or for a great industry and art. Such a condition in the development of a business is absolutely unsound economically, and from every other standpoint, and permanently must not be. A temporary framework or scaffolding may be a very valuable tool for a period in the remodelling or construction of a great building, but it must be remembered as the building progresses that such structures are only temporary facilities."

And the more a woman knows about men the less she has to say on the subject.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

FARMERS BUY LARGE PART OF FOOD REQUIREMENTS

Farmers should grow more of the food they consume and buy less of food produced outside their immediate locality is the consensus of opinion of 25,000 farmers in all parts of the country recently questioned on the subject by the United States Department of Agriculture. The survey showed that of the food consumed by farmers and their families 70 per cent is produced locally, and nearly 30 per cent is brought in by railroad. In the judgment of the farmers 79 per cent of the food they consume could be economically produced locally.

In a general way the survey indicated that the more isolated farmers produce more of their foodstuffs than the less isolated, and that the more prosperous sections seem to buy more than the less prosperous. The thought back of the survey was that inasmuch as high freight rates have had a tendency to reduce the prices of products which farmers sell and to increase the prices of the things they buy, they might economically produce more of their home requirements and thus become less dependent upon the railroads and the outside world.

By sections of the country the East South Central States including Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi led in the volume of production for home consumption with 75.2 per cent. The smallest volume of home production is in the New England states including Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut with 58.1 per cent.

NEW RECORD PRODUCING COW.

With a yearly semi-official record of 1,216.59 pounds butterfat equivalent to 1,523.2 pounds butter from 31,164 pounds milk testing 3.85 per cent, May Walker Ollie Homestead, a Holstein, is America's new champion butter-producing cow over all breeds and ages. As a consequence of this performance, finished December 18th, she displaces the former American record held by Duchess Skylark, Ormsby. She is owned by the Minnesota Holstein Company, Austin, Minnesota.

The new champion is a seven-year-old daughter of Plebe Laura Ollie Homestead King and May Walker of Arden, both of whom are of high producing and show winning ancestry. Her weight, 1,765 pounds, combined with dairy temperament and refinement also mark her as an excellent type of dairy cow.

Her grain ration during this test consisted of bran, ground oats, distillers grains, hominy, oil meal, gluten and cottonseed with salt and a limited amount of mineral compounds. She also received liberal amounts of alfalfa hay and, during the latter part of her test, corn ensilage and beets.

The uniformity of May Walker Ollie Homestead's production during her entire yearly test period is an outstanding feature of her record. In no one calendar month did she produce less than 80 pounds butterfat or 2,000 pounds milk, nor did she produce over 3,000 pounds milk in any month. She carried a calf almost six months of her test period.

SULPHUR FOR CONTROL OF POTATO SCAB

Many of the potato growers in Connecticut are interested in any method which will control potato scab. Many of them are familiar with the results of New Jersey's work, and as well they are familiar with the work of the vegetable specialist and County Agent Dole on the farm of L. M. Benham of Highwood during 1921. On this farm sulphur was used on one plot at the rate of 150 pounds per acre and did not give any better control than where no sulphur was used—in fact, practically every tuber was scabby, and the majority of the potatoes were not fit for market.

On another plot 300 pounds per acre of sulphur was used, and approximately 50 per cent of the potatoes were free from scab. On another similar portion of land, 600 pounds per acre of sulphur were used, and a very little scab was found on potatoes, all of the potatoes being marketable. Returning to this same piece of land in 1922, broadcasting 600 pounds of sulphur per acre, it was difficult to find a scabby potato and all potatoes were marketable. This is a marked change from 1920 when the particular spot did not produce a marketable tuber.

In a similar way Alexander Bruce of Berlin, Hartford county, has carried on a test. Where no sulphur was used, his yield per acre of scabby potatoes was 104 bushels; potatoes without scab, 61 bushels; total yield 165 bushels. Contrasting this with a plot where 600 pounds of sulphur per acre was used, 74 bushels were scabby, 137 bushels were not scabby, total yield per acre, 211 bushels. The difference due to the sulphur, then, was 76 additional bushels of potatoes that were not scabby.

Some men have questioned the aftereffect of the use of sulphur. On Mr. Benham's farm after the potatoes were dug in 1921 rye was sown. No difference was noticed in the growth of the rye. In 1922 potatoes planted and no difference was noted except that above mentioned. The crop at the present time is rye and it has just as luxuriant growth over the spot where sulphur has been used as where it has not been used. This is indeed remarkable as in the two years on Mr. Benham's farm a portion of the land has had sulphur at the rate of 600 pounds and other portions at the rate of 750 pounds, 900 pounds, and 1200 pounds per acre.

WEATHER BUREAU FORECASTS SAVE BEEKEEPERS FROM LOSS

Beekeepers are dependent on weather conditions to prevent large winter losses, part of which occure if they do not know when to put their bees in the cellar in the fall, or if bees are removed from winter quarters too early in spring. On the other hand, it is advantageous to give the bees the benefit of cleansing flights as soon as possible in the spring and as late as possible before cold weather sets in. Close attention is paid to the weather forecasts, especially in the northern states.

An instance of the way in which the weather bureau of the United States department of agriculture cooperates with beekeepers occurred recently in New York state. There are approximately 15,000 beekeepers there, half of whom winter their bees in cellars. When the weather map indicated the approach of severe weather, with no indications for a bee flight in sight, telegrams were sent by the state extension agriculturist to secretaries of twenty county and regional associations. These men in their turn were prepared to telephone key men who would telephone beekeepers in their own localities. In this way most of the beekeepers who winter their bees in cellars were reached.

Considering that the honey crop in New York state approximates 4,000,000 pounds a year, and that the greatest losses to the beekeepers of the state have been due to winter weather conditions, the Weather Bureau service is of real importance.

Avoid Poisonous Powders.

Insect powders, as a class, are not poisonous but are merely fine powders that are used to suffocate the insects. Insecticide containing arsenic, such as Paris green or other highly poisonous matter, should not be used about poultry buildings as they are dangerous to the fowls and sometimes to the attendant.

The only reliable test of efficiency of any insect powder lies in the results obtained from its use. If, when it is applied, the parasites contract or act, as if paralyzed the powder is good, but, if the powder does not act and destroy at once it is of very little value. The following kinds of powder insecticides may be safely used on poultry of all kinds:

Aniseed powder or pyrethrum powder, sometimes called Persian or dalmation insect powder, or tobacco dust. Staves acre seed powder, dry airslaked lime and road dust.

DEFECTIVE INSULATION HALTED SUBWAY SEVICE

New York, Jan. 5.—Subway service on the Interborough's Broadway-Seventh Avenue route north of 157th street, Manhattan, was halted for more than six hours today, when defective insulation caused a fire in the Dyckman street power house.

The fire occurred shortly after 8 o'clock this morning during the peak of the downtown rush and passengers were compelled to travel over surface lines. Service was restored at 2.30 o'clock.

KIDNEY TROUBLE CAUSES LAMENESS.

"A lameness followed me for some time, and I felt that it was caused from kidney trouble. One bottle of Foley Kidney Pills had the desired effect," writes H. B. Arbuckle, South Barre, Vermont. Backache, rheumatism, dull headache too frequent or burning urination are symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble. Disordered kidneys require prompt treatment. Neglect causes serious complications. Foley Kidney Pills give quick relief. Lee & Osgood Co.

CENTRAL WHARF EXTENSION TO LEAVE 100 FOOT CHANNEL WIDTH

The finance committee of the common council, consisting of Mayor, Milo R. Waters, Alderman P. F. Sweeney and Councilman William B. Shea, with Corporation Counsel William H. Shields, Jr., gave a hearing in the mayor's office at the court house Friday morning at 11 o'clock on the application of the Central Wharf Co., to extend its wharf in the west branch of the Yantic river, south of the West Main street bridge.

Some opposition develop from Arad Manning and the Thames Coal Company, whose Thames street property abuts on the river across the stream from the proposed new wharf extension that the petition asks for. The opposition was as to the width of channel that was to be left at the southerly end of the new wharf. On the plans proposed for a new wharf, 94 feet wide, the channel width at the southerly end would be 78 feet. Mr. Manning, who appeared in his own behalf, and the Thames Coal Co., which was represented by Thomas M. Shields, stated that they wanted a channel width of 100 feet, and the result of the hearing was that this was practically agreed to and The Central Wharf Co. will file a new application asking for a 69-foot wide extension instead of 94 feet. This will leave the 100-foot channel in the west branch of the Yantic. The proposed wharf extension would extend north and south over 200 feet.

The Max Gordon & Son corporation, which owns the dock next south of The Central Wharf Co. property, indicated that they would expect to extend their wharf in the event the Central Wharf Co. extension was put through.

Lucius Briggs, Willis Austin and Civil Engineer C. E. Chandler appeared for the Central Wharf Co., Samuel Goldberg, Attorney T. M. Shields and Civil Engineer G. E. Pitcher for the Max Gordon & Son corporation.

Totals	$591,647.58	$424,230.68

In his petition Trustee Harwood says that the property is deteriorating and that there are cash payments to be made for which bankrupt estate needs funds which could be supplied by the proposed sales.

There are 1,400 creditors of the concern, each of which has to have notice sent him of the date of the hearing. Notices will also be sent to the Morses, who were the guiding hands in the Groton Iron Works when it was a going concern.

There are four mortgages on the Groton Iron Works, the first two for $1,000,000 and $800,000 held by the Emergency Shipping Board Fleet corporation and the two others for $1,000,000 and $2,500,000 to the Travelers Bank & Trust Co., of Hartford.

These mortgages purport to cover generally all the personal property, but under Connecticut law, while personalty can be mortgaged with realty in a manufacturing plant, yet the personalty must be particularly described in the mortgage.

In the case of the Groton Iron Works it is claimed that the personalty is not so described in these mortgages and in consequence it can be sold.

Examining Auto Drivers' Eyes.

In connection with the accident division of the motor vehicle department, the persons in charge of taking reports of accidents are now making eye tests of all persons actually concerned in accidents, who come into the department. In one day recently, 15 eye tests were made, all on standard charts, and in connection with the direction of an optician, and out of the 15, ten were found to have 100 per cent. vision, and the rest were only slightly under, but none with eye sight so impaired that it could be considered as having contributed to the accident in which he or she was involved.

In the city court Friday morning two local men charged with intoxication were unable to pay their court bill and are now guests of Jailer Main at the hotel on the hill. An old non-support case was again continued. Among the homeless men lodged at the station house Thursday evening was one old resident of Norwich Town.

AMBASSADOR'S NEAREST "BUDDY" IS SENATOR BRANDEGEE

It is not announced just how many days Colonel George Harvey will be permitted to remain in Washington, but it is certain that whatever the length of his stay the time will be all too short in the view of his many friends here, says the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Far more entertainment than he could accept has been planned. There is a great amount of "chinning" to be done by the colonel's senatorial friends. His nearest "buddy" in the senate is Frank Brandegee, of Connecticut, with whom Colonel Harvey was in closest alliance in the days of the weekly when the trenchant pen was being wielded against Wilsonian politics. There were many senatorial gatherings at the Brandegee home in K street, adjoining that of the late Senator Philander C. Knox. It was due largely to Brandegee's own prominence in republican councils and his influence there that Colonel Harvey attained to such pre-eminence as virtually to have written the league sections of the republican platform in 1920. The conferences out of which came the nomination of Warren G. Harding were held in the Harvey rooms at the Blackstone hotel.

PRESTON CITY BAPTISTS HAD GOOD ANNUAL REPORTS

In spite of the storm prevailing on Wednesday the annual meeting of the Preston City Baptist Church was held. In the absence of Earl Bennett, chairman of the church committee, Rev. H. J. Chase, the pastor, called the meeting to order. John P. Hollowell was chosen moderator.

The various reports were heard with both satisfaction and interest showing the church in a very active and flourishing condition. The church treasurer, Appleton Maine, showed all bills paid and a substantial balance on hand. The benevolent treasurer reported an increase in benevolent lines. Rev. Mr. Chase read a very interesting report, citing the various activities during the year with special reference to the many improvements to the church property. This work which is involving approximately $1,000 is in charge of the Ladies Aid Society of the church. Mrs. Ella Bennett is the able and efficient president of this society and much credit for the success of these activities should go to her.

The following officers were elected: treasurer, Appleton Main; clerk, Charles C. Zabriski; benevolent treasurer, Mrs. Charles C. Zabriski; auditors John F. WARNS AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS AGAINST CHILDREN SLIDING

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel announced last night that the number of automobile accidents involving children on sleds had taken an alarming turn within the last few weeks. As a result a warning is issued by the department to drivers of motor vehicles and to the parents of children living in city streets where the danger is the greatest.

Since the last snow storm the accident division of the department of motor vehicles has kept accurate statistics on this class of accidents and reports that seventeen collisions have occurred between children coasting and motor vehicles. Most of these have been of a serious nature and all of them have caused some injury to the children involved. A great number more have undoubtedly occurred in which the injury was so slight that the occurrence was not reported. Of these seventeen reported accidents, four have resulted in fatalities.

Commissioner Stoeckel is warning drivers to be exceedingly careful in approaching cross streets, especially in hilly sections of cities where children may be coasting. Parents are being warned that they must impress upon their youngsters the necessity of choosing safe spots for coasting. The practice of sliding down hills which cross thoroughfares used by automobiles is especially discouraged. It has been suggested that such spots as the Capitol hill in Hartford and similar public grounds be used for this purpose instead of the streets where danger lies in wait for careless children.

POETRY

TREE AND FAMILIES.

An unsatisfactory pleasure to me
Is climbing a genealogical tree;
For up in the branches against the blue sky
The ancestors were so much better than I.

When one of the emigrants happened to slip
And overboard fell from the bow of the ship,
Companions discovered a boat head by chance,
And hauled him back in his Plymouth Rock pants.

On Sunday 'twas Sunday from morning till night;
Females on the left side and males on the right,
With fire and brimstone and wrath that would come,
Until they diluted the minister's rum.

An "Injun" converted with powder and ball
Became a good Indian once and for all;
With cranberries, codfish and corn in a can
At hand.

The Puritan consciences began to expand;
Colonial punishments always were "tied"
One foot in the stocks until lonesome and scared,
Take pot shots at pillory used for a male,
Provided a portable open-air jail.

A [illegible] woman was [illegible]
Or ducked in the pond to [illegible]
Some sense.
Good heavens! that was the good old-fashioned way,
I'd like to see [illegible] today!

A family tree was a dream of more
Who slept in the straw and slept on the floor.
My children are much more important to me
Than forty-five ancestors up in the tree.

—Peter G. Smith, in Montpelier Argus.

THE CASTLE BUILDER.

A gentle boy, with soft and silken locks
A dreamy boy, with brown and tender eyes,
A castle-builder, with his wooden blocks
And towers that touch imaginary skies.

A fearless rider on his father's knee,
An eager listener unto stories told,
At the round table of the nursery,
Of heroes and adventures manifold.

There will be other towers for thee to build;
There will be other steeds for thee to ride;
There will be other legends, and all filled
With greater marvels and more glorified.

Build on, and make thy castles high and fair,
Rising and reaching upward to the skies;
Listen to voices in the upper air,
Nor lose thy childlike faith in mysteries.

—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

FRENCH TROOPS AT COBLENZ ARE CONFINED TO QUARTERS

Precaution Taken to Prevent Clashes Between the French and Germans—French Rhine Army is Being Prepared to March When Premier Poincare Gives the Word—American Forces at Coblenz Are Carrying on All Duties of Occupation—United States Forces Are to be Further Reduced in February—In Financial Circles in the United States Great Hopes Prevail That a Comprehensive Settlement of the Reparations Controversy Will be Consummated.

Coblenz, Jan. 7 (By the A. P.)—French troops under the command of Major General Allen in the American area have been ordered confined to quarters in order to prevent clashes between them and the Germans.

The American forces, numbering 20,000 men and 1,000 guns, are carrying on their duties as usual.

Today the usual evening concert was suppressed among the precautions for the protection of Senator Reed, elected to Washington. Saturday was passed in entertaining the Belgian General Staff, the officers occupying [illegible] In view of the [illegible] Major General Allen, the troops in the Coblenz area will not participate in the ceremonies attending the inauguration of Ebert as president of Germany.

Most of the German workers employed in the coal mines and other industries of the Ruhr region would continue at their work under direct French supervision is still to be determined. The possibility of strikes and similar non-military disturbances which would greatly complicate the situation has not been lost sight of by any official or economic expert in seeking to determine in advance the probable course of events.

FRENCH RHINE ARMY IN READINESS TO MARCH

Paris, Jan. 7 (By the A. P.)—France's Rhine army is gathering to be ready to march when Premier Poincare gives the word for the carrying out of the well-secret plan for seizing the Ruhr and the Rhineland. Trains were crowded all tonight with officers and men hurriedly recalled from leave, returning to their posts, and M. Poincare conferred this afternoon with M. de Fouquieres, minister of public works, on final arrangements for the transportation of the civil and military forces.

The French troops on the Rhine have been mobilized by General Degoutte to remain in their quarters wherever there appeared to be any danger of clashes with the Germans.

There are several times the number of French forces in the Rhineland as are likely to be required for the Ruhr operations, but all the troops will be held in readiness for instant service, although there is nothing yet to point to the assumption of immediate action.

The details of the French plan remain a mystery, but Deputy Tardieu has recently described the proposed advance into the Ruhr as chiefly the work of engineers and customs collectors. This is the nucleus, but the military support required necessarily the action of large forces of the army. Demonstrations by unemployed in various parts of the country.

In London two separate processions converged on Trafalgar Square and the line of the Charing Cross was blocked.

Speeches were delivered from three platforms and resolutions were adopted demanding that the government call parliament into session and take other steps to remedy the unemployment situation. There were no disorders.

WOULD HAVE MARSHAL JOFFRE REORGANIZE SOVIET ARMY

Paris, Jan. 7.—An invitation to send Marshal Joffre as the head of a French mission to reorganize the soviet red army and the Russian military services has been addressed to the French government by the soviet government, according to an announcement made by The Matin. The newspaper asserts that the proposal was brought to France by Deputy Herriot, who recently visited Russia.

The Matin says the French government's reply will be along the line that it is not exactly disposed for the moment to send the hero of the Marne on a visit to the signatories of the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Rapallo.

IRISH FREE STATE TROOPS SEIZE REPUBLICAN PRINTERY

Dublin, Jan. 7.—State troops last night raided the premises of the Bulletin, the republican organ, and seized printing presses and a quantity of ammunition. The Bulletin celebrated its first anniversary a few days ago. Two of its former editors, Erskine Childers and Liam Mellowes, were executed by the Free State authorities. The paper sold openly in the streets until recently and was always obtainable by whispering "republic" to the newsboys who had it secreted in their clothes.

The republicans today started public protests against reprisal executions. Each afternoon of the coming week a petition will be displayed near the ruins in Sackville street and the public will be invited to sign as extensively as the petition against conscription.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—The next supreme convention of the Knights of Columbus will be held at Montreal, Canada, beginning the first Tuesday of next August, it was announced at the close of the quarterly meeting of the supreme board of directors here today. WASHINGTON LOGGING CAMP WAS WRECKED BY CLOUDBURST

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 7.—The Westfork Logging camp, four miles from Morton, Lewis county, Washington, was wrecked yesterday by a cloudburst, according to word received here today. A five foot wall of water poured down Tilton River, wrecking and overturning nearly every building in the camp. A man and a child were reported missing.

FINANCIAL INTERESTS CENTER IN AFFAIRS IN EUROPE

New York, Jan. 7.—(By The A. P.)—Interest in financial and business circles during the past week centered in the allied premiers' meeting at Paris for the purpose of discussing German reparations. Great hopes had been entertained of the meeting, it being felt that a comprehensive settlement might be reached. Such a development would, in the opinion of well-posted bankers and industrialists here, be followed by a marked important movement in world business conditions. As far as America is concerned it was considered that a workable adjustment of the German situation would lay the foundation for the return of European purchasing power, a matter of such vital importance to the country's farmers and raw material producers.

With the premiers unable to agree, and even the French showing a disposition to move into Germany without the British, it might be thought, at first glance, that markets would slump badly. As a matter of fact, they did nothing of the kind. Moderate purchases were followed by fair recoveries. Changes in prices from the week were small and unimportant.

[illegible] one of the results of this week's conference to be carried out is to set [illegible] international business in Europe are progressing. This implies, of course, that the present Anglo-French breach is not over the questions [illegible] reparations, but [illegible] for [illegible] regarding what it is a substantial agreement, but over the policy which should be followed in case Germany defaults under a revised schedule of payments. [illegible] statements [illegible] the situation of a [illegible] in addition [illegible] control [illegible] the French and British [illegible] with expression of confidence [illegible] the both the London and Paris stock markets remained exceptionally well supported. It is interesting to note that the [illegible] of the London stock exchange [illegible] the [illegible] of business and the [illegible] of continuing conditions. [illegible] the steel industry is maintaining [illegible] rate of operations regularly [illegible] has practically itself supplied with orders sufficient to [illegible] all [illegible] the second quarter of the year. The [illegible] report, [illegible] made a further gain and was the largest [illegible] month since October, 1920. That [illegible] in iron output is in prospect may be seen from the fact that the number of active blast furnaces was increased by 11 during December.

Railroad traffic, showing a normal seasonal decline, remarkable continues to exceed the best records for this time of year at any other period in the country's history, and evidences multiply as to the satisfactory character of the holiday trade. Following the turn on the year, the bonds market manifested perceptibly. The rate on call money on the New York Stock Exchange quickly fell back to the lower levels of the last year and the price of time money and commercial paper receded a point to 4½ per cent. At the same time the federal reserve bank statements show a sharp reduction in circulation, which coincides with the passing of the holiday demands for currency, and an increase in deposits, which is a pictorial afternoon of the augmented activity of business. In securities a healthy reinvestment demand has been clearly in evidence. The cheerful undertone in financial quarters would seem, therefore, to have a substantial basis.

WASHINGTON PONDERING UPON REPARATIONS STATUS

Washington, Jan. 7.—Reports from Paris tending to give light on the development of plans for carrying out the announced purpose of the French, Italian and Belgian governments to enforce collection of reparation payments from Germany are scanned with deepest interest in Washington as no definite information is available as yet as to the exact progress to be followed. If official reports to the government have to be disclosed in detail what is to be expected within the next few days care has been taken to keep these advices within the limits of confidential circulation.

It appeared probable today that the American government had little more upon which to base its expectations in that regard than has been disclosed to the public by the French authorities. There seemed to be no indication that as yet any hint had come directly or indirectly from Paris to justify the hope recently expressed by Secretary Hughes.

GERMAN LINER STRANDED IN THE FLORIDA CHANNEL

Havana, Jan. 7.—(By the A. P.)—Three hundred and twenty-three passengers from the German transatlantic liner Holsatia, which is stranded on a sand key in the Florida channel near Carysport, have been taken on board the French liner De La Salle, according to wireless messages picked up here this evening.

The American steamer Esperanzo also has some of the passengers. Both the rescue ships will arrive here tomorrow.

Seamen in Brussels to Strike.

Brussels, Jan. 7.—A general strike of seamen has been set for next Thursday at Antwerp. The walkout is to be made in an endeavor to enforce the demands of the sailors for an increase in wages to compensate them for the depreciation in the value of the franc.

Maud Gonne McBride Liberated.

Dublin, Jan. 7.—(By The A. P.)—Maud Gonne McBride, one of the women leaders of the Sinn Fein who was arrested Friday, has been liberated and today again was standing amid the ruins of Sackville street, repeating her protests against alleged ill-treatment of prisoners. She also attended the Sinn Fein convention.

MURDERED MEN TORTURED ALMOST BEYOND BELIEF

Bastrop, La., Jan. 7.—(By the A. P.)—Federal and state investigators today visited La Fourche, which 18 days ago, gave up the mutilated bodies of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, masked band victims. Photographs and measurements were taken by the party and it was reported a small section of the lake was explored with grappling hooks.

This was the only surface activity in connection with the open hearing into masked and hooded band depredations in Morehouse parish, instituted by Governor John M. Parker, who implicates the Ku Klux Klan.

The proceedings so far have not revealed the names of anyone suspected to have been members of the hooded mob of fifteen to twenty men, who kidnapped Richards and Daniel, but J. L. Daniel, father of Watt, testified that his son had named Captain J. K. Skipwith, Exalted Cyclops of the Morehouse Klan, Dr. R. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, charged by Governor Parker, with being a Klansman, and Laurie Calhoun, Deputy Sheriff of Morehouse, as men he recognized in a band that had given him up and questioned him shortly after the reported attempt to shoot Dr. McKoin on August 2 and before the fatal kidnapping of August 24.

Discussing of the testimony of yesterday's hearing was divided between that of the elder Daniel who was also kidnapped and flogged the night his son and Richards were tortured to death, and a report of the pathologists who examine the bodies which had been taken from Lake La Fourche after mysterious dynamite explosion.

Amplifying the report of the pathologists who performed autopsies over the bodies of Daniel and Richards, Dr. Charles W. Duval, of New Orleans, announced that he had performed 6,000 autopsies during his professional experience but never before had he had a case in which the subjects had been so brutally tortured. He said the manner in which the men were put to death was unparalleled in medical history.

Daniel's body was mutilated and parts removed before the other torture was inflicted, in the opinion of the physician this mutilation was performed by a man who has had surgical experience, Dr. Duval said, and a sharp knife or razor was used. After that Daniel's clothing was rearranged.

"The evident torture of these two men was beyond believing," he added.

500 DEMONSTRATIONS BY UNEMPLOYED IN ENGLAND

London, Jan. 7 (By the A. P.)—London today was the scene of one of the largest demonstrations of unemployed witnessed in recent years. It was held under the auspices of the labor party and the trades unions. There also were demonstrations by unemployed in various parts of the country.

In London five separate processions converged on Trafalgar Square and the line of the Charing Cross was blocked.

Speeches were delivered from three platforms and resolutions were adopted demanding that the government call parliament into session and take other steps to remedy the unemployment situation. There were no disorders.

GERMANY HAS DELIVERED 89 PER CENT. OF COAL DEMANDED

Berlin, Jan. 7 (By the A. P.)—Germany delivered 89 per cent. of the 13,500,000 tons of coal demanded for French reparations last year, or 4.6 per cent. more than claimed in the memorandum of finance submitted to the reparations commission in Paris relative to Germany's alleged default in deliveries under the peace treaty, according to an official reply to that memorandum.

It is pointed out in the reply that the peace treaty stipulated maximum deliveries, and these were to be made only insofar as compatible with Germany's own requirements in providing her people with the necessities of life. It is declared that the deficit was due primarily to the refusal of the French to accept certain qualities of fuel, especially coke, and a demand for a better quality than even German consumers used.

Other causes given for lack of fulfillment are strikes, transport difficulties and frost. The reply also calls attention to Germany's total coal production having fallen from 12,100,000 tons in May of last year to 10,500,000 tons in November.

Relative to the French contention that while the French foundries are able to use only 50 per cent. of their yearly capacity of iron, and the German factories are able to utilize 80 per cent. of theirs, the official statement says this is due to the fact that Germany lost a number of furnaces in Lorraine and Luxembourg, and thus more work has been thrown on the others.

The memorandum declares the economic experts beleive the only permanent way of satisfying the French demand is for Germany to deliver coal and coke in the open market against cash payments and thus obtain the means necessary to buy imported coal required in Germany.

Negro Section of Rosewood Burned

Houses Were Fired by a Mob of White Men—Only 12 Remain Standing.

Rosewood, Florida, Jan. 7.—(By the A. P.)—Twelve houses all that remained of the negro section of Rosewood following the clash between whites and blacks Thursday night in which seven were killed, were fired by a crowd of white men here this afternoon and burned to the ground.

The houses were fired one at a time while a crowd of between 100 and 150 men looked on without making an effort to extinguish the flames, according to Levy county authorities. All of the negroes were hiding in the woods where they went late Thursday night after the clash.

The burning of the houses was carried out deliberately and, although the crowd was present all the time, no one could be found who would say he saw the houses fire. Six houses and a negro church were burned Thursday night, immediately after a crowd of white men, advancing on a negro house, had been fired on from the house and two killed.

The negroes escaped from the house after two of them had been shot to death by the whites who rained bullets on the structure until their ammunition was exhausted. A negro woman was killed as she was leaving her burning dwelling. Another negro was slain about 20 miles from the scene of the trouble and yesterday a fifth negro was shot to death in Sumner on the graves of his mother and brother and one of the other negro victims when he is said to have refused to tell his white captors the names of those in the house who fired on the white men.

In the opinion of the officers, the fires today mark the end of the racial disturbance, which was precipitated when the white men went to the negro house in search of Jesse Hunter, wanted for alleged improprieties in an attack on a young white woman at Sumner Monday. Hunter has not been captured.

Several of the negroes who were barricaded in the house have been arrested, it was learned tonight and have been spirited away for safe keeping.

At Sumner all the negroes are kept in the quarters when not at work in the lumber mill, a deadline having been established between the negro and white sections.

COLUMBIA POLICE ON THE TRAIL OF "EMBASSY" LIQUORS

Washington, Jan. 7.—(By the A. P.)—Sources of what are described as "embassy" liquors which, it is claimed, have been finding their way into the illicit traffic in Washington in large quantities, are being sought by the District of Columbia police as a result of three successive raids in as many apartment houses in the fashionable northwest section.

Lieut. O. T. Davis, chief of the vice squad, under whose direction the raids were conducted, declared today that the [illegible] of [illegible] organized traffic in liquor brought in by some of the embassies and legations. Information [illegible] reached the police, he added, that attaches of some of these establishments have been parties to this traffic.

Among the so-called "exclusive bootleggers" who have high grade liquors are a number of women, according to the police whose clientele includes many of the best citizens in what the authorities term the "high life" of the national capital.

Whisperings [illegible] warning [illegible] that the cold supply, the finest of intoxicants because of "shipping" into foreign diplomatic establishments reached the police some time ago but it was not until the recent raids that the law officers became satisfied that this was more than "spilling talk."

In the latest raid Lieutenant Davis and his squad, which included federal officers, took into custody a man who said he was from Guatemala and Mrs. Elizabeth Hecht, and seized a large quantity of imported wines and whiskies.

Lieutenant Davis said Mrs. Hecht admitted that the liquors found in her apartment were from foreign countries. He added that the man arrested had claimed ownership of the liquor and had protested against its seizure on the ground that it was the property of a diplomat.

MINISTERIAL CRISIS IN BELGIUM HAS PASSED

Brussels, Jan. 7. (By the A. P.)—The ministerial crisis is believed to have been at least temporarily averted by the decision of Premier Theunis to retain office. He had threatened to resign owing to the recent abolition of French as the language used in the University of Ghent and the substitution for it of the Flemish language.

There is a feeling that the present crisis in the relations of Belgium and Germany makes it imperative that the present government should remain in office to carry out the obligations assumed by Belgium at Paris. When Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Jaspar pledged their support to France on the question of reparations.

Lausanne Delegates are Not Dismayed

The Allied Members Still Are Hopeful That A Peace Treaty Will be Signed.

Lausanne, Jan. 7.—(By The A. P.)—Notwithstanding the disappointing collapse yesterday of the negotiations between the allied representatives and the Turks concerning special judicial privileges for foreigners in Turkey, the allied delegations are pushing forward the preparation of a peace treaty which they still are hoping may be signed at Lausanne.

When that treaty is presented to the Turks at some not far distant day, the hospitable folk of this comfortable Alpine town will learn whether Lausanne is to become a legend of peace or go down in history as spelling one of the most unfortunate and most untimely diplomatic failures in European history.

Everybody here engaged in the stupendous task of trying to reconcile the Orient and the Occident, with their intricate problems of race, religion, patriotism, national sensitiveness and ambitions, realizes the disastrous effects on Europe of a break at Lausanne after the collapse of the premiers' conference in Paris.

The Turks themselves looked very solemn tonight as they sat at dinner, sipping their coffee. Later Ismet Pasha sat in his accustomed seat in the Hotel Lounge, his slight figure almost swallowed up in a huge arm chair. Worn down by the responsibility of his work, nevertheless he smiled with amusement as a young Swiss maidens moved rhythmically past him, dancing the tango or the waltz. The questions asked on all sides were: "What really is at the back of his Oriental mind, which has fascinated all the allies?" "Does Turkey want peace or war?" Ismet Pasha, knowing the mental mood of his people for a generation of peace, barter or yield in the end?

RUSSIANS TRYING TO DISRUPT LAUSANNE CONFERENCE

Lausanne, Jan. 7.—(By the A. P.)—After a silence of many days the Russian delegation come very much into life tonight by officially menacing the Near East conference with a refusal to subscribe to any settlement of the problem of the straits unless the conference altered its attitude toward the soviet delegation.

M. Tchitcherin sent a communication to the three presidents of the conference, setting forth the astonishment at the straits settlement was being elaborated and would be sent to the Russians in due time. He was amazed, he said, that the Russians had not been permitted to participate in the framing of this project.

"A detailed examination of the various proposals touching on the Straits has been carried on without us, despite our multitudinous protests," said M. Tchitcherin, "and we have been practically eliminated. The delegation representing Russia and Ukraine now wishes to affirm that a final Straits project is present only at the conference without previous concession to all the powers it is doubtful if it will furnish the basis of an accord with Russia."

M. Tchitcherin's protest concluded: "The Russian delegation desires to emphasize that all Straits negotiations carried on outside the regular commissions aggravate the existing divergencies and lessen the possibility of a general accord. In bringing these points to the attention of the conference it frees itself from responsibility for the failure of the work of the Straits commission, which is certain unless the conference alters its attitude toward the Russian delegation."

CARDINAL O'CONNELL VOICES A WARNING TO HUMANITY

Boston, Jan. 7.—Under the leadership of great avarice, pride, conceit and stupid and false nationalism, which refuses to recognize the human brotherhood of all men and all nations, not only Russia but the whole world seems to be rushing to destruction, Cardinal O'Connell declared today before the Holy Name society of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

"If these false doctrines of communism and excessive and false socialism," he said, "have been the gospels held up to the people by their leaders, what wonder finally that they are working out the logical conclusion."

Cardinal O'Connell asserted that unless religion was in the hearts of the citizens of a nation that the laws meant nothing. "When religion goes," he said, "only one thing can follow logically—the bayonet."

CABMAN TO BE RELEASED ON $500,000 ROBBERY CHARGE

New York, Jan. 7.—Frank Barrett Carman, actor and dancer, under arrest in the robbery of $500,000 worth of jewelry from Mrs. Irene Schoellkopf, wife of C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, of Buffalo, after a New Year's party in Carman's apartment near Fifth avenue, will be released when he is arraigned in court tomorrow, police announced tonight.

The prosecutor would make application for dismissal of the charges against Carman, it was said, and on Tuesday or Wednesday Carman would be subpoenaed before the grand jury to give evidence which the authorities believed would lead to the indictment of three or four men alleged to be implicated in the robbery.

This action was regarded as bearing our assertions of Mrs. Schoellkopf that she considered Carman innocent and that although she had been subpoenaed to appear in court tomorrow she would not testify against him.

TWO MORE ARRESTS FOR LIQUOR MURDER IN YONKERS

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Two more men were arrested today as material witnesses in the murder of Stephen Porarino, a week ago, in a quarrel which followed the alleged delivery of whiskey in an army truck to a roadhouse here. Thirteen persons are now held in connection with the killing, two of them Salvatore and Vincent Castaldo, being charged with homicide.

The two arrested today were Charles Stush, who is said to have been wounded in the quarrel, and John Johnson, believed to be one of the men who rode on the army truck which delivered the liquor.

MEETING OF DEBT FUNDING COMMISSIONS BEGINS TODAY

They Are to Negotiate a Funding Arrangement for Great Britain's War Time Debt to the United States—Nothing More Than a Formal Exchange of Opinion is Expected at Opening Session—Countless Details Are to be Encountered Before Any Decision Can be Reached.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The American and British commissions named to negotiate a funding arrangement for Great Britain's wartime debt to the United States will meet together tomorrow morning for the first time in their efforts, as described by Governor Norman of the Bank of England, a British delegate, to "break the vicious cycle" of world debts. Each commission is entering the initial conference without having made a public pronouncement as to its views or intentions and there is little indication that tomorrow's meeting will carry the negotiations further than a formal exchange of opinion.

Members of the American commission are bound within the limits of the law which extends the privilege of funding the war obligations into securities of a maximum maturity of twenty years and establishes a minimum of 4 1-4 per cent. interest. It is accepted as obvious, in most official quarters, that the foreign delegation will ask for application of the extreme limit both as to the term and interest rate.

Countless details, however, are involved in any decision even as to those two points, treasury officials believe, and it may be assumed that even before chancellor Baldwin of the exchequer and Governor Norman the British commissioners make any formal suggestion as to the many issues they will attempt to establish their government's ultimate liability to take care of the obligations. It has been hinted in several ways that the British would seek to show to the satisfaction of the Americans just how much could be paid, and when it would be best to pay it, or in other words, how much money can be withdrawn from England and from Europe annually without adding to the economic disturbance of continental conditions.

Reports as to the probable suggestions by the British delegation for a funding settlement have been appearing daily since the foreign commission arrived and began the routine of courtesy calls on government officials. Through them all Mr. Baldwin and Governor Norman have maintained silence, and members of the American commission steadfastly have insisted they received no intimation as to proposals which the British government, through its envoys, may make.

Regardless of whether tentative offers have been or will be made tomorrow, many officials here are watching developments intently, declaring that the arrangement resulting from the conference is going to bear directly on world affairs. These officials point to the possible establishment of a precedent in future world debt funding settlements inasmuch as the country owing Great Britain also owes the United States. The British government it is believed, will not care to propose other terms for its funding than are presented by the United States because of the disadvantage it would face in its own fiscal operations.

Some members of the American commission have said that whether this government will or will not [illegible] world affairs to the extent it demand rigorous terms of the British. The belief has prevailed however, that the American commission will be magnanimous to the extent it is allowed by the foreign debt funding act and thus indirectly will lead a helping hand in solving the world problems founded on the "vicious cycle" of debts.

Governor Norman's expression to the effect that Washington appeared to be the best place to break the cycle is believed to indicate that he pins his hope for better world progress economically on the forthcoming conferences here rather than on an immediate solution of reparations questions. He said Europe had been "pecking away" at reparations problems without results and hoped for a new start in negotiating a funding arrangement here.

SAYS THE "DRY" SERVICE IS CORRUPT FROM TOP TO BOTTOM

Washington, Jan. 7.—Charges that the Anti-Saloon League has "bought" the Volstead act with congressional patronage and that the federal prohibition enforcement service "is corrupted from top to bottom by a set of depraved political officials appointed under the spoils system" are in a letter written by William D. Foulke, vice president of the National Civil Service Reform League, to S. E. Nicholson, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, made public today by Mr Foulke.

Mr. Nicholson, according to Mr. Foulke, recently declared that application of the civil service system to the prohibition enforcement service, established under the Volstead act, "would have been to jeopardize the passage of the enforcement bill" when it was before congress. In answer, Mr. Foulke contended:

"That means that you have bought the bill with congressional patronage and paid for it not with your own money, but far worse, with offices paid for out of taxes levied upon the people. I do not at all suppose you understand the immorality of that act, but in any reasonable system of ethics it was far more indefensible than opposing the civil service law."

Referring to the prohibition enforcement service, Mr. Foulke's letter said:

"The service is corrupted from top to bottom by a set of depraved political officials appointed under the spoils system which you promoted. Even those who seem anxious to enforce the law are so ignorant and inefficient that they make illegal searches and arrests in violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution as recently decided by one of our federal courts. I could go on for hours with the details, but why do so? President Harding himself announced in his message that the had become a national scandal and called upon the governors for help in that for which the national force, if decently administered, ought to be adequate."

Saturday afternoon Judge Frank H. Foss handed down a decision in favor of the plaintiff in the case of Dr. Herbert L. Switzer, veterinarian, against Peter and Anthony Turansky, the Jackson street furriers. It is alleged that last July Switzer brought three skins, one a cow skin and the other two, calf skins, to the Turansky brothers' shop, to be made into a lady's coat of three-quarter length. It was agreed at the time that the coat would be completed by early November. Later when the question of selecting lining came up the Switzers said that they were not satisfied with the stock carried by the Turanskys and decided to purchase the lining elsewhere. Things drifted along until December 4 when the lining was furnished from the Turansky stock and was cut the next day, when Switzer came in and ordered the work stopped, and demanded the skins which the Turansky brothers refused him, saying that they had a lien on the skins to the amount of $17 for work done on the skins and materials furnished.

Switzer secured the skins on a replevin writ and the case was heard last Saturday. The decisions of Justice of the Peace Foss was that the lien was not valid in that the coat was not completed at the time agreed upon.

BALTIC

The Misses Rose and Margaret Charron F. Fitzreault and H. Collins gave a sleigh party Friday night. On account of the late hour in starting the 26 merrymakers made Taftville their destination where some time was spent before the return trip. On the return trip two of the party disappeared. A trolley car, in passing, slowed up and the missing couple were found. The party had a good time and voted to have another at a later date if the snow still holds out.

On Wednesday Manager Collins of the Baltic Wanderers chartered a special car to carry the basketball fans to Norwich. The car left Baltic at 7 and the return trip was made about 11. The Wanderers lost to the Y. M. C. A., but the fans were well satisfied with their trip.

Miss Madge Withnell of New York was a visitor to Baltic over the week-end.

The St. Jean Baptiste society had a most successful whist Friday night, dancing being enjoyed after the whist.

Herb Smith's orchestra played at St. Jean's hall on Saturday to a merry crowd of dancers.

Alf Eagle of New York is spending a week's vacation with his parents on Hanover road.

The Baltic Athletic and Social club are holding a general meeting Wednesday for the election of officers. Raymond Love, the president, who has suffered a general breakdown, will sever his connection with the club.

Manager Collins has been asked where he took the name of Wanderers from. The name was taken from the Montreal Wanderers, hockey champions of the world for three years in succession. The club was made up of small sized men which the fans will notice is duplicated in the present Wanderer basketball team.

CASH REGISTERS IN WILLIMANTIC STORE RIFLED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Jan. 8—Burglars broke into the H. C. Murray Boston store during the early hours of Saturday morning and secured about $250 from over a dozen cash registers on the three floors of the building.

When janitor Sweet reported for duty about 7.30 o'clock Saturday morning, he found that the door on the west side of the building which leads off into the alleyway between the Murray block and the Alling block, was wide open. Mr. Sweet lost no time in notifying James P. Bath of the company, about the robbery, and then a call was sent to the local police department.

Officer McLean hastened to the scene and in company with Mr. Bath, conducted an investigation. They found that the burglar or burglars had climbed upon a scaffold between the Murray and the Chronicle blocks. The scaffold had been put up for use by electricians who are working at the Chronicle building. Upon reaching the second story of the Murray block the thieves had broken a pane of glass from one of the windows to allow room for the passing in of an arm and slipping back of the window catch after which the window proper was raised. The intruders then jumped from the window onto an unused stair landing and then walked across to a door leading to the second floor of the store.

It was found that no merchandise had been taken but that the dozen or more cash registers in the store had been rifled of their contents except the pennies. The total of about $250 taken had been left in the drawers for the purpose of making change during Saturday's business hours.

The police would not state whether they thought it to be the work of boys or men. A few years ago the Boston store was entered in a similar manner and it was found that the culprits were boys.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The first fire of the year in Danielson called out the department just before 9 o'clock Sunday morning. The blaze was at the Joseph Dragon house on Railroad street. A defective chimney is believed to have caused the fire, which spread rapidly and had gained very considerable headway before a stream of water was turned upon it. The roof of the structure was badly damaged by the fire and the efforts of the firemen to get at the seat of the trouble. After about an hour's work the fire was extinguished. Firemen had a bitter cold task while engaged in fighting the fire, for the temperature was only a few degrees above zero. The house is divided into two apartments, one occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dragon, the other by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leonard. The bulk of the damage was in the apartment occupied by the Leonard family. The loss, said to be covered by insurance, will amount to several hundred dollars.

Harold B. Atwood, who has been active in interesting sportsmen hereabouts in the organization of a hunting and fishing club has sent out letters to prospective members announcing that a meeting for organization purposes is to be held Tuesday evening of this week at the home of F. E. Cunneen, Broad streets. Mr. Atwood's letters point out that trap shooting is good sport and brings together many good fellows who are interested in shooting, hunting and game preservation. Such a club will be a means of many working together for better game and fish laws and for conservation of forests and streams.

Another of the old residents of Killingly departed this life Saturday morning when Thomas Hughes, 88, died at his home in Attawaugan. Mr. Hughes' death adds to the unusual number of persons of very advanced ages who have passed away in this town during the past few weeks. Mr. Hughes was a native of Ireland. He came to this country a young man and for the last 40 years had been a resident at Attawaugan, where he conducted a small farm. He leaves one daughter, Miss Mary Hughes, with whom he made his home. Mrs. Hughes died a number of years ago.

Motorists who are fully aware that they are wanted when they hear a shrill blast from police whistles in Danielson and do not stop in response to the warning are going to find themselves in serious difficulties. More or less loose talk is heard from some motorists as to their stopping if they care to or of running over officers who may happen to step out in a highway to signal them—but this is taken by the officers for exactly what it is—just cheap bluff, and the warning is given that those who do not stop when officers signal them will be hailed into court.

Officers do not sound their whistles at drivers unless there is cause for so doing. Usually, in the night season, it pertains to improperly lighted cars. The police here now have the number of one machine whose driver would not halt Saturday night, and he is going to have a chance to explain his performance to the court, where brag and bluster are discounted 100 per cent. and only facts get consideration. Suspended licenses will be recommended for drivers who disobey summons of officers to stop.

January has set out, it appears, to make that caterpillar who was supposed to forecast an early ending of severe weather look awfully foolish. For a real cold day Sunday won the red flannel chewing gum. The day mark did let up in its severity and at noon hour the temperature hovered around 10 degrees above zero. Some sage remarked back in the dark ages that it is a cold day when the wind freezes and without a doubt he had in mind such a day as Sunday when he made this now historic comment. Incidentally, the severe weather means an ice crop for next summer, if one can be consoled with that thought when battling to get a scuttle's worth of fuel.

The rotogravure section of a Hartford Sunday paper contained an excellent likeness of Rev. John F. Quinn, pastor of St. Gabriel's church at Windsor, this state. Father Quinn, whose parental home is in Danielson, recently observed the silver anniversary of his ordination and his picture appeared in a group of seven priests of the diocese of Hartford who recently have observed their silver anniversaries.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Call of Broad street have arranged to leave on January 12th for a motor trip to Florida. They will go out from Hartford with a personally conducted party that will wend its way south by easy stages in luxurious motor cars, stopping at points of interest en route. Mr. and Mrs. Call will be away until early spring.

A sanctuary choir of 30 boys assisted at the high mass at St. James' church on Sunday. This choir of little boys sang the preface and responses of the mass in such splendid manner as to reflect great credit upon those who have had their preparation in charge. This choir of boys was heard for the first time by the parishoners on Christmas day.

Mrs. Luella Wheatley and Mrs. C. D. Chase are to leave within a few days for St. Cloud, Fla., where they will be located for the remainder of the winter.

Moosup has been drawn on for supplies of hard coal during the past few days to help out Danielson, which is about broke, insofar as supplies of hard coal are concerned.

A. W. Bassett writes from Los Angeles, where he is engaged in the real estate business, that he is meeting with success and that his health is wonderfully improved as the result of a year's stay on the Pacific coast.

A basketball game that was to have been held in the town hall Saturday evening between the Connecticut Mills team and the Bristol Town team was cancelled.

East Killingly is letting it be known that it rightfully feels it should have consideration when further road building operations are undertaken either by the town or the state in Killingly. The hill leading to the upper village has cost thousands of dollars for repairs during the year, and more thousands will continue to be spent there in what can be considered as no more than temporary repairs until an improved state highway is built over the long climb.

Mrs. Annie Mowry of New London, formerly of Danielson, has been visiting with relatives in Danielson.

A station believed to be on some island in the Pacific ocean was picked up by Earle Bassett of Broad street while he was listening in on a radio receiving set at the week-end. This station was asking for noon time reports at 2 p. m.

Henry A. Leverson of Providence was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Sunday.

John B. Daigle, a patient in a Norwich hospital for several months, has been discharged and has returned to Putnam. For years Mr. Daigle has been employed in the construction department of the Putnam Light & Power Co. He has re-entered the employ of the company but in a different capacity. He is now a salesman for the company selling its products and broadening its field of service.

Mystery still surrounds who may be the new controlling interest in The Putnam Foundry and Machine Corp., of Putnam. A Mr. Cherry, of Boston, who first attracted attention by buying in big blocks of stock, has been acquiring more certificates and has more than enough shares to control the company. There has been no transfer of the stock on the books of the corporation as yet so the name of the real party in interest has not been disclosed. The company is operating as usual manufacturing its Putnam steam heaters. The annual meeting of the company is due this month but it is believed by some persons in interest that the meeting may be deferred for the present.

Raymond Pierce, son of First Selectman Clarence E. Pierce, who has been critically ill with pneumonia at the home of his parents on Putnam Heights, was reported Saturday morning as greatly improved although not out of danger.

Miss Mary Wheelock, Church street, is visiting in North Attleboro, Mass.

It is now expected that Louis Macdonald, the lumber jack who was so severely injured when a tree fell upon him that it was not thought he could recover, will get well. He is still a patient at the Day Kimball hospital.

H. T. Cambell of Cherryfield, Me., is to succeed former mayor and present postmaster, Archibald Macdonald as district lineman for the Western Union Telegraph company.

The building boom which began in Putnam in 1922 will continue this year. It is estimated that buildings erected and the erection of which was begun last year have a total valuation of $385,000. Two of the larger buildings erected earlier in the year were business blocks, one by A. J. Dery of North Grosvenordale on Providence street and the other by Louis Wolf and Sam Kaminsky on Main street. Both are now occupied. A later business block to be built and finished in which there remains but one store is the Rawley block on Front street vacant store. The Robitaille building, also on Front street was also completed during the last year. In the fall work was commenced and is still being continued on additions to St. Mary's school and to the Israel Putnam school. The First National bank is now in process of reconstruction and soon the Putnam Savings bank will begin the construction of a new banking home. Besides these business blocks there has been much building of homes during the year.

A new series of shares in the Putnam Building and Loan association is now on the market and already over one hundred shares have been taken. The association has afforded a means of a number of Putnam people owning their own homes. The investment to the share holder has returned 5 per cent. compound interest since the start and as all money is loaned on first mortgages the investment is absolutely safe. There is a steady inflow of applications for loans and the more money that comes in the better it is for Putnam as all of it is let out in home building or improvements to homes already constructed. The association affords a systematic means of saving as a dollar for each share owned has to be paid in each month. Money may be withdrawn at any time the same as in a savings bank.

Two civil cases have recently been returned to the clerk of the superior court. James Lucey of Pomfret, landlord of the Pomfret Manor inn, destroyed by fire a few weeks ago, is made defendant in an action in which the United Talking Machine company of Willimantic is the plaintiff. Wednesday evening, for the first time in local basketball history, a double header game will be played in Putnam when the Putnam High School quintet goes up against both Woodstock Academy and the Tourtellotte Memorial High school in succession. The local team must win both games to keep in the running for the championship of the Quinebaug Valley League. Putnam, however, is expected to win both games. The following Saturday the Putnam team will go to Southbridge for the first of two game scheduled with the Mary Wells High School of that town.

Plans are being perfected for the annual Junior prom of the Putnam High School, always an event of the school year, which is to be held in the hibh school the evening of January 19th. It is understood that some innovations are being arranged for this year's event.

The manufacturing industries upon which the mercantile business of Putnam depends start the new year with an encouraging outlook. While perhaps none are rushed with immediate orders all are running and most of the mills are running full time with here and there a mill running nights. Cotton and woolen fabrics ad silk thread are the chief products turned out by the mills of Putnam. For many years there were two shoe shops and a slipper factory in operation here. These are now a thing of the past and not a shoe has been manufactured in Putnam for a decade. Located as it is, Putnam offers excellent facilities for new industries and they would be welcomed. Rumors of manufacturers looking over the field are persistent from time to time but no present prospects of any new factory here are in evidence aside from the manufacturing concern that is to remove here from Rhode Island next fall to occupy a part of the Nightingale-Morse plant that was sold to the concern some months ago.

In the United States district court at Montpelier Vermont, next week Tuesday, the cases of Arthur Pepin and Wilfred Benoit, arrested some months ago for transporting intoxicating liquor, were disposed of upon payment of fines. Benoit formerly lived in Putnam but is now residing in Webster. Pepin resides in the city.

The record for the Putnam city court for 1922 was 90 arrests, of these 43 were for intoxication and 14 for violation of the liquor laws. Only 11 prisoners were committed to the county jail. During the year 173 men were lodged at the police station over night. Property valued at $3,385.50 was reported stolen and of this property valued at $2,755.61 was recovered by the officers of the police department. About the usual number of merchants forgot to lock their doors and 41 were found unlocked during the year by officers making their rounds.

WIDE-AWAKE POETRY

Song

I like to think, when stars prick out at dusk
To laugh and glimmer from the height of blue,
That they are laughing more than happily,
Beloved, over you.

I like to think, when winds without my door
Whisper a haunting melody that thrills,
They may have sung to you not long ago
Afar among the hills.

I like to think, when dawn flowers like a rose,
To mount the sky as swift as bird on wing,
At that same moment yet another day
For you is blossoming.

Thus each hour's miracles, by beauty wrought,
But bring us nearer, who have loved so long,
And my thoughts reach you across leagues of air
To touch you with a song.

—Elizabeth Scollard in New York Herald.

Our Captain's Call

Just once for each the White Ship touches port;
Though none behold the sails, nor sound is heard;
Yet while one waits,
Friend after friend goes silently aboard
The unseen ship, and onward sail toward
The Golden Gates

We trust the future in Thy hands, O Lord;
We who draw near unto this feast of Time,
Given for us
Kneel there, and pray, and take Thy Bread and Wine,
Find in Thy Sacrament the Love Divine
Upholding us.

The presence of our Saviour nearer seems;
And Heaven and earth to closer blend and shape
Our destiny.
Faith, love, deep peace, burn strong the while we wait
Our Captain's call to sail—or soon or late—
Across the sea.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Now that the holiday season and vacation are over and we have settled down again to the daily routine of life, we should all strive to make this year, 1923, better than last year. One way in which we can beat our record of last year is to take more interest in our work or, in the case of Wide-Awakes, in school studies.

Boys and girls should remember that school days come but once during life, and that they are soon over, often before we realize it. A number of you are now in your last year at grammar school, with graduation less than six months away. For some of you the arrival of June will mean the end of school while for others, it will mark the beginning of a high school education as preparatory to the college. To those of you whose school life will come to a close with graduation day, June means the beginning of life's struggle in the business world.

Whether you are planning to enter high school or whether circumstances are such that you must say goodbye to school life in June, study hard and do the best you can to get as high a mark as possible. You will not regret the extra time you put on your school studies when graduation day arrives.

What knowledge you can acquire in these last remaining weeks of the school year may be of untold aid in helping you to make a success of your future life. Start the New York right!

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES

The Christmas Entertainment

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about our Christmas entertainment which I enjoyed. The Learned school held its Christmas entertainment Friday evening in the church hall at Occum, which was filled with parents and friends of the children and the teachers. The exercises which opened at 7.15 o'clock were carried out with smoothness by the primary and higher grades of the school. Last of all was the Christmas tree and the present.

I hope all the Wide-Awakes have had as good a time as I did on Christmas day and at the entertainment.

LUCY DUGAS, Age 13
Versailles.

Had Pretty Xmas Tree

Dear Uncle Jed: About a week before Christmas my sister and I went out in the woods and got a nice Christmas tree. We decorated the tree and prepared for a visit from Santa.

I went to bed Christmas eve feeling as if I could not wait for the next morning.

But the next morning finally came and at dawn I crept downstairs and into the parlor.

"Oh! Wasn't I glad when I saw my presents? Strange packages, big and little, I saw. In great haste I opened them and found games, clothing and many other things. Santa Claus was surely generous this year.

I hope all the Wide-Awakes had a nice Christmas and I will close wishing you, Uncle Jed, and the Wide Awakes, a very happy New Year.

EUGENE HEALY, Age 9
South Windham.

Many Christmas Gifts

Dear Uncle Jed: First of all I want to wish you and all the Wide-Awakes a very happy New Year. I am going to tell you what I got for Christmas. I got five books, a pair of slippers from grandma, a lovely raccoon fur from my aunt and Uncle Cutler, also a string of silver beads, a work basket and a books from Aunt Alice, a stencil set from mama and papa, a box of candy and some modeling clay from Santa, a little beaded pocket book from my Sunday school teacher.

The names of the books I got are Marjorie's Vacation, Marjorie's New Friend, Ethel Norton's Holidays and Adventures of a Brownie, Mary Jane Down South. My brother Lewis got a velocipede from Aunt and Uncle Cutler, also many other things too numerous to name. I hope all the Wide-Awakes fared as well as I did.

HELEN TURNER GREENE, Age 10.
Plainfield.

Effie and the Mermaids.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell the Wide Awakes about Effie and the mermaids. Once Effie was playing on the beach. She dug holes for the water to run into, and built castles for the waves to wash away when the tide came in. Then she grew tired of her work and sat down and looked out to sea. "How I should like to sail out to the very middle of the sea and peep down to see what was in the bottom of it," she said. And directly she spoke she saw a boat coming toward the shore with ever so many sea gulls flying around it.

The boat came up to the shore and caught her, and before she knew it she found herself in a kingdom under the sea. It was a silvery city, but Effie was afraid. But after Effie got used to them she would play with all the mermaids. Effie wanted to go back home. Effie said: "I don't want to be a mermaid at all." So the sea gulls took Effie home in the boat, and ever after that she did not see the mermaids.

MANY INTERNATIONAL SPORT EVENTS SCHEDULED FOR 1923

New York, Jan. 7 (By the A. P.).—Promising to eclipse its predecessor in the keen calibre of competition, the year 1923, according to the present outlook, will witness an unusual array of international sporting events.

While fixtures in such fields of established rivalry as golf, tennis and yachting, both here and abroad, will hold even greater interest than before, other events of outstanding importance have been added to the program.

International track and field meets, one at Paris in May for college athletes, and another at Gothenburg, Sweden, in July, are expected to attract strong American teams, paving the way for the 1924 Olympics at the French capital. A combined Harvard and Yale track team plans to invade England for a dual contest with Oxford and Cambridge and, if dates do not conflict, the Americans are likely to participate in the Swedish championships.

Boxing.

Interest in international boxing has been aroused to a higher pitch than at any time since the Dempsey-Carpentier spectacle by a match arranged between Johnny Kilbane, American holder of the world's title, and Eugene Criqui, French wearer of the European crown, for the featherweight championship. It is planned to stage this event at the Polo Grounds, in New York, December day.

Tennis.

Not satisfied with the outcome of the contest for the world's lawn tennis title last year in which she was defeated by Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen of France, Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, American champion, [illegible] campaign abroad, starting with the tournaments in southern France in February. There she hopes to meet Mlle. French rival and prepare for another attempt to lift the international championship on grass courts at Wimbledon, England.

Interest in competition for the world's [illegible] championship is expected to [illegible] entries than 1922, when challenged for the trophy [illegible] of the contest into two parts—American and European—with the ultimate winners of each group playing for the right to meet the United States in the challenge round, is expected to increase interest and eliminate defaults such as have occurred in previous years.

Golf.

Traditional golf [illegible] between the United States and Great Britain will receive fresh impetus with the British mindful of setbacks they received in most of the important events of 1922, eager to retrieve the latter supremacy. A team of American amateurs probably will go abroad to defend the Walker cup, emblem of the team championship, while the American open champion, [illegible] announced his intention of attempting to lift the British open title. Walter Hagen, American holder of the Anglo-American golf title, and Jock Hutchison are other well known golfers in this blue ribbon event.

Swimming.

Several of America's crack young swimmers, including Gertrude Ederle and [illegible] Wainwright of New York, holders of many women's records, and John[illegible] Weissmuller, Chicago Star, intend to invade England and possibly the continent in several wild animal dashes early in the summer.

Yacht Racing.

[illegible] yacht racing competition also is [illegible] The Seawanhaka-Corinthian [illegible] Bay, N. Y., has challenged the [illegible] club of Scotland for the Seawanhaka cup, captured by a Scottish boat last year, while a team representing the Royal St. American cup yacht [illegible] in 1922 as the United States also [illegible] for the honor of defending the [illegible] cup.

[illegible] competition will be staged in the international sailing schooner trophy, which Canada won last year when the Bluenose vanquished the American boat, Henry Ford.

Other Sports.

Syracuse university's lacrosse team has [illegible] a trip to England in the spring, [illegible] Cornell, Columbia and other colleges [illegible] Walter Hoover of Duluth [illegible] has [illegible] captured the diamond championship, the world's amateur [illegible] championship is expected to be [illegible] the Thanksgiving [illegible].

NOT ALL VICTORIES GO TO THE BIG MEN

To what extent do height and weight contribute to the success of a heavyweight pugilist? The belief seems to [illegible] held by many patrons of boxing that a bigger a scrapper the more difficult the task of defeating him.

Fitzsimmons Notwithstanding

This axiom no doubt would be verified in all cases the good big man and the good little man were on an equal basis in all other respects. For example, if a 200-pound man who was matched with a 170-pound fighter equalled his lighter opponent in speed, hitting power, defensive skill and condition the weightier man would naturally win.

But the theory cannot be generally applied for the reason that so many large boxers who have been regarded as "good" men, have met defeat at the hands of smaller opponents who possessed in a greater degree the aggressive qualities that make for success.

A Few Examples

Billy Edwards, a clever boxer and ring general at 138 pounds, defeated a 200-pounder who was deficient in boxing skill and speed.

Joe Walcott vanquished clever boxers like Joe Choynski and Dan Creedon because of superior speed and hitting powers.

Fitzsimmons gave away pounds to nearly every opponent and yet won because of remarkable endurance, hitting powers and ring strategy.

During his prime he was beaten by only one man—Jeffries. The boilermaker scaled 220 pounds to 170 by the Cornishman and twice he got the upper hand on Fits. Jeff's victories over the freckled gladiator were not due to superior boxing skill or hitting powers. Jeff won solely through his ruggedness and iron jaw. There is some question as to the first bout between this pair having been contested on its merits.

An Exception to the Rule

In the second meeting Fitz crippled both hands pounding Jeff and then fell an easy victim to the big man. The case of Fitz and Jeff was an exception to the rule, for very few giants of the ring have attained lasting success.

Billy Muldoon insists that one inch more than 6 feet 1 inch and two pounds above 200 pounds are a handicap to any heavyweight. Muldoon claims that six feet in height and not more than 200 pounds in weight are the proportions for an ideal heavyweight.

He is convinced that a larged man is handicapped in many ways, especially in the matter of speed. John L. Sullivan in his prime conformed to the Muldoon specifications, and Corbet was a trifle below in the matter of weight, as he scaled about 184 pounds at his best.

Jack Johnson carried ten pounds of excess weight, while Tommy Burns weighed 180 pounds, but was deficient in height. He stood 5 feet 7 inches and had very short arms a decided handicap.

John C. Heenan was a six-footer weighing 190 pounds, and Jack Dempsey is practically the same size as the Benicia boy, who was the ablest bare knuckle fighter that ever held the American title.

Willard was regarded by many as a "good big man" at Toledo, but he was painly deficient in speed and hitting power as compared to Dempsey.

With the exception of Jeffries and Johnson all the legitimate heavyweight champions of America have been men of medium size. In bare knuckle days Morrissey, Goss, Allen, Heenan, Davis and Hyer were under the six-foot, 200-pound limit.

In England, Sayers, King, Mace and Mitchell were small men.

Nearly all the leading contenders for the American title (Langford, Maher, Sharkey, McCoy, Choynski and others) were men of medium height and weight.

New O'Baldwin, the Irish Giant; Freeman, another boxer, who towered well aboxe six feet and weighted an eighth of a ton, never made muchetitular progress.

Floyd Johnson is of the right size for a champion, and if he eventually proves that he possesses either essential qualities he may yet wear the heavyweight crown.

Harry Wills, who may battle Dempsey next summer is considerably above the correct size, and he will be handicapped in the matter of speed when he faces the champion.

Firpo, the South American champion, conforms to the Muldoon standard but is too far along in years to learn the science of the game. He is a terrific hitter but is weak in defense and in speed.

Carpentier possesses considerable skill, speed and hitting force, but is painfully lacking in powers of, resistance.

Willard is the last of the Mohegans so far as giant proportions are concerned and there is little prospect of the title passing to him or any other man standing more than six feet or weighing above 200 pounds.

BATTERY B FIVE TO PLAY CONN. MILLS TEAM

[illegible] five will resume their activities when they meet the fast Connecticut Mills of Danielson on the second game of the season. Jamelson has always been known to have fast basketball teams and the five players that will represent that town against the crack team are the exception [illegible] players as fast as can be found in this section of the state.

Manager Bob Pellerin has announced that he has secured George Allen of Red Bank, formerly of the Central M. Grays of Millord, Mass., a team that won the championship of Massachusetts for two seasons and of New England once. Bill Roddy, who usually plays very fast and clever games, and who starred for the fast Worcester team last year, will also report to the Armington of the Worcester team. He will jump center and no doubt will live up to the college's reputation of turning out clever performers. Hutson, a new man is a clever guard from the Wauregan town and has played but [illegible] a class with other athletes that represented the [illegible] Connecticut Mills team will consist of Allen and Roddy, forwards; Armington, center; Kenney and Hutson, guards.

Joe Belser has taken charge of the Battery team and guarantees that if the fans turn out in large number he will secure the best teams obtainable to oppose the local five. For the remaining games he will pursue the policy of having local teams play to develop basketball talent which he is sure the boys in the city do not lack, but which has not developed. Wednesday night will find the Battery B seconds playing a team picked from the M. C. A. team.

AMATEUR SHOOTERS TAKE FIRST STEP TO CONTROL SPORTS

New York, Jan. 7.—The amateur trapshooters of America yesterday made the first move toward assuming a unified control of the sport when [illegible] papers were drawn up for a national trapshooting association, the executive committee of the Trapshooting association [illegible] to replace the Amateur Trapshooting association, the executive governing body. The new organization will be known as the Amateur Trapshooting association of America and will be incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

The incorporators are George S. McCarthy of Newfield N. J., Ralph I. Scott, chairman of the trapshooting committee of the New York Athletic club, and Dr. George H. Martin, a prominent New York sportsman.

The American Trapshooting association, which has governed the sport for years, was sponsored by manufacturers of ammunition and trapshooting accessories. It was understood, however, that when an appropriate time arrived control was to pass into amateur hands.

JEWTRAW SETS NEW RECORD FOR 100 YARDS

Lake Placid, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Charles Jewtraw, of Lake Placid, skating in the amateur races here yesterday, broke the world's record for 100 yards by skating the distance in nine and two-fifths seconds. Jewtraw also equalled the world's record of nineteen seconds for the 220-yard event.

Eth records were made in open competition on a certified track with the required timers and other officials present.

The former recognized [illegible]-yard record of nine and three-fifths seconds was made by Morris Wood at Verona Lake, N. J., in 1903."

H.; Nov. 3, Holy Cross at Worcester; 10, Norwich at Northfield; 17, Middlebury; 24, Boston college at Boston; 29, Marquette at Milwaukee, Wis.

LENGLEN WINS SINGLES TITLE AT CANNES

Cannes, France, Jan. 7.—Suzanne Lenglen defeated Mrs. Satterthwaite of England in the finals of the women's singles of the Cannes lawn tennis tournament yesterday. She won in two sets, 6-4, 6-2, but against stubborn opposition such as she has seldom met. In the first set, indeed, with the English woman leading at four games to two, Mlle. Lenglen looked like a loser; her play had become ragged and she seemed to lack confidence and accuracy.

FOOTBALL OFFICIALS COMPLETE ORGANIZATION

New York, Jan. 7.—Fifty football officials of the east yesterday organized the American Football Officials Association and elected Walter R. Okeson of Lehigh, president; W. R. Crowell, of Swarthmore, vice president, and Ed Thorp, of De La Sale, secretary-treasurer.

It was voted to ask officials in other sections to form group organizations and then combine into one national body similar to the recently formed American Football Coaches Association.

Its aims were expressed in this resolution:

"To promote the welfare of the American college game football, its players and officials and encourage the spirit of fair play and sportsmanship, and to cooperate with the National Collegiate Athletic Association."

It was learned that the association intends to boycott colleges which officials allege attempt to threaten or coerce them in decisions and which do not the highest standards of sportsmanship. The officials also will take action against colleges which do not support their decisions.

The attempt to influence the football official with various threats, came to a head in 1921 and was the main subject of the annual report of E. K. Hall, the chairman of the rules committee of the National Intercollegiate Football Association.

RACE DRIVER KILLED WHEN CAR TURNS OVER

Houston, Tex., Jan. 7.—Earl Grey, 23 race driver of Flint, Michigan, was killed at the Gulf Coast Speedway this afternoon on the last lap of the second race. Grey had hit the inside fence in the previous lap, but continued to drive with a piece of the fence wedged between his left front wheel and the steering gear. As he tried to come out of the turn onto the home stretch in the last lap, the board caught his steering apparatus, causing him to turn over. He was caught under the car and crushed. He died instantly.

The state athletic commission, at their weekly meeting, reinstated Carl Tremaine, of Cleveland, who has been under suspension for some time, and he is now eligible to appear at any of the New York clubs. Tremaine is considered one of the most dangerous contenders for the bantam-weight title.

ATHLETIC UNION APPROVES 51 RECORDS MADE IN 1922

New York, Jan. 7.—The amateur athletic union, through Louis N. Goldsmith, chairman of the rules committee, yesterday approved fifty-one record-breaking performances, forty-seven in swimming and four in track and field, made last year. Thirty-three of these marks will go down as American records, while eighteen will be registered as note-worthy performances, a category including feats under conditions or over distances not recognized as standard.

All of these performances are in addition to about 2100 others in track and field and swimming to which official recognition was given by the A. A. U. at its annual meeting last November.

Weismuller Responsible

The predominance of swimming marks is due chiefly to the individual exploits of Johnny Weissmuller, of the Illinois Athletic club, one of the most sensational aquatic performers of all time. The Chicago star is credited in the new list with twenty-five American records, twenty-one at free style and four at back stroke swimming, five distances ranging from fifty to 500 yards bringing the total number of new marks he had established within the past year to forty-five. These do not include a long array of noteworthy performances, eight more of which are added to his string in the new compilation.

Weissmuller also helped to establish an American record for the 400-yard relay over a 20-yard course, the Illinois A. C. team, of which he was a member, setting a mark of 3 minutes, 42 3-5 seconds, at Chicago last March. The other swimmers of the quartet were Harry Hebner, Perry McGillivray Sessel and W. L. Wallen of the I. A. C. Weissmuller aided in a noteworthy performance for the 150-yard relay event over a short course, of 1 minute 16 seconds, also at Chicago.

Miss Bauer Has Three

Three American records and six noteworthy performances are credited to Miss Sybil Bauer, premier backstroke star of the Illinois A. C., at distances ranging from 50 to 400 yards.

Other noteworthy performances for men include two backstroke marks at 200 and 300 metres, accomplished by Harold Krueger, of Chicago, and a 440-yard [illegible] stroke [illegible] by Walter [illegible].

Two of the new American track and field records display new standards recognized last November.

Through a confusion in data submitted to the rules committee, the Penn State College [illegible] was credited [illegible] with a record of 7 minutes 41 4-5 seconds for the two-mile relay at a meet here February 1 1[illegible].

PRISON AND STATE FARM.

Because recommendations are made in the annual reports of those in charge of Connecticut institutions does not mean that the general assembly will of necessity comply with them. It, however, furnishes a basis for action and indicates the opinion of those closely identified with the conduct of the various state activities.

When, however, the directors of the state prison recommend to the governor that the women prisoners be removed from Wethersfield and sent to the state farm for women at Niantic, and that it be to that institution rather than state prison that women be sent henceforth when it becomes necessary to impose what is now a state prison sentence there is bound to be raised opposition from several angles.

It will in the first place involve an expense for the enlargement of the state farm for women that might not otherwise be required at this time.

It will likewise mean a discrimination between the male and female prisoners as to the character of the institution to which they are sent for offenses of similar character, the farm for women being regarded in the light of a reformatory rather than as a prison.

It will mean assembling under one roof the incorrigible young women and the hardened criminals, the putting into one institution of those tending to ways of vice and those who have committed capital offenses.

Just why there should be recommended special treatment for all women prisoners, who at the present time include six murderesses, on a farm and free from the odium of prison life and not the same kind of treatment for all the male prisoners at Wethersfield is something the general assembly will want to know about before it approves any such policy through new legislation. It is a one-sided piece of reform activity that isn't likely to get a supporting response from the people of the state who believe that there should be one law for all criminals of the state regardless of sex.

WHEN FRANCE MOVES.

France isn't so committed to the invasion of the Ruhr that it would not welcome an adjustment in keeping with its plans. Possibly there is left a loophole for some agreement that can be made this week, or before the 15th, which is the time France has fixed for action, by the statement from Paris to the effect that the French intend to move slowly in their independent action.

France has threatened the action which now seems imminent for a considerable period. It has maintained its right to follow this country under the terms of the Versailles treaty and in the mood which it has taken at this time it has the support of Belgium and Italy.

France is moved to action because Germany has not made good. It has not paid either in money or fuel and other things what are called for under the treaty or the subsequent agreements reached in the way of relieving the burden. In the belief that Germany is not making a sincere effort to do so the French can see no other way than to go into Germany and collect.

When the time comes for sending the troops forward they will be placed throughout the Ruhr valley, upon which is dependent great German enterprises, including the great Krupp industry. The Ruhr valley coal mines do not provide all the fuel for Germany but they are furnishing a large part of it, although if the reports are correct they are not providing enough, over and above what is being turned over to the allies to keep German plants in operation without the importation of coal.

The French can take over the German industries, but it remains to be seen whether they can do so and get as good results as the Germans are now doing.

When the French move into the Ruhr valley it will create a situation which there has been anxiety to avoid, or which it has believed ought to be adjusted in some way other than the use of force, if the future good of all concerned is going to be considered.

IN PORTO RICO.

Perhaps the best interests of all concerned would be served if the unofficial report of the coming resignation of E. Mont Reily, as governor of Porto Rico, proves true.

Without any question there are two sides to the situation that prevails in Porto Rico today. It is indeed probable that representations concerning the sentiment in opposition to the governor have been exaggerated. But whether there is a large or a small faction that is dissatisfied with his methods and his rule, it is apparent that his opponents do not intend to subside until they have accomplished their purpose. If that is to the detriment of Porto Rico it is to be regretted, and yet it doesn't appear but what some other than the present governor might be able to bring appeals and influence to bear in such a way as to clear up the entire difficulty and get the political situation in the island once more straightened out.

Even though it may be found in the last analysis that Governor Reily is actually right in the [illegible] and that [illegible] the majority of putting down the unrest. If it is a small faction that is opposed to him it is a noisy and determined one. If it is a large one it represents sentiment that cannot afford to be disregarded.

The aim of this country is to see that proper rule is provided in the island and it is important that a governor should be so constituted as to grasp the situation that exists and handle the conditions in a way that will inspire confidence in the islanders and accomplish desired results.

Governor Reily has succeeded in arousing opposition. He has had a stormy and at times perilous administration. This doesn't mean that he was wrong in his views but it is not improbable that another might be more successful in his methods and diplomacy.

THE NORWICH-WESTERLY TROLLEY.

Once again ground has been provided for a protest from North Stonington against the dismantling of the trolley line between Norwich and Westerly, with the exception of a short mileage on each end. The road has been operated intermittently for the past few years, being used in the summer time when for about four months it gets sufficient patronage to warrant operation, but for the remainder of the year it is a money loser because there is not enough who take advantage of its service to pay expenses even under a much curtailed schedule and one-man cars.

There was the time when more dependence was placed on this road than is done at the present time. That was when automobiles were less numerous, when there was no state maintained highway paralleling it, when there was no jitney line running in competition and when operating costs were not what they are today.

From time to time there has been reason for deploring the removal of this cross county trolley service, through towns which have no other service of the kind and which brought the cities at either end in close contact with a large area of surrounding territory.

It doesn't appear but what sincere efforts have been made to keep the line in operation, but like that portion of the East Lyme road which has been dropped there has not been the patronage that justifies continued operation. This would indicate that there was not sufficient public demand, either for a frequent schedule or one that called for but a few cars a day. Those that have been in a position to encourage the continuance of the road are probably included among those who have given their support to other means of transportation.

Under such conditions the outlook cannot appear good, and yet it is to be realized that if anything is to be done to prevent the dismantling of the line, now that abandonment has been decided upon, it must come soon. It is far preferable to keep what exists than to dwell in hopes that others would build over such a roadbed. There have been instances where towns have subsidized transportation lines for the sake of getting trolley service.

ANTI-LYNCH LAW NEEDED.

It is an appalling state of affairs which is shown in the reports from Rosewood, Fla., where several lives have already been sacrificed in the search for a colored man accused of a crime without having as yet secured the man. The search quickly developed a race riot, but no doubt to the belief that the accused would be tried by lynch law and not by a court of justice. It caused resistance that resulted in the shooting of whites as well as blacks, and even those who have only been charged with aiding in the hiding of the accused have been shot to death without the semblance of a trial.

The conditions existing at Rosewood are no different than those which have prevailed at Mer Rouge, La., and at which the country is gasping because of the revelations that are being made.

Regardless of the state where they come to light there is no question but what they have prevailed too long, and the longer they are tolerated the worse they get. Instead of putting an end to the lawbreaking by the blacks the mob rule only serves to intensify the feeling and to make certain of the colored people more like savages and their enemies as barbarous as the heathen.

The frightful affairs in Florida or Louisiana, which are only for the moment taking the spotlight off of certain other equally lawless sections of the south, serve as most convincing reasons why there should be established a federal law that will gradually put an end to such conditions. It cannot be put into action any too soon. Further delay will only serve to give license to a situation which a civilized country never should tolerate.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Cold tea rubbed on varnished furniture will give it a brilliant polish.

Save old hot-water bags and cut into mats for use under flower pots. They save the table.

Soak all old papers well in water fold them into rolls, dry and you have excellent kindling for the fire.

To remove ink stains while fresh, sprinkle with salt and rub with it cut lemon. Rinse out the lemon juice and wash at once.

If hot stewed fruit is to be served in a glass dish, place the dish on a damp cloth and it will not crack when the fruit is poured into it.

When scouring knives and forks use a cork instead of a cloth, and you will be delighted to see how easily they clean.

White twine knitted or crocheted in squares makes fine dishcloths. Two or three of these sewed together make good pads to put under hot dishes.

Soup that is being thickened with oatmeal or pea flour must be stirred continually while being brought to a boiling point and not left afterward or it will burn.

Smoke marks on ceilings will yield to an application of starch and water. Make a fairly thick paste and spread this over the smoked places with a clean cloth. Then leave until dry. Brush off with a soft brush and the marks will have disappeared.

If the white of an egg is needed and not the yolk, make a little hole at one end of the egg and another at the side to let in the air; then allow the white to come through the end hole. The yolk may be retained fresh in the shell for a couple of days.

After use, a sponge should be squeezed as dry as possible and then hung up by a string in the air to dry. When used with soap it should be squeezed in warm water and left to lie for a few minutes in cold water. Soap should never be left in sponges, and they should not be wrung, as this breaks the fibres and injures the elasticity.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A frivolous-looking powder puff of ribbon and flower is mounted on a long stick so that the back of the neck and shoulders can be easily reached.

Don't get fat. Layers of flesh will keep you from exercising and will cover up any remaining traces of youth or grace. A girl of 17 with a fat figure does not look young.

A good soap gives a good lather, except when the water is particularly hard, in which case of course a special variety adapted to hard water must be used. A soap with a delicate perfume is of course delightful to use, but it is not a bit more cleansing than one with only its own clean odor.

The newest combs presuppose a fairly elaborate coiffure with the hair done high at the back of the head. The combs do not stand out at an angle, but curve to the shape of the head and extend forward and upward. Instead of being jeweled they frequently are very long, slender sticks of enamel in extraordinarily vivid shades.

VALUE OF FRUITS

According to scientific classification fruits are laxative, diuretic and refrigerant.

The nutritive value of any fruit depends chiefly upon the starches and sugar which it contains.

Dates, plantains, bananas, prunes, figs and grapes contain the most sugar and starch and therefore are the most nutritious foods.

Cherries, apples, currants, strawberries and grapes contain considerable vegetable acid, making them valuable as blood purifiers. Lemons are beneficial in gout and rheumatism.

MILLINERY NOTES

There appears to be a strong feeling for piquant little sport hats of suede in bright colors.

Velvet is worked in all sorts of extraordinary ways in our hats, shirred, tucked, folded, smocked and all those "eatable" browns—chocolate, coffee, caramel, gingerbread—are chosen.

It is extremely smart to have one's hat exactly match one's furs: a mink coat, the fur worked in horizontal bands, was seen recently with a hat of matching velvet, the brim made of ribbons twisted about wires in an open-work effect.

SMART HAT BAND

For the little girl's dress that needs brightening, as well as for the hat band that is to match the dress, Roman-striped and Bayadere ribbons from half inch to three inches wide are exceedingly adaptable. They are made with simple tailored bows, with one or two ends.

FOR A SMALL GIRL

BANDEAU OF RIBBON

If you want to make a simple bandeau, take metallic or soft messaline ribbon and twist it as you would a chain-stitch until a bandeau of the required length is done. This may be finished at each end with ribbon flowers.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Veils are in greater demand than they have been for several seasons.

Brown stockings, in the middle shades such as caramel and cocoa, are in good style for cold weather wear.

In a gown of black rep, a long godel of white broadcloth is held in place by an ornament of ivory and tortoiseshell.

Rosettes of ermine, caracul and moleskin appear as decoration on several hats of smart and becoming lines.

Necklines have a great interest and variety. Many of the smartest gowns have completely gotten away from the bateau neck.

Fashion ordains that a velvet dress shall be in every feminine wardrobe, and a model of black velvet is remarkably good value.

Sapphire blue, green of an intense and brilliant shade, and deep rose are colors much in evidence in every display of velvet evening gowns.

Chinchilla wraps are out in impressive numbers. If the entire wrap is too much of an investment, the collars and cuffs will be made from it. These, of course, lend much individuality to [illegible] effect.

A great many "flannel rag" called have been worn lately. These are generally in large plaid with fringe around the bottom. They fit the shoulders closely, and flare at the hem.

Evening gowns were the first to show the new dignity which now pervades all our fashions. They began being stately and gorgeous more than a year ago. A gown of ruby velvet illustrates a very lightly swathed underdress, reveals all the lines of the body, and has a Greek drapery, one-sided and placed over this foundation.

The colored evening gowns far outnumber the black, but, in many houses, one finds black models brightened with silver, gold, steel embroideries, or touches of bright color. A well-known designer has a series of somber-tone evening gowns, dead leaf brown or grays, which give a new note in a world used to black, white or vivid color at night.

WHOLESOME FOOD

Bread cut or torn into small pieces and heated in a slow oven until thoroughly dried and delicately browned is good food for children. The warming oven of a coal stove is about hot enough for this purpose. In the case of gas ovens it is often difficult to get the gas low enough without having the door open a little way.

USEFUL STRAINER

A useful strainer which comes in enameled ware is in one or two-quart sizes and has a long handle. The perforations are situated in small circles all at intervals over the strainer, instead of being just at the bottom. This arrangement makes it particularly good for soups, jams, jellies and fruit juices. It also makes an excellent salad dryer. Washed lettuce, well shaken, in this strainer easily emerges as dry as if it had been pressed in a cloth.

LACE IS IMPORTANT

Lace is increasingly important in the spring dress world. Ecru would seem to be the favored shade and dead white is left to the more tailored frock. Real lace is coming to be the accepted thing with the manufacturer, and he insists that the finest bit boast of reality before it can be part of the trimming in his collection.

The deep collar has superseded the bertha and the diagonal collar is still holding its own. Irish, Venetian and some Spanish lace is consistently developed in the spring frock in silk and wool. A tailored frock of Paulette and Poiret twill used a bunch of ecru lace at the throat and relieved the intensity of the tailored effect.

Frills of lace at the wrist, deep net cuffs banded with Irish or filet are the accepted think in the afternoon and the street frock. There is demand for fine nets, resembling Point d'Esprit, for this puff trimming. Tiny ruchings of Valenciennes lace and fine net are used in many of the three-piece costume suits to edge the slip-on jackets.

BOLSTER COLLARS NEW

Some of the collars on the winter coats seen today are enormous, resembling satin and velvet bolsters twined about the neck. One such coat is of brocaded blue and gold with a black velvet bodice. The collar, a veritable squashy cushion rising to the ears, is of black velvet also.

COLORED LACE VOGUE

The vogue for colored laces is persistent. Sometimes they are in Chinese green, sometimes in some of the warm brown shades, sometimes in turquoise blue or peach.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Always finish off the rinsing process of stockings by soaking for a few minutes in clean cold water.

Iron handkerchiefs when wet and they will have a slight gloss and keep clean longer.

To clean the neck of a silk dress which has become greasy, try rubbing dry magnesia over it with a piece of flannel.

A few drops of ammonia added to the water when washing flannel and woolen garments will make them soft and help to keep them a good color.

Blouses or garments which have lost their original brightness or color may be readily made perfectly white by boiling for twenty minutes in water to which has been added cream of tartar, one teaspoon to a pail of water.

When in a hurry to starch a few pieces and the starch box is empty, use corn starch, taking the same quantity as of laundry starch. The result will be the same, the only difference is that corn starch is a little more expensive.

RIBBON IN VOGUE

Pipings of ribbon in one or two tones is a favored form of decoration.

On chiffon and soft evening gowns, girdles of narrow velvet, soft satin or metallic ribbon combined with little French flowers at the top of the streamers, which fall in profusion on each side, or from a large corsage on one side of the front, have taken the fancy of the debutante.

NOVEL IDEA

When bottles of perfume, jars of grape juice or homemade preserves are to be sent as gifts dress the bottles in crepe paper to represent Quaker ladies in poke bonnets, pig-tailed Chinamen, infants in long clothes, hoop-skirted colonial dames, Santa Clauses and other character costumes. The arms may be made of wired rolls of crepe paper.

SPOTS ON WALLPAPER

If you wish to remove an ugly grease spot from wallpaper make a paste of corn starch and water and spread over the spot. When dry brush off and the stain will be gone.

STAINS FROM SHOES

To remove stains from tan shoes apply gasoline with a soft rag, rubbing well. Let that dry, then rub with a piece of flannel. Not only does this clean the shoes, but shines them as well and keeps them looking new.

SHADE WITH PRISMS

Few could resist the old-time charm of a candlestick of mahogany with a tall shade of etched crystal. Several have long crystal prisms.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Cleveland, Ohio, has two women Methodist ministers.

Mrs. Nora Holter, employed in the Federal Passport Bureau in Chicago speaks fluently 16 languages and is able to read several others.

In some parts of Holland a birth is announced by fastening a silk pin cushion on the door. If the pin cushion is red, the baby is a boy; if white, a girl.

Mrs. N. T. Boedker, of Berkeley, Cal., helps immigrant women earn money by means of their native handiwork and teaches them lessons of citizenship.

TO PREPARE LEMONS

If you will take the pains to warm lemons in the oven before squeezing them you will get twice as much juice from them.

TO STOP THE SQUEAK

You will find that if vaseline is heated a little and rubbed on doors, chairs, beds or hinges that squeak, they will at once become noiseless.

RECIPES

Pineapple Cream—Soak three tablespoons of granulated gelatin in half a cup of cold water, heat the contents of a can of pineapple, add half a cup of sugar, a tablespoon of lemon juice and mix with the gelatin. Stir until the gelatin is dissolved thoroughly, then set the mixture away to harden. When it begins to harden, stir two cupfuls of whipped cream into it and set away to get cold before serving.

Compote of Prunes—Stew half a pound of prunes with three tablespoons of sugar and one cupful of water until tender, then remove the stones. Place the prunes in a glass dish. Cook the syrup for a few minutes, then pour it over the prunes. When cold, spread over with whipped cream.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Whitewashes Arbuckle.

Mr. Editor: There seems to be a great furore about Arbuckle's return to the movies. As I understand from what I read, Fatty gave a party and they all got gloriously drunk and one of the party being helpless, drunk, fell and ruptured one of her organs and died and on account of Fatty furnishing the rum he is to be condemned to oblivion forever by a few old cranks that like to go to the pictures and see a hugging match or some man's wife run off with the other fellow and dream dreams of their ideals. Mary Pickford and our Charlie Chaplin and a few more stars that have been divorced and remarried a half dozen times more or less. If every one that has rum parties was called to account it would keep us moral people quite busy trying to steer clear of them so as not to be contaminated.

Fatty had a rum party all right, but his guests were not obliged to drink his rum, but being a very moral company outside of Fatty, and the rum being paid for by him they thought it would be a great opportunity to fill up at his expense and accordingly proceeded to do so.

East Side and Anti-Fatty Arbuckle and the rest will find a whole lot to look after in the way of rum parties and immorality without going to California.

Some Credit Due Two Canterbury Boys

Mr. Editor: Webster and Lorad Wainwright, grandsons of Thad Wilson, were given a small pig each to raise during his absence the past summer. On Mr. Wilson's return in November the pigs were killed, the two weighing 620 pounds. That is not so bad for boys aged 11 and 8 years. Mr. Wilson once owned pure bred Yorkshires, having as many as 65 hogs on his farm at one time. His profession called him from home so much he gave up the business.

CANTERBURY.

Canterbury, Jan. 5, 1923.

The Norwich-Westerly Trolley.

Mr. Editor: The voice of lamentation is heard on every hand. "It is too bad." "It is a shame." "It ought not to be so" and similar expressions are constantly being heard. These relate to the discontinuance of the Norwich and Westerly trolley service, a discontinuance which purports to be permanent. If the road pays in summer why not run it in summer, even if it is not operated in winter? Can't somebody, somewhere, somehow, do something? The automobile road is a fine thing, for which everybody is thankful, but it is not everything. It is now mid-forenoon before one can get away from North Stonington village, eastward bound, by public conveyance.

In some sections trolley tracks have been taken up, only to be put down again. Wait and see is a motto we suggest. Spare receiver, spare that track, is our earnest plea. While there is a track there is hope.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

To have an income of $1,000,000 a month and to live in one of the finest mansions in New York city surrounded by pictures and other art objects of priceless value—this is the lot of William A. Clark, a one-time farmer boy who became a multi-millionaire mine owner and a member of the United States senate, and who today enters upon his eighty-fifth year. Born on a farm near Connellsville, Pa., and educated in the country schools of Iowa, to which state his father had removed, young Clark abandoned a prospective career as a lawyer and with money earned in school teaching joined a party of gold-seekers bound for the far west. After several years of hard work and many vicissitudes he decided to abandon the mines as a claim worker and go into mercantile business. Selling provisions to the mining camps proved profitable and in the course of time Clark became a banker in Montana as well as a general merchant. Fortunate investments in mines brought him almost fabulous wealth and soon he became one of the most influential men in the new state. He entered politics, was sent to the United States senate, and, after his retirement from public life built a palatial residence in New York in which to spend his declining years.

Wives of Famous Men

Terentia, Wife of Cicero.

Cicero, the great Roman orator, politician and historian, married and divorced two wives before he had done with matrimony. He married the first time when he was about 30 and just attaining prominence as a public speaker.

Terentia, Cicero's first wife, came of a wealthy family, and brought with her into the household a large dowry in cash and jewels besides some houses that she owned in Rome. It would be unfair to say that Cicero married her for this reason alone. Money was, of course, always a great advantage to a man starting upon a political career, and not only was Cicero impecunious, but politics in Rome was a very expensive pursuit. It is more than likely that Cicero took this into consideration when he wooed Terentia. But there is no doubt, on the other hand, that when he married her he loved her sincerely. In his letters during the early part of their wedded life we find frequent proof of his affection.

But as the years rolled by and fortune of his own making began to smile on him, his letters from distant countries became briefer and less loverlike, until finally they dwindled to short notes.

As a housekeeper Terentia was irreproachable, but according to reliable sources she had a mean, disagreeable disposition that made it hard to live peaceable with her. True, she never quarreled with Cicero, but she made things no less unpleasant with him by bickering with her sister-in-law and her brother-in-law, who lived with her. As a result she had very little influence over her husband except that of a determined, obstinate woman over an irresolute man, which, after all, amounts to very little. It is noteworthy that Cicero never mentioned his wife's name in any of his many writings.

Stories That Recall Others

Easily Explained.

Henry's father came in from the chicken yard with the thermometer only a little above zero and remarked that for some undecountable reason the hens were laying better in the cold weather.

"That's easy to understand," volunteered Henry, age nine. "The hens have to stay in their nests now to keep warm and I s'pose they think while they're on the nest they might as well lay an egg."

Child's Faith Not Misplaced.

Shortly before Christmas a large concern received what to all outside appearand was a reply to some matter of business in one of the company's stamped, self addressed envelopes.

Within the envelope was a child's letter to Santa Claus. It was apparently written with the help of an elder and called for a remembrance at Christmastide. It was signed by the youngster's name, and in response a book was sent.

Recently the company received a letter inquiring how the book came to be sent, inasmuch as the boy's father was quite certain none had been ordered.

Correspondence brought out that the child, four years old, had seen the envelope lying on the table and placed his letter to Santa Claus in it, and somehow, the letter got on its way. It appealed to the official of the company who received it, and he responded with the book. As it turned out the gift arrived at a time when the child was under the care of a doctor and nurse. But the whole situation had been improved appreciably by the realization of the child's dream of a response from the good St. Nicholas.

CHILD TRAINING

Co-operation in Child Training.

By Helen Gregg Green.

I was calling at a friend's house the other evening and witnessed a rather hectic scene between a headstrong four-year-old and a determined father.

The father punished the child for disobedience. Immediately Micky rushed sobbing to Mother Patsy. He snuggled his head against her shoulder. She patted and comforted.

"Did Daddy aboose my baby?"

Of course Micky understood that Mother Patsy did not approve of father's punishment. Most certainly the good effect was lost. Micky's thoughts strung together probably ran something like this:

"I don't have to mind my daddy. What if he does punish me? It's most worf it if Mother Patsy pets me like this."

The child had defied and disobeyed his father. The determined words and punishment were merited. Then the wise thing for Mother Patsy to have done was to co-operate with father. Instead of that, she made Micky feel that daddy, instead of himself, was in the wrong. Parents should understand that if a child is to be properly disciplined there must be co-operation.

A youngster can sense very quickly if there is dissension or lack of harmony between parents. A young mother recently confided to me:

"All Jim's and my quarels have been because of Son."

That is certainly most unfortunate. Worse yet, if the child knows that mother and daddy do not agree upon the subject of discipline.

If the father tells Son he must stay at home every night for a week for a misdemanor, and Son hears mother remark: "That's a perfectly silly thing, Father. Let him go out and play with the other boys." What will the child think? He will surely decide that one parent must be greatly at fault. And the influence of both will be weakened.

Most children in homes where there is the proper co-operation think that mother's and father's judgment and ways are almost infallible. And that is as it should be. They should have the greatest respect for the wishes and opinions of their parents.

There are, of course, a great number of little mistakes made by children that parents should overlook, in order not to be constantly nagging or harping. But when either mother or father does take charge of the discipline, the other should at least seem to be in complete accord. If there is any dissension, do not let the child sense it. First, last and always, there must be co-operation!

FUNERALS.

Mrs. James Gordon.

Funeral services for Mrs. James Gordon who died in Providence, were held Saturday afternoon from the funeral parlors of C. A. Gager, a large number of relatives and friends attending. Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., conducted the service assisted by the Household of Ruth, an auxiliary of the Odd Fellows. Mrs. Bertha Lewis and Mrs. Grace Vera rendered several solos. Burial was in Yantic cemetery where Rev. Mr. Pitt read a committal service. Friends acted as bearers.

Discovered Fire in Early Morning.

Happening to arise about 3.30 Saturday morning, Mrs. Margaret Day, who occupies an upper tenement at 265 Franklin street, smelled smoke and it was found that there was a fire in a clothespress downstairs. She shut the door of the closet to stop any draft and sent in a call for the firemen, who used six gallons of chemical in extinguishing the blaze.

The fire had a start that might have resulted in a bad loss and possible suffocation for some in the house at that hour of the morning if it had not been discovered when it was.

OBITUARY.

William H. Prothero.

One of the foremost citizens of Norwich passed away at 10.10 a. m. Sunday at which time the exemplary life of William H. Prothero came to a close at his home at 51 Greene avenue.

Mr. Prothero until about 10 days ago had been staying at his summer home at Pine Grove, Niantic, but shortly after suffering a shock was brought to his home in Norwich where his strength gradually failed until the end.

He was born in Worcestershire, England, June 26, 1846, the son of Henry and Mary Prothero. His early education was received in England where he mastered the trade of tea and coffee testing. He was united in marriage on April 24, 1866, to Miss Louisa Hiscutt and immediately sailed for the United States, settling in Hartford, where he became a stationary engineer. He remained in Hartford for 15 years and then moved to New Haven, then to Norwich in 1888, where he spent the remainder of his life.

While in Hartford he organized the first boys' choir in Christ church in that city as well as being connected with many theatrical ventures being one of the pioneers in producing Gilbert and Sullivan's famous opera, "Pinafore," with the original Sherlock as "Dick Dead Eye." The famous H. C. Barnabee of "Robin Hood" was also a performer connected with one of Mr. Prothero's enterprises.

Mr. Prothero represented the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Norwich for many years but of late had been treasurer and one of the directors of the New London County Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and has covered practically every town and village in Connecticut as inspector of risks for his company.

He was also at one time secretary of the Norwich Gentlemen's Driving club, and owned and drove several well known horses in those days.

After coming to Norwich, Mr. Prothero organized the first boys' choir in Norwich at Christ Episcopal church, his sons, Charles and Frederick being members of the original choir.

Over thirty years ago he built his own home at 51 Greene avenue and with the exception of summers spent his time there.

He was a man who had travelled widely. Believing in seeing his own country first, he had attended every big exposition held in America and had crossed the ocean six times on touring trips.

Mr. Prothero celebrated his golden wedding anniversary on April 24, 1916, at his home on Greene avenue and four years ago his wife, Elizabeth Rosenthal Prothero, survived with the following children of the first union, Mrs. J. A. Newman of West Hartford, Charles E. Prothero of Indian Orchard, Mass., and Frederick G. Prothero of Norwich, two sisters, Mrs. Arnold Nixon of England and Mrs. William Schriener of Brooklyn, N. Y. There are also nine grandchildren. Two sons, William H. Prothero, Jr. died in Spokane, Wash., in 1916, and John Prothero in this city in 1917.

Mr. Prothero was not a member of any fraternal organizations. He was a man who loved his home and was an ideal husband and companions to his children whom he always wanted near him. A believer in charity he gave cheerfully to many a cause always signing himself "Friend." In his death his family has lost a loved one, his company an efficient and trusted member, and the community a loved and respected citizen. In their days of sorrow his family has the sympathy of an understanding community.

SALEM WOODCHOPPER SHOOTS MAN IN LONELY SHACK SATURDAY NIGHT

Charles Wilbur Walks 2 1-2 Miles Through Snow Sunday Morning to Tell of Killing Frank Early—Stayed in Shack With Body Overnight—Says Victim Refused to Leave Place and Attacked Him With Axe Handle Before He Used Shotgun.

"I've killed a man and want the body taken away," was the startling announcement Charles Wilbur, 55, made as he arrived at 8 o'clock Sunday morning at the home of Grand Juror Ernest L. Spencer of Salem.

Spencer knew that Wilbur lived alone 2½ miles away in a lonely shack on the West road and he could scarcely credit what he heard, especially as it had been common talk in the town that Wilbur had been talking rather strangely of late.

But Spencer immediately accompanied Wilbur back to the shack and found what the man had said was a fact.

Stretched out on a bed in an upper room of the double-deck shack was the dead body of Frank Early, 35, a sawmill employe, who lives in East Haddam. Part of the right side of his face was shot away. Death must have been instantaneous.

Wilbur, who is a wood chopper, who has lived in Salem for many years and has always been known, as law abiding, although perhaps not of high mentality, told the story of the tragedy to Dr. Cyrus A. Pendleton of Colchester, who was summoned there as he is the medical examiner for the town.

According to the medical examiner, Wilbur said that Early came to the shack Saturday night and upon entering the place went into the upper room and took possession of a bed there. In the lower room is a couch. About 9 o'clock Wilbur said he ordered Early to leave the place, but the man made no move to go. To enforce his orders, Wilbur said he pointed his gun at Early, who hit him with an axe handle and the gun was discharged.

Dr. Pendleton found that the charge had hit Early in the right eye and he had fallen backwards on the bed. When the medical examiner saw him, he lay apparently as he had fallen, with his hands folded across his chest. The medical examiner gave permission for the body to be removed to the home of Early's mother in Foxtown, below Hayward's Lake, in the town of East Haddam. He was unmarried.

Wilbur spent the night in the house and in the morning made his trip to the grand juror's where he asked to have the body taken away and the authorities notified. Early was said to have the reputation of being a hard drinker and an empty bottle, which apparently had contained liquor, was found in the Wilbur shack.

Coroner J. J. Desmond of this city left here about noon in his automobile with Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton to make an investigation and arrest Wilbur. The coroner was driving his machine which got stuck in a snow drift within about 6 miles of Wilbur's shack and had to be hauled out by a farmer's team. This decided the coroner to give up the attempt to reach the woodchopper's shack Sunday and he returned home reaching here about 5 o'clock and having gone around by New London both ways in his attempt to get into the remote section of Salem where Wilbur lives.

Arrangements were made to have Wilbur kept under surveillance over night and the coroner and the deputy sheriff will make another attempt to get out there early this (Monday) morning.

COAL REGULATIONS ARE CONTINUING IN FORCE

There being no improvement in the fuel situation the restrictions imposed on deliveries of all domestic sizes of anthracite imposed last November are now still further extended and enlarged.

The order has been extended every month to month since it was originally put into force until otherwise ordered.

This means that domestic consumers are the only ones who will be permitted to have deliveries of anthracite coal and the latter limited to one ton at one time.

All public buildings and apartment houses and stores will be allowed to continue the use of bituminous coal.

The situation is said to be getting more acute and the fuel administrator has come of such importance that State Administrator Russell has called a meeting of local fuel administrators to meet in Hartford Monday to consider whether to bring the fuel conservation stature with the idea of having certain legislation enacted to provide further protection to Connecticut homes and to prevent inconvenience to the public.

The recent storm has shown how handicapped transportation and the public should co-operate in every way with the fuel authorities so that no one shall actually suffer before the worst is through.

MANSFIELD WOMAN TO SEEK AVERAGE ATTENDANCE GRANT

The reopening of the average attendance grant issue in the present session of the legislature was assured Saturday when it was stated in Hartford by Representative Annie E. Vinton, of Mansfield, that she will introduce a bill on the subject unless one is offered from some other source. Nearly $4,000,000 would be required to pay all towns the allotment to which they would be made eligible under the proposed legislation.

The State Board of Education, while in sympathy with the proposed legislation, will offer no bill of its own for the statement of the average attendance grant and has been counting on the strong sentiment to assure for the revival of the system to make the introduction of a bill by a member of no importance.

SPOKE ON "CHAINS" AT Y. M. C. A. SUNDAY MEETING

Notwithstanding the very cold weather, there was a good attendance at the weekly rally for men at the Young Men's Christian Association Sunday afternoon. The audience greatly enjoyed the fine music by Swahn's orchestra in several selections at the opening and between the talks. Popular hymns were used and there was scripture reading and prayer. Four reels of moving pictures were shown, including the following: Glaciers, Alaskan Wilderness, Trip to Leeward Islands and Glimpses of New Zealand. These were interesting and instructive and were much enjoyed by the men present. Between the reels General Secretary Edwin Hall delivered a brief address on the theme of "Chains." The speaker among other things said: "I thought that we might think together of some of the chains we use and their uses: there is the large chain used for the anchor of an ocean ship and then we have the short chain to fasten various dogs: the snow chain used on the wheels of the auto, and the watch chain of gold chain that is holding so many in its embrace, but the power of the great Son of God, men, there is no other way, and if you are bound by this chain of evil habits come to Christ for the power you need, and let Him send you out to help and bless the 'other fellow.'"

The meeting was enjoyed by all present. Next Sunday several talks on Sunday will be shown, and the Sequoia of the city will be the special guests of the meeting.

BUILDING LOAN ASSOCIATION STARTS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The Norwich Building & Loan Association begins its campaign for its January series this week. Hon. H. M. Leroy is chairman of the campaign committee and he is assisted by a corps of active workers. Approximately 500 shareholders are now members of this association. Its assets total over $100,000. The association has many applicants for loans at the present time. This association provides a splendid means for regular, systematic savings. Its shareholders number manufacturers, merchants, professional men and women, employes of factories, stores and the trades. It embraces all walks and conditions of life. For the past three years the association has paid interest on the deposits amounting to 5 1-2 per cent. The minimum rate of interest paid to depositors was 5 per cent.

The officers of the association are all Norwich business men and the state bank examiner has full authority and jurisdiction over the deposits of the shareholders. This means that the books of the association are regularly examined by the state examiner, thus assuring the greatest protection to the depositors.

The growth of this association has been steady. Organized in April, 1920, it has today 500 shareholders. It is for the purpose of increasing the number of shareholders that this effort is being made this month. In January and July of each year the association issues new series of shares, from $1 to $25, which will mature in about 12 years at $100 to $5,000.

There are now over 7,500 similar associations throughout the United States, with over 4,000,000 members and with assets of over $2,000,000,000. The officers cordially invite every man and woman to become a shareholder. The association meets the third Tuesday of every month, in the chamber of commerce rooms, 28 Shetucket street. Secretary Alexander Sharpe, at the Boston Store post office will gladly furnish full information to anyone interested.

SATURDAY'S MARKET.

New York, Jan. 6.—Fears that French determination to exact penalties from Germany for the latter's inability to meet the January 15 reparations payment may lead to serious consequences induced heavy selling of stock for both accounts in today's brief session of the market, declines of 1 to 2 points being quite common. French and Belgian bonds also weakened, as did the foreign exchanges.

The selling was conducted, however, in an orderly fashion although it was apparent that the buying support which had been furnished by professional interests to stem yesterday's short selling was considerably less effective today. News that the Turkish delegation had walked out of the sub-committee meeting of the near east conference at Lausanne also was a disquieting factor.

Industrial stocks, particularly the speculative favorites, were the hardest hit in the reaction. Baldwin, which only recently had sold above the 140 mark, closed at 133 1-4 for a net loss of 2 3-4 points. Studebaker closed at 114 1-2 for a net loss of 1 7-8 points. Losses of 2 points or more also were recorded by American Can, American Car, Consolidated Gas, Woolworth, United Fruit, Postum Cereal, Dupont and Delaware and Hudson.

Steel and oil shares also showed material recession.

U. S. Steel fell back to 106 1-4 for a net loss of 3-4; Gulf States Steel dropped 2 points; Crucible, 1 1-4 and Republic, 1 1-8. Pan-American A and B, Standard Oil of California, California Petroleum and Houston all showed losses of 1 to nearly 2 points. Producers & Refiners gained a point on overnight announcement of the payment of an initial quarterly dividend of $1, but fell back with the other oils later for a small fractional loss on the day.

Foreign exchanges sold off slightly. Demand sterling dropped about half a cent to $4.64 1-2; French francs slumped from 7.08 cents to 6.95 and Belgian francs from 6.55 to 6.41 1-2. The German mark was down to 1.16 cents a hundred, as against the new low record of 1.15 cents a hundred established yesterday.

The clearing house statement showed decreases of $21,773,000 in loans, discounts and investments, $67,827,000 in the reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve bank, $37,746,000 in net demand deposits and $10,567,000 in time deposits. Aggregate reserve totaled $492,742,000, making a deficit in reserve of $37,012,940 as against an excess reserve of $24,943,130 last week.

WESTMINSTER

The close of 1922 and the advent of 1923, the impact for good one may be to the other, was the thought of the pastor's sermon from the text "Consider" at the Westminster morning worship last Sunday.

For the prayer worship in the homes, a program of topics from the Old Testament has been prepared. For this week the first two chapters of Genesis and Genesis 6: 13-22, with 8: 1-22, are to be read and studied. For the second week, Jan. 10. Some of the Promises of God: Genesis 9: 8-17, 12: 1-9, 28: 10-22, 35: 1-15; Exodus 12: 1-42, and 15: 1-18.

At the Christmas church school exercises the decorations were beautiful and much admired, consisting of three trees in Christmas attire with two vases of white purus, other vases of evergreens and festooning and Christmas bells. Credit for this artistic work is due Elwood Hubbard.

The program was as follows: Song, Joy to the World, school and audience; Ps. 117 and The Angels' Chorus, school; prayer b the pastor; Welcome, Addie Robbins; recitations, b Alice Bingham and by Douglas MacLeod, song by girls It Came Upon the Midnight Clear; Christmas Greeting, Annie Hagopian; song, Adeste Fidelis, Elwood Hubbard; December, Harry Heldstrom; A Letter from Santa Claus, Amen Hagopian; Just Christmas, Victor MacLeod; recitations by Anna Olsen, Earl MacLeod, Dorothy Miller; song, without organ, Away in a Manger Viola and Laura Bennett and Anna Olsen; recitations, Bonita Dusenberrd, Douglas MacLeod, Nicholas ——, Annie and Olga Deviatac, Laura Bennett and Alice Hagopian; Salutes to the U. S. A. and to the Christian Flags, school; story, by superintendent, Her Christmas Dream; song, Holy Night, by the girls; Offering for Him; song, school and audience, All Hail the Powar of Jesus' Name; recitation, Victor MacLeod.

At the close of the program the children were each given a chance with fishline and pole to catch one named and one other "fish" at a pond in charge of Elwood Hubbard and Mrs. Byron Bingham. All seemed to enjoy the sport. Boxes of candy were given at the conclusion of the evening.

Miss Nellie Colburn of Westminster and Willimantic was home for the week end and Christmas.

GROWTH OF OUR TRADE IN ARTIFICIAL SILK MANUFACTURES

The fact that the foreign world can on Christmas Eve hang up 20 million pairs of new artificial silk stockings fresh from the factories of the United States illustrates the persistency with which our manufacturers are tightening their grip on world markets. Latest export figures indicate that the artificial silk hosiery sent out of the United States in the calendar year 1922 will approximate 20 million pairs. Up to the end of September they totaled between 15 and 13 million pairs, and they are now running at the rate of approximately 2 million pairs per month, the total exports of artificial silk hosiery in the full year seems likely to be nearly or quite 20 million pairs against less than half that number in the calendar year 1921. The total value of the exports of artificial silk of all grades will be about 6 1-2 million dollars in 1922 against a little more than 4 million dollars in 1921. Artificial silk is in fact one of the few articles which show larger export values in 1922 than in 1921.

The increase in our exports of this new product of the American factory is especially interesting in view of the fact that the industry is one of comparatively recent development with us. Prior to the war most of the world's artificial silk was produced in Europe, especially Belgium, Germany and France, but with the interruptions which the war caused in the industry, the output of artificial silk yarn in the United States grew from 1 1-2 million pounds in 1913 to 8 millions in 1919, jumping to 15 million in 1921, and a prospective 20 million in the year which ends with this month. The value of the artificial silk yarn produced in the United States in 1922 is nearly 50 million dollars and the factory value of the finished goods produced therefrom about $75,000,000.

Even this big growth in production in our factories does not seem sufficient to satisfy the demands of the United States for the importation from foreign countries during the current year will aggregate about 2 million pounds with a value of 3 1-2 million dollars.

The uses of artificial silks, which, as is well known, is made chiefly from wood fiber, are expanding and it is now utilized in nearly all classes of knit goods as well as draperies, trimmings, and many other lines of this general character.

The rapid growth in foreign demand for this new product of the American factory is illustrated by the fact that our export figures only go back to 1916, prior to which time the Department of Commerce did not consider artificial silk or its manufactures of sufficient importance to be included in our export figures. The total exports of all materials of this kind in the calendar year 1917, the first year of record, amounted to $1,433,000, advancing to about $10,000,000 in 1918 dropping, however, with the reopening of European factories to about $8,000,000 in 1919, and seems likely to be about $ 1-2 million dollars in 1923. The growth of this new industry in the United States is illustrated by the fact that our outturn of artificial silk yarn in 1923 is as great as that of the whole world in 1914.

VOLCANO-LIGHTHOUSE OF THE MEDITERRANEAN

"The circular cone of the volcano which forms the island of Stromboli, and the six other islets of the Lipari group comprise a connecting link between Vesuvius on the mainland of Italy and Etna on Sicily. The volcanic wrath of these three mighty mountains is partially responsible for the terrific earth shakings at Messina and in other parts of Sicily at Italy," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"The situation of the Lipari group on a map suggests the idea that they are the stars which Sicily saw from a terrific blow in cosmic times on the tip of her nose, inflicted by the wrathful boot of Italy. Stromboli is living up to the figurative excuse for her existence by keeping her fires burning nights and days, and throwing her lurid light on the Italian and Sicilian horizon.

"On this mountain which rises about 3,000 feet above sea level and about 6,000 above the floor of the sea, according to the ancients, was one of the forges of Vulcan on which he hammered out the scepter of Jove and the shields and spears of the gods. On its precipitous slopes Aeolus, the god of the winds, in company with his six sons and six daughters was supposed to have held his revels in the cavernous sides of the mountain to have confined the blasts.

"In medieval times the belching crater of Stromboli was believed to be the entrance to Purgatory.

"About a thousand feet from the top of Stromboli, there is an opening from which steam constantly issues and hangs in a smoky-looking cloud above the mountain. Ordinarily it is possible to climb up to the opening and look over upon the black floor through the cracks of which smoke issues and the red-hot lava hisses, boils and sputters, the 'cooking' of the earth's interior resembling more than anything else the boiling of a large pot of mush. As the huge bubbles burst, lava is thrown high in the air. Sometimes the fire of the earth quickens as it has been doing recently, and then the hissing of the steam may be heard many miles out at sea and the lava boils over the side of the cone.

"Stromboli, unlike the volcanoes that experience intense paroxysms of activity followed by long periods of repose, offers one of the best examples of the continuously active volcano. Standing alone in the sea, it is visible for almost a hundred miles, its ever-lighted fires tinting the clouds and the sky with a rosy glow, which has led to its being known as 'The Lighthouse of the Mediterranean.' Its light, however, is not constant in its intensity; first the sky is almost a bright red, which then decreases to a faint glow, only to be followed again by the bright light.

"In this respect it resembles the flashing lighthouses which are common to coasts the world over, and in reality it is used by sailors in the Mediterranean. In lighthouses of the man-made kind the flashes come at regular intervals, one of the beacons being differentiated from another by the length of time between the flashes. Stromboli, in this respect maintains its individuality, for its glowings are very irregular, varying between one and twenty flashes per second, the intensity also varying from time to time.

"Scientists, instudying the flashes of the light of the mountain have found that as the steam accumulates below, the lava in trying to force its way out pushes back the scum of the cauldron and leaves the surface of the molten mass exposed to view; when that bubble has burst with a roar the scum again darkens the surface, in consequence of which the sky glows and fades.

"The little town of San Vincenzo on Stromboli is about sixteen miles from the Straits of Messina. The surrounding country is fertile and cotton, wine and figs are raised. The mountain sides yield sulphur

NORWICH TOWN

For this week of prayer, which is to be observed by the First Methodist Episcopal church, and the First Congregational church, with union services at both churches, the subjects are as follows: Tuesday, Our Estimate of Self. Wednesday evening, A Lecture on Christian. Thursday evening, Kingdom evening. A Challenge. Friday evening, Prayer evening. Here We Are, Carry On. Acts 1:8. The meetings Tuesday and Wednesday evenings are to be held in the Methodist church, with the Congregational parish uniting; and the meetings Thursday and Friday evenings, will be held in the Congregational church, with the Methodist parish uniting. The speakers are Rev. James B. Aldrich and Rev. Gordon E. Bailey, with a solo at these services, at which a large attendance is hoped for and expected.

Sunday morning at the Congregational church, Rev. Mr. Bailey chose for his text Psalms 66:2 O Thou That Hearest Prayer, Unto Thee Shall All Flesh Come. The subject of the morning sermon was Prayer As a Means to Reconciliation.

The celebration of the Lord's supper was observed at the close of the regular worship with the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bailey officiating. Prior to this the beautiful communion hymn, The Table of the Lord, by Cox, was given by a quartette.

In the evening, the Young People's Christian Endeavor service was held in the church with the Lookout committee, Arthur Avery, chairman, in charge. The Guide Board Psalm, Ps. 1:1-6, was the topic. At this specially devoted meeting, numerous guide boards were arranged about the church with helpful suggestions pertaining to the general theme.

ARREST FATHER AND SON, CHARGED WITH THEFT FROM FINISHING CO.

Two men, father and son, both employes of the United States Finishing Co., were arrested here Saturday for theft of cloth from the Finishing Co. after the homes of the men had been searched, resulting in a find of 115 yards at one place and 50 yards at the other.

Provided with a search warrant, Capt. John P. Nowell of the Watts detective agency of Boston, and Officer Barney Keenan of the local force first searched the home of Tony Stankewich, 30 on Aiken place, Thamesville. Stankewich has been employed by the company for a year. The officers found at his home 115 yards of plain and colored sateens and cretonnes, of a value of $60, which were identified by Raymond B. Sherman of the Finishing Co. as having come from the plant in Greeneville.

Stankewich, who was at work in the mill, was arrested there and brought to police headquarters, where he gave bail in $300 for his appearance in court.

Saturday afternoon Capt. Nowell and Officer Charles Smith searched the home of Hlary Stankewich, 53, at 253 North Main street. He is the father of the other man and has been employed by the Finishing Co. for the past seven years. At his house 50 yards of plain and fancy cloth and handkerchiefs, valued at $20, were found. This was also identified by Mr. Sherman and the man was arrested, later giving bail for his court appearance.

The seized cloth was also brought to police headquarters.

According to the detective agency, they believe that much of the cloth was taken out of the mill in the lunch pail of the younger Stankewich. He came to work with a lunch pail but went to his father's home at the noon hour, according to the information they have. It is believed that his lunch pail was often empty when he brought it to the mill and that it was used to carry out pieces of cloth when he went to his father's house at noon. The theory of the officers is also that he carried cloth from his father's house at night in the lunch pail to his own home in Thamesville.

These arrests make the fourth and fifth accomplished here in the last few months through the Mercantile Protective Service organized and protected by the Watts detective agency, Capt. Nowell having acted in each case. Two of the previous arrests were of Finishing company employes and another was of an employe of the Ponemah Co. at Taftville.

DAIRY SPECIALIST SUGGESTS RIGHT JANUARY RATION

Professor A. R. Merrill, the dairy specialist of Connecticut Agricultural college, has just sent to the New London County Farm bureau office the suggested ration service for the month of January. Professor Merrill has the following to say in regard to the grain market and suggestions for mixtures for feeding cows during this month:

"There has been a rather steady advance along all feed lines for the past few weeks, followed by a slight drop. Prices on the average remain so near to the prices given for the December ration service that it does not seem advisable to suggest any change in the service for January. There are some feeds that are rather high to obtain at present. In some places there is no gluten feed available. While it is impossible to secure all of the feeds suggested for the December ration service, the following rations may be used although they are not as good as the more complete mixtures. However they will prove satisfactory.

	Crude Protein
300 bran	43
300 corn meal or hominy	30
200 cottonseed 36 per cent.	148
100 linseed	30
1000 lbs contains	213

"100 lbs. mixture contains 21.3 crude protein.

"Where it is desirable to use some corn and oil meal, the following ration may be used when mixed hay and silage:"

	Crude Protein
150 bran	23
400 corn and cob meal	34
200 cottonseed, 36 per cent.	108
150 oil meal	45
1000 lbs contains	210

"100 lbs contains 21 per cent. crude protein.

"Where the roughage is of a very poor grade, containing no clover, the following ration, higher in protein, may be used:

	Crude Protein
200 bran	45
200 corn meal	30
200 cottonseed	108
200 oil meal	60
1000 lbs contains	243

"100 lbs contains 24.3 crude protein.

"When it is desirable to use gluten feed, 50 lbs may be substituted for 100 lbs. of cottonseed.

"Any of the above mixtures for Holsteins, Ayrshires or Guernseys 3 1-2 to 4 lbs. of milk and for Jerseys and Guernseys 1 lb grain to every 2 lbs of milk."

HELD IN CONNECTION WITH BRUTAL MURDER IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 7.—Fred Goetz, who was convicted of an ax slaying here two years ago, was being held by the police tonight for questioning in connection with the murder of Harry Keim, 46, whose body was found hacked to pieces in a hardware store here early today.

Goetz has spent three terms in Ohio institutions for the criminal insane.

Goetzinger was arrested at his home near the Keim store shortly after the crime was discovered. When found he was intoxicated, police say. His clothing and shoes were covered with bloodstains and in his pockets were found $25 in blood-stained currency and a lodge receipt issued to the dead man, according to the authorities.

Goetzinger underwent a severe questioning the police today. To all questions he replied, "I won't say I was there and I won't say I wasn't. I might have killed him, but I don't know."

The suspect was released from the Lima state hospital for the criminal insane less than a year ago. He had been sent there after he wrote to the authorities declaring that he had killed Miss Louise Wolfe and Miss Mabel Foote, Parma heights school teachers, two years ago. The teachers had been beaten to death on a lonely road while returning to their homes from school. He was released last spring when he told the authorities "he wanted to get married."

"Seed corn bought direct from the farmers who raise it" is the leading idea in a circular letter which is being sent out by the county agent to the mailing list in this county. The corn demonstrations' results of this past season are pointed out, especially the returns secured on the farms of E. L. Waterman and F. M. Abell of Lebanon. Leaming seed corn bought direct from Ohio farmers produced an average of nineteen tons per acre while Leaming seed bought locally ran about seven tons. The small tons per acre and the extra was not a more mature. The same principle holds in the buying seed corn as well as certified seed potatoes—"Buy from the men who grow them."

A lot of farmers paid $3.00 per bushel for a so-called variety of seed corn this last spring. The germ test of this variety was sensibly considered for Farm Bureau demonstrations and sample to Bushel Farm corn farmer who grew it. Not only was the germ test $2.00 per bushel but the seed was not well matured when bought in the fall. The poorest kind of seed will run a little higher this year if the quotations of one large farmer owned cooperative selling organization in New York state are any criterion.

New London county raises 3,000 acres of silage corn each year. The average yield runs about 10 tons per acre. If this yield could be increased by two tons per acre without reducing the maturity of the ensilage there is much to be gained. Good seed will go a long ways toward improving the corn crop.

The county seed pool organized by the Farm Bureau has just this idea in view. Ohio Leaming and Pennsylvania Sweepstakes will be the varieties of corn particularly emphasized while Eureka can be secured by those much like it. There is no use in [illegible] a different variety just to show his independence. Those days are passing. More and more farmers are placing confidence in the results of demonstration work carried out by the extension service and Farm Bureau. Test in the [illegible] already a number of farmers are planning to plant some of their corn fields with these two varieties that proved [illegible] in the [illegible] demonstrations.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PARTY IS HELD BY THE XENS

The Xens society held its annual Christmas party last Friday evening at the First Baptist church, the party having been postponed [illegible] owing to conflicting dates on church entertainments. Over 35 members attended and enjoyed an evening of pleasure. At the business meeting matters of routine business were transacted and the sale committee reported a net income of $50 from the sale held recently. It was voted to hold the annual banquet of the society on Friday, January 20th, when a special programme will be arranged and the presents of the theme [illegible] was also voted to hold a social meeting on Friday evening, January 19th, one week later than the scheduled night, owing to the holding of the educational institute at the church on Friday the 13th. Following the business session the tree was enjoyed, each member presenting some inexpensive gift, many of them jokes that created no little fun. Refreshments were served consisting of coffee, sandwiches and waters, following which the meeting adjourned.

Breed Theatre.

Quincy Adams Sawyer, which was seen for the first time yesterday at the Breed theatre, is in many ways a remarkable photoplay. It has all the elements which go to make a thoroughly interesting motion picture, and the large audiences yesterday greeted it with unmistakable enthusiasm. It is safe to say that the screen version of this sensationally popular novel is going to prove one of the best liked pictures of the year.

First of all, there is the story itself, which makes its appeal. The homely narrative of New England rural folks has still the same sweet charm, the same delightful and quaint flavor which it had as a novel and later as a play. Its delightful people and their affairs hold the interest throughout.

The story is concerned with the adventures of the young Boston lawyer, Quincy, when he comes to Mason's Corner to clear up a legal matter. He wins the affections of the town's womenfolk but he incurs the enmity of the local czar, Obadiah Stront. It is the conflict between Quincy and Stront which forms the main motive of the story, but there are many unusual and comic situations as well.

In the cast are a dozen screen celebrities. Rarely has such fine judgment been shown in assigning roles in a motion picture. All of the important characters are portrayed by players who have themselves been featured and starred, and as a result, splendid acting is the rule. Among the players are Blanche Sweet, Lon Chaney, Barbara La Marr, John Bowers, Elmo Lincoln, June Elvidge, Louise Fazenda, Zasu Pitts, Hank Mann, Edward Connelly, Kate Lester, and many others.

Quincy Adams Sawyer was directed by Clarence G. Badger. It is based on the story by Charles Felton Pidgin. The screen version is the work of Bernard McConville. The film is a Metro-GL attraction.

Quincy Adams Sawyer will be the feature at the Breed again today, Tuesday and Wednesday, and other pictures on the bill include the Pathe news and an Educational comedy.

The Young Rajah Affords Star Two Excellent Character Roles—At the Broadway Now.

One of the strongest stellar vehicles for Rodolph Valentino yet selected is the enthusiastic opinion of the producers regarding The Young Rajah, a new Paramount picture in which that popular star will be seen at the Broadway theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Three other notable features make this picture one of the strongest in which Mr. Valentino has yet appeared under Paramount auspices. The story is the famous novel, Amos Judd, by J. A. Mitchell, which proved one of the most successful American works of fiction. It was adapted to the screen by June Mathis, the adaptor of The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, Blood and Sand, and other Valentino pictures. The cast is unusually large and includes many prominent and popular players, including Wanda Hawley, Bertram Grasby, Charles Ogle, Pat Moore, George Periolat, Fanny Midgely, George Field, Edwin Stevens, Robert Ober, Jack Gidding, J. Farrell MacDonald and several others.

The story, which is laid in America and India, introduces Amos Judd, first as a young Hindu prince—a child brought to this country for political reasons and placed in the care of Joshua and Sarah Judd, kindly New England farmers, together with an immense fortune. As the child grows up he demonstrates a remarkable gift of foretelling events, and his predictions always come true. As a man, he goes to Harvard and wins signal honors, but incurs the bitter enmity of Bennett, who believes him responsible for the accident which causes the death of Slade, Bennett's friend. Amos and Bennett fall in love with the same girl—Molly Cabot.

In India there is religious conflict and a usurpation of the throne. The maharajah plans to kill Amos and sends a delegation to America for that purpose. Amos wins Molly's love and the wedding is planned, but the former then has a vision of an attack upon himself by East Indians. Measures are taken for his protection, but the Hindus get him and are about to murder him when General Gadi, the man who had brought Amos as a child to America, the priest Narada and Gadi's men save him. The priest tells Amos he must come back and free his people from the usurper. Amos fights between love and duty and finally decides he must fulfill the latter and returns to his native land.

Molly is heartbroken at his departure, but later Amos is seen looking into the waters of a beautiful lake, wherein he sees the vision of a Hindu wedding, and as the bride raises her veil, her face is that of the woman he loves—Molly. And Amos' visions always come true! Wanda Hawley plays opposite the star.

An Educational Christie comedy concludes the bill.

Containing every element that goes to make up a really worth-while picture and having an all-star cast, One Clear Call, the First National attraction that opens today at the Strand theatre is one of the best all-around entertainments offered on the screen in some time.

One Clear Call is not only absolutely free of any objectionable scenes, but its theme is one that will find a responsive chord in many spectators.

The story runs smoothly, sustaining interest, builds to a strong climax and ends at just the right moment. Here and there, through little human touches, the action excites mirth or starts a tear; and in the clansmen and the operation [illegible] scenes it holds with a grip so tense that one is almost breathless with anxiety. Much of the credit for these merits is due the director, John M. Stahl, a man whose name and efforts are gradually becoming synonymous with good pictures.

To tell the story here would detract from the alluring air of mystery and the many surprising turns in the picture itself. It is based on the famous novel of the same name by Frances Nimmo Greene and was prepared for the screen by Bess Meredith. The locale is a small town in Alabama.

Followers of the screen will find many of their favorites in the cast. The four principal roles are taken by Milton Sills, Irene Rich, Henry B. Walthall and Claire Windsor, and other parts, equally vital if not as prominent, are played by Doris Pawn, Shannon Day, Joseph Dowling, Edith Yorke, Donald MacDonald, Annette De Foe, Fred Kelsey, Stanley Goethals, William Marion, Nick Cogley and Albert MacQuarrie.

Made under the Louis B. Mayer banner, One Clear Call is lavishly produced and beautifully photographed. Women will find it especially attractive because of the girls' fashion creations. It is released through First National.

In addition to this seven-act photoplay, there will be an Educational comedy and a Selznick News.

U. S. SUGGESTS AN INQUIRY INTO GERMAN REPARATIONS

Through Ambassador Jusserand, Secretary Hughes Has Proposed to France That the Problem be Worked Out by a Commission of Financiers—A Preliminary Answer Has Been Received From France—American Officials Have Been Advised That the American Views Have Been Well Received in Some Quarters—In Paris French Occupation of Essen is Regarded as Assured.

Washington, Jan. 8.—(By the A. P.)—American proposals for an inquiry into the German reparations problem by a commission of financiers have been transmitted to Paris, but still await definite French reaction to the plan, although a preliminary answer has been received [illegible] was involved in the [illegible] forwarded by Secretary [illegible] and authoritatively to- [illegible] the plan was laid before the French government. It was made clear [illegible] of American thought on [illegible] been sent to Paris [illegible] ahead a memorandum to the [illegible] on January 2. [illegible] Hughes did not insist on [illegible] of international method of sug- [illegible] speech at New Haven, [illegible] accepted today in what may be [illegible] government had been advised of [illegible] of American views. It was [illegible] that Ambassador Jusserand was [illegible] on a [illegible] statement for that [illegible] and that this was amplified in [illegible] conversations.

Data was not ample evidence, American officials said, that the suggestion was [illegible] in some quarters abroad. Most is lacking, apparently, is a clear [illegible] indication of the French position [illegible] the plan and hope has [illegible] abandoned in Washington that [illegible] a means of escape from the [illegible] governments from the consequences which it is believed in official quarters here must flow from drastic measures of forcible reparations collections.

The French reply already received is not regarded here as conclusive. It leaves the way open to ultimate acceptance of Mr. Hughes' suggestion, it was declared, although so far as can be learned officials in Washington are in the dark as to whether France will turn to the alternative of economic studies.

Since Mr. Hughes' speech at New Haven no authorized spokesman has commented on the probable effect of peaceful seizure in the Ruhr region as guaranteed by the French. Yet there is no mystery about the view in Washington as to what probably will follow for the Secretary frankly stated in his New Haven address what those views were. He pointed out that economic authorities held that forcible measures "will not produce reparations payments but might tend to destroy the basis of those payments which must be found in economic recuperation."

The view of the Washington government on this point has not changed, nor is it likely to change without very definite proof that the French plan is workable and will produce reparations payments without precipitating complete collapse in Germany. That viewpoint as well as its proposal that international financiers be called in was fully presented to the allied powers before the meeting of the premiers in Paris.

Despite action of the senate in the resolution expressing the opinion that American troops should be withdrawn from the Rhine, there is official support for the view that this course would involve possibilities of misunderstanding which it would be inadvisable to risk. The withdrawal, in any case, it is held, could not add much weight to the American views as to the unwisdom of the course that is to be pursued in the crisis.

American troops are wanted on the Rhine by each of the allied nations and by Germany, it was said tonight, in the case of each nation, however, the reason for seeking their retention in Germany is different. To order their withdrawal, it is pointed out, might be taken as implying American endorsement or repudiation of various courses of thought in Europe with which the movement would be wholly unconnected. It was strongly indicated that the troops would not be recalled at present.

It was also indicate dthat the United States government would make no protest against passage of French troops through the American zone enroute to the Ruhr. Lack of protest in that event, however, should not be construed as acquiescence in the French program, it was added authoritatively, nor would the French government so interpret it. The views of the American government were fully known and protest could be withheld, it was indicated, as there was no prospect that it could sway French determination to proceed.

Discussion of the reparations problem is still proceeding in government circles here. Secretary Hughes today gave a luncheon in honor of Ambassador Harvey and Vice-President Coolidge and other prominent officials were among the guests.

Senator Lodge plans o nThursday to entertain Mr. Harvey at his home, and members of the senate foreign relations committee will then have an opportunity for informal and frank exchange of views and information on European matters.

Plans of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States that bear on the reparations crisis also may be given impetus by the arrival in Washington tomorrow of Julius H. Barnes, president of the chamber. Mr. Barnes has been commissioned by the chamber to do all in his power to promote recuperation of Europe for its effect on American foreign trade and already has taken some steps toward a new business movement to intervene in the reparations situation.

FRENCH OCCUPATION OF ESSEN SEEMS ASSURED

Paris, Jan. 2—(By the A. P.)—The soldiers of France will soon be marching into Essen, arousing the Germans with the music of their bands. This long-talked-of occupation is now accepted as an almost accomplished fact, and government officials, business men, even the bankers, worried by the exchange problem, regard it calmly. They display a reasonable amount of confidence in the results as evidenced by the resistance of the franc to the reported bear movement in prospect from London.

There is expectation in certain circles close to the premier that the first phase of the Ruhr action will have been carried out when the premier takes the floor in the chamber of deputies Thursday to make his statement before the hou

This phase is expected to be the occupation of Essen by a small joint force of French and Belgians as a guard for the technical forces and by notification to the local authorities and mine operators there that the allies until further notice will collect a coal tax and impose an import duty on shipments from the district.

The government, however, has not committed itself to action on any certain date; it has been desired to avoid German demonstrations, and it was therefore thought wiser to carry out the occupation and make the announcement afterwards. Nevertheless, there are many who believe that M. Poincare's extreme caution in political matters will impel him to await the Ruhr policy, although the chamber previously voted confidence in the government with the Ruhr action in mind.

It is generally agreed that the premier will receive enthusiastic approval from parliament. The only danger is that there may be a tendency to push the government to intensified action in the Ruhr on the ground that as France is obliged to bear the whole burden, it ought to be done so as to bring the greatest results.

The premier, however, has said that he intends to resist any temptation to employ rough-shod methods; he has expressed himself as determined to go slowly and surely and leave no room for the world to criticise him. But there are no longer many advocates of waiting until Germany defaults on her 500,000,000 gold marks reparations payment on January 15.

The general attitude seems to be that action has been decided upon and ought to be carried out before the Germans organize to much resistance, and it is contended that in any event Germany's default on coal may be considered justification under the treaty.

This coal default is expected to be declared at noon tomorrow when the reparations commission will have concluded the German hearing; it is even hoped that the decision will be unanimous for the default, as Sir John Bradbury, the British member, said tonight he had not finally made up his mind.

Essen, which is the first objective in the Ruhr plan, may be the last, if the Germans take the operation seriously and show a desire to offer France such guarantees as M. Poincare can take to parliament and say: "Here is sufficient collateral for the present."

BERLIN REPORTS FRENCH PREPARATIONS FOR ADVANCE

Berlin, Jan. 8—(By the A. P.) French preparations for an advance are already actively under way at Duesseldorf, Duisburg and Muelheim, according to advices from these cities to official quarters. Twelve military trains are reported on their way to the Ruhr from France, and troops have already arrived at Duesseldorf, which apparently will become the headquarters of the supreme Ruhr command.

Two hundred garages have been appropriated there for French automobiles and schoolbuildings for administrative purposes. At Muelheim arrangements have been made for the accommodation of four regiments, and at Duisburg numerous large warehouses have been taken over.

While it is commonly reported here that the French plan is to occupy Essen Wednesday, the belief prevails in some circles that the present preparations are aimed at carrying out the occupation on January 15 if the Germans fail to meet the reparations payment due on that date.

BELGIANS ARE READY TO REINFORCE FRENCH

Brussels, Jan. 8 (By the A. P.).—Arrangements have been made with the French government for Belgian reinforcements to be held in readiness to proceed to the Ruhr when they are required. A number of engineers also will leave to cooperate with the French and Italian engineers in the application of the economic measures decided on by the French government. A detailed explanation of the arrangements has been made to the foreign affairs committee. The chamber of deputies will be informed of the arrangements tomorrow.

GERMANY PREPARING TO SUBMIT TO INVASION

London, Jan. 8 (By the A. P.)—British official circles believe the Cuno government in Germany will be able to withstand the expected shock of the occupation of the Ruhr.

This belief is based upon the latest reports from Germany. Chancellor Cuno, these reports state, had advised the authorities in the localities likely to be occupied to try to make the best of a bad bargain and avoid strikes and economic disturbances of any sort.

GUSTAVE BOUVET, WOULD BE ASSASSIN, SENTENCED

Paris, Jan. 8.—Gustave Bouvet, who fired several shots at Armand Naudin, prefect of police, in the presidential procession on July 14th, believing that the carriage carried President Millerand and Premier Poincare, was today sentenced to five years' imprisonment at hard labor. His trial lasted only a day; he was charged with attempted premediated murder.

Bouvet, who explained to the court that he only wished to attract attention to economic injustices, greeted the verdict with the cry of "Down with war; long live anarchy."

RESCUES MADE BY BLOCK ISLAND COAST GUARDSMEN

Block Island, R. I., Jan. 8.—Coast guardsmen here today rescued four men from the coal barge Tennessee after she had struck on Lewis' Point, near Black Rock. The barge broke loose from a tow going to the eastward.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Five Irish Deserters Executed

Dublin, Jan. 8. (By the A. P.)—Five soldiers, convicted of desertion from the National Army, were executed at Portlin today by order of the Free State government, it was announced that the men were found fighting on the side of the irregulars.

ALLIES NOT DISPOSED TO BE COERCIVE WITH TURKS

Lausanne, Jan. 8. (By the A. P.)—When the allies' conception of what the Lausanne treaty should be is drafted, there is no intention and will be no disposition to take it to the Turks and say: "Now will you sign it—yes or no." That was what the allied spokesmen made clear today in discussing the document which the treaty experts are compiling.

A good deal of mystery surrounds this document, and a report has been current that the allies will present it to the Turks one of these days in the form of an ultimatum. This report has excited the Turks considerably, probably making them more intransigeant than they really wish to be. It has induced Riza Nur Bey in various outbursts to defend his country's interests, for Riza Nur ever ardently voices the most chauvinistic opinion of Angora's new assembly.

The allies say they will permit free discussion of the still disputed points in meetings of the full commissions, but that so much time has passed in the sub-commission debates that it has become imperative to sum up the work and submit the document in as complete a form as possible.

These assurances of the allies, put forth to lessen the tension, probably influenced Riza Nur Bey to adopt a more conciliatory attitude today on the question of international supervision of Turkey's sanitary arrangements. An international board has heretofore supervised health conditions at Turkish ports especially with relation to quarantine.

Riza Nur declared that his country would have no more of this. Because Turkey was quite capable of managing he rown sanitary regulations, but he accepted in principle the situation of an international commission under a Turkish president to supervise the sanitary regulations of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus. This commission will be selected from lists of foreign medical experts drawn by the league of nations and the International Hygiene association, of which M. Barrere is president and whose headquarters is in Paris.

M. Barrere will return from Paris tomorrow, and a session of the full commission dealing with minorities will be held in the afternoon.

An agreement on all points has been reached except as relates to amnesty, the exemption of Christians from military service and an Armenian national home. The uncertainty as to whether the near eastern conference will succeed or collapse is causing a steady exodus of Greeks, Armenians and others from Constantinople, according to the allied reports today. Artisans and tradespeople are abandoning their life's work and all their little fortunes to flee before the possible break comes and hostilities are renewed.

Although it is true that General Harington is preparing for the evacuation of the British troops, in view of contemplated peace, The Associated Press is informed that the British forces will remain in Constantinople until peace is actually made. The report that the British are concentrating at Gallipoli, in order to hold the Straits, leaving the French and Italians in Constantinople, is declared to be erroneous.

CALL FOR JOINT MEETING OF OPERATORS AND MINERS

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 8.—A joint meeting of coal operators and miners of the central competitive field to be held in New York city January 18 to negotiate a wage contract was requested here today. The call was signed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Phil H. Penna, of Terre Haute, Ind., for the operators as individuals.

Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and western Pennsylvania make up the central field. The present wage agreement between the operators and miners of the central competitive, on which all other coal mining agreements are based, expires April 1, 1923, and the request, it is stated, is made "in the interest of the coal industry and in accordance with sound public policy."

COMMISSIONER BENNETT DECLINES REAPPOINTMENT

Hartford, Jan. 8.—Charles J. Bennett today declined a reappointment as state highway commissioner for another term of four years beginning at the expiration of his present term on July 1, next. The declination was made in a letter handed to Governor Charles A. Templeton, who offered the reappointment. Commissioner Bennett several days ago and the letter assured the governor of the commissioner's willingness "to cooperate in any way in carrying out the work of the state highway department in the future."

The reason given by Commissioner Bennett for his declination is that he desires to enter private business. He has been highway commissioner nearly ten years.

NO SEPARATE AGREEMENT BY BRITISH AT LAUSANNE

London, Jan. 8.—(By the A. P.)—The British foreign office today denied the report coming from Lausanne that the British have made a separate agreement regarding Mosul under which most of the Mosul Vilayet would be given to Turkey, but the Britis hwould retain a financial interest in the oil production.

It was stated that a Turkish agent had been in London, but that his credentials or proposals had not been considered by British authorities.

WARNING TO ALL THEATRE OWNERS IN THE STATE

Hartford, Jan. 8.—A warning to all theater owners in the state that they must not permit any exhibitions in their houses until their roofs have been cleared of snow and ice, and their fire escapes and passageways also made clear of these incumbrances, is contained in a letter sent out today by Superintendent Robert T. Hurley, of the state police department.

BYRNE TO BE APPOINTED BANK COMMISSIONER

Hartford, Jan. 8.—The appointment of John B. Byrne, of Putnam, as bank commissioner for the unexpired portion of Ex-Commissioner Everett J. Sturges' term and for a full term of four years beginning July 1 next, will be sent to the senate Wednesday by Governor Templeton. The governor notified Mr. Byrne today.

The Platt homestead, one of the landmarks of Meriden, was seriously damaged by fire which started Sunday evening from an overheated furnace. The late Orville H. Platt, who served in the United States senate from 1879 to 1905, purchased the house early in the 70's and lived in it until his death.

Another Textile Strike Impending

Fall River Mills Have Refused to Accede to a Proposal for Wage Advance of 29 Per Cent.

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 8.—The movement for a wage advance of 29 per cent. in the cotton mills of New England, still of small proportions but under consideration as a matter for general action by the United Textile Workers of America, met refusal today by the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' association. Such a demand could not be granted under present conditions, and manufacturers would close their mills rather than accede to it, the association declared in an official statement.

The proposal for a 29 per cent. increase is explained by President Thomas F. McMahon, of the U. T. W., as intended to effect restoration of the wages of cotton workers to the rates that prevailed before the cut of 22 1-2 per cent. in 1920. The wage reduction of 20 per cent. declared eleven months ago in most of New England centers has been almost generally restored, but this city was not affected by that movement and the U. T. W. leaders decided to start the fight for the new adjustment here.

When the matter was put to a vote at a mass meeting of textile operatives last week, it was announced that the voters were unanimous for a strike to support demand for the advance.

The executive committee of the United Textile Workers was in session here today when the Manufacturers' association refusal was made known. It was understood that President McMahon was to bring before the committee the advisability of making a general fight for the advance at this time.

MURDER TRIAL INTERRUPTED BY A HYSTERICAL WOMAN

New York, Jan. 8.—Trial of Reuben Norkin, charged with aiding Abraham Becker, chauffeur, in the murder and burial of his wife in a lime-filled grave, and was interrupted in Bronx court today by the appearance at the door of his sister, hysterically crying for permission to see him.

The woman carried her infant daughter, and the cries of both excited the crowd of spectators. Court attaches escorted the woman to the judges' chamber and promised her she could see her brother when court was adjourned for the day.

"I have never seen him nor know his whereabouts since we parted at our father's grave eight years ago," she sobbed, "and I have sought him everywhere." She added that since her marriage she had been attending night school, learning to read and write.

"I wish to heaven," she cried, "that I had never learned. I read only yesterday that Reuben was being tried for murder."

The jury that is to try Norkin was completed today with the selection of two more jurors. Norkin himself approved the last one accepted, although the venireman admitted he had been reading "all about the murder" and had visited the lime-filled grave next to Norkin's welding shop.

SENATE VOTES SALARY WITHHELD FROM NURSE

Washington, Jan. 8.—The senate today passed a bill to pay Gertrude Bustig, an army nurse, the salary withheld from her while she was facing charges during the war of being a German spy. The senate acted in an effort to make amends after hearing a plea for justice in her behalf by Chairman Wadsworth of the military affairs committee. The bill, which had the endorsement of the war department, was sent to the house.

Senator Wadsworth said Miss Lucas arrested at Fort Worth, Tex., on charges of being a dangerous enemy spy. Her name, Senator Wadsworth said, was published throughout the country in connection with the accusation, and she was discharged from the army nurse corps and confined for months in an enemy alien detention camp. Investigation proved the charges to be a "frame-up," Senator Wadsworth said, and her accusers disappeared. She was restored to the army nurse corps and is still in that service, he said.

SEVEN FIREMEN OVERCOME BY SMOKE IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 8.—Seven firemen were overcome by smoke and others slightly injured in a fire tonight in the Columbia warehouse, near Broadway. A temporary hospital was established in a lobby of an apartment hotel nearby, and the men were treated by department physicians. Three of the firemen were sent to a hospital where first aid methods failed to restore consciousness.

Thousands jammed the streets a few blocks north of Columbus circle to watch the fire, made more spectacular by an incident in the design of the building.

On the top of the building, a six-story structure, is a large model of the Statue of Liberty, twenty feet or more in height. The flames, leaping from the third and fourth stories, surrounded the statue, and provided a more realistic torch than that of bronze which its designer had provided.

HELD FOR DEATH THAT RESULTED FROM "HOOTCH"

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 8.—Guisseppe Rugerro, alias "Joe Fish" was arrested here tonight on a complaint alleging that liquor sold by him caused the death tonight of Albert Gaff, 52 years old, in the Middlesex hospital. Rugerro was held in a bond of $500 pending the result of an autopsy tomorrow.

Medical Examiner J. Francis Cahill reported Gaff's death as due to spinal trouble, but said that on request of the was due to poisoned liquor which they man's relatives an autopsy would be performed. Relatives complained to the police that they believed Gaff's death was due to poisoned liquor which they said, he had bought from Rugerro.

RESIGNS AS PRESIDENT OF AETNA INSURANCE CO.

Hartford, Jan. 8.—William B. Clark, for over thirty years president of the Aetna (Fire) Insuranve Company, and for more than sixty-five years in the insurance business, resigned as president at a meeting of the board of directors today and Ralph B. Ives, of Chicago, vice president at the Aetna's western branch, was elected to succeed him. Mr. Clark, one of the best known insurance men in America, is in his eighty-second year, and will continue as chairman of the board of directors.

Prior to Mr. Clark's resignation, A. N. Williams, first vice president with the Aetna, and nationally prominent as an insurance officer, announced that he will retire next month.

Prohibition Scandal in National Capital

Officials Are Checking Up Diplomatic Shipments to Ascertain if There Has Been a "Leak".

Washington, Jan. 8. (By the A. P.)—Charges that much of the illicit liquor retailed recently by Washington bootleggers came into the United States under consignment to the foreign embassies and legations here have developed a situation which in the opinion of federal authorities embraces many disagreeable potentialities.

While officials of the federal government will not discuss specifically the recent liquor raids which Washington police officers declare have provided evidence of a leak from embassy and legation stores to bootleggers, dry agents agreed today that there was "more than rumor" to support the theory that some intoxicants permitted free entry under diplomatic courtesy, have found their way into illegal channels.

The prohibition officials have started a check on diplomatic shipments to determine whether the representatives of any country have been receiving an apparently abnormal supply. The procedure for obtaining entry necessitates formal application by the embassy to the state department which, it was said today, is sending a copy of each such application to the prohibition bureau for its information. A further check is being made through customs officials at Baltimore, New York and Philadelphia, through which ports the bulk of the diplomatic liquors arrive.

Officials were hesitant today to say what action would be taken, if it was definitely established that an embassy was receiving supplies of liquors plainly in excess of the requirements of its staff, but it was indicated that the state department would be requested in such a case to take the matter up with the ambassador or minister in question in the hope of obtaining his voluntary cooperation toward remedying the situation. It was the opinion of officials that if such discovery should result from their investigation, it would be found that a subordinate attache of the legation or embassy would be proven to have been the culprit without the knowledge of any of his responsible superiors.

The logical remedy, a high official of the prohibition bureau said today, would entail the cooperation of foreign representatives in Washington to hold their applications for liquor to normal requirements. This might be done, it was said, by having each representative estimate the maximum requirement of his establishment both for personal and official entertainment and measure successive requisitions against this maximum. Customs authorities, it was said, could then with propriety notify the foreign representative when applications from his embassy covered more than the amount certified as necessary.

ALLEGED WHISKEY DEAL TO COME BEFORE SUPERIOR COURT

Waterbury, Jan. 8.—Dennis Lyons and Robert C. White, of New Haven, accused of defrauding Frank Stapleton of this city, of $30,000 in an alleged whiskey deal will be tried in the superior court before Judge Newell Jennings and a jury here tomorrow.

White is at liberty under bonds of $10,000 while Lyons is in jail on account of his inability of obtaining bonds of $20,000.

MURDER INDICTMENT FOR LAUNDRY ARSON PLOT

New York, Jan. 8.—Eight persons were indicted today for first degree arson by the general sessions grand jury, upon evidence submitted by the district attorney's office in connection with the burning of a number of laundries.

Investigation into the alleged arson plot had its inception three weeks ago with the arrest of three men for complicity in the robbery of a Yonkers laundry, during which acids were thrown about the place, destroying hundreds of dollars worth of clothing.

The list included Philip Elson, president of the Wet Wash Laundrymen's Protective association, Morris Echlemann, his business associate, and three men who are alleged to have admitted firing laundries at so much per job.

THREE WATERBURY FIREMEN OVERCOME BY SMOKE

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 8.—Captain Martin J. Campion, Driver William Reynolds, and Private Thomas Galvin were overcome by smoke and Captain Stephen Bloomfield sustained bad cuts on his hands and arms while fighting a suborn blaze early tonight in the second story of the old building in the rear of 47 Washington street formerly occupied by the Washington Hill Athletic club. Angelo Divito lived on the second floor and operated a pool room on the lower floor. He closed his place of business an his home about a month ago, however, and has not been in the house since. It is thought that short circuit caused the fire. The building is a total loss.

NEW HAVEN DRUGGIST CHARGED WITH ARSON

New Haven, Jan. 8.—Charges of arson were preferred this afternoon against Henry E. Drier, proprietor of a drug store here, who was arrested early this morning shortly after a fire was discovered in his store. It was the seventh fire in the building in the past year. Drier was released in a bond of $2,000.

Drier told the police that he was held up at the point of a pistol bound and imprisoned in the cellar of his store by two negroes who fired the building. He said that he had escaped from the ropes which bound him by rolling about in the fragments of broken bottles on the floor. His arrest followed several hours of grilling by police and fire officials.

"SQUARE DEAL" ON WAR DEBT ALL THAT BRITAIN WANTS

At Opening Session of Funding Commission, Stanley Baldwin, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Declared the Mission Was Here for "a Fair Business Settlement", Not 'to Ask for Favors or to impose on Generosity"—Indications Are That the American Commission Will Await a Definite Poffer From the British, Which May be Looked for Wednesday

Washington, Jan. 8.—Negotiations between the American and British debt funding commission opened today with a declaration by Stanley Baldwin, British chancellor of the exchequer, that all his government wanted was a "square deal" in the settlement of its war debt to the United States aggregating more then four billions of dollars.

Asserting that the mission which he heads was not here "to ask for favors or to impose on generosity," the chancellor said what was desired was "a fair business settlement," that would secure for America "the repayment to the last cent of those credits which the United States government established in America for us their associates in the war."

Mr. Baldwin warned, however, that the British government, having regard for the present heavy burden of taxation on its people, its commitments in costly mandates and other circumstances, had to consider very carefully the terms of the liquidation of the debt lest an annual obligation be assumed which it might be impossible to meet in years of bad trade and falling revenue.

The chancellor's outline of the British position was in reply to a formal welcome from Secretary Mellon, chairman of the American commission, who explained the limitations of the law under which that commission was created, a law requiring repamyent of the principal of the debt in 25 years and a maximum interest rate of 4½ per cent.

Beyond this formal exchange of views little was accomplished at today's brief session, which was adjourned over until Wednesday. At that time a general discussion of the whole situation will be begun and the British mission is expected to present additional data with reference to the general statement submitted today by the British chancellor.

President Harding was advised late today of the progress of the negotiations, Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, another member of the American commission, spending half an hour with him at the White House. Under the debt funding law all negotiations entered into by the commission are subject to executive approval, and it is understood that Mr. Harding plans to keep in close touch with the situation as it develops around the conference table in the treasury.

All members of both the commissions were present at the opening session. Beforehand, the American commission, Secretaries Mellon, Hughes and Hoover, Senator Smoot and Representative Burton, republican, Ohio, held a session which lasted half an hour beyond the hour fixed for the opening of the joint meeting. After the British mission had presented its views, the Americans again continued their consideration of the general situation.

Spokesmen for both missions described the meeting as a "very friendly" one, but it was stated that neither commission had presented any concrete proposal as a basis of settlement. Such proposals were expected to come on Wednesday with indications that the American commission would await a proffer from the British.

While discussion of terms may embrace propositions more liberal than the limitations in the American law, members of the American commission said a settlement would be made within those limitations if possible. In this connection, it was stated that it would be possible to arrange a graduated rate of interest beginning at a figure below 4½ per cent., but increasing periodically beyond that so that a general average over the period the debt payments would comply with the maximum fixed by congress.

Attention also was called that all principal payments could be deferred until the end of the 25 years period, but it was explained that this was not the usual method in funding a debt of such proportions; that an amortization plan was customary. In this situation, it was indicated that a chief problem before the commission was a determination of how much Great Britain would be able to pay annually without seriously disturbing trade relations between the two countries and imposing too great a strain upon the British treasury and people.

The British chancellor, in outlining his government's position, declared that the settlement made here would determine the condition and material welfare of the great mass of wage earners in both Great Britain and the United States.

He explained that to pay the debt his government will of necessity have to levy heavy taxes to meet payments and that this would decrease the purchasing power of the British workingmen and reduce British consumption of American products. The result would be, he said, that both the American farmer and the American workingman would feel the pinch.

The British debt, he continued, was not a debt of dollars sent to Europe, but for dollars spent in America. The goods were supplied in war times at war prices and in repay in goods Great Britain would have to send to America a far greater bulk of goods than it purchased. Payment in that manner, Mr. Baldwin declared, would affect the employment of the American people for many years to come.

As to other methods of paying, the chancellor called attention that his country had established large credits for its European allies so that while it was dealing with its liabilities it found a large proportion of its assets frozen. He argued also that instead of the war leaving Great Britain richer by acquisition of new territory, the acceptance of mandates in some of the most disturbed parts of the world had involved her in vast unproductive expenditure in policing and patrolling territories in which she had no economic rights not equally to other nations.

A NEW OFFERING OF 4¼ PER CENT. TREASURY NOTES

Washington, Jan. 8.—The treasury tonight announced a new offering of 4¼ per cent. treasury notes, dated January 15 and maturing December 15, 1927. The issue is for about $200,000,000 with the right reserved by the treasurer to allot additional securities of the issue to the extent that Victory notes or war savings certificates are tendered in payment or exchange.

About $200,000,000 of the Victory notes which were called for redemption December 15, are still outstanding, according to treasury figures, and something like $400,000,000 of the 1918 issue of war savings stamps also have not been presented for redemption.

The present issue is intended, with balances already on hand in the treasury, it was explained, to provide funds to meet the Victory notes called for redemption as well as the matured war savings stamps which remain to be presented. Receipts from the issue also will help in covering the treasury's current cash requirements between now and March 15, when the next tax payment is due. No large payment of interest on the public debt will fall due either in January or February and no additional maturities of the principal of the public debt are due until March 15. Officials believe, therefore, that the proceeds of the issue of securities announced tonight should carry the treasury until that date.

EMILE COUE EFFECTING CURES IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 8.—From two groups of thirty people each, who sat in a dimly lighted room in a local club today listening eagerly to the simple, homely advice given by Emile Coue, one-time pharmacist of Nancy, there arose, one after another, patients who described their ills, hesitantly tried the "Coue method" of autosuggestion, and returned to their places declaring themselves cured or almost cured. Fitting his mood to that of the patient, the white-haired little Frenchman smiled, joked, knitted his brows with impatience or spoke with incisive command.

A nervous woman suffering from semi-paralysis was treated with persuasive gentleness, while a worried young man suffering from a speech imperfection caused M. Coue to almost shout:

"You must not worry. You can cure yorself if you stop fearing. You are two-thirds cured now."

WOLVES ARE RAIDING PIGGERIES IN NEW JERSEY

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 8.—Wolves—lank, hungry and ferocious—have been ranging the countryside of Hamilton township, farmers of that section were warned today by the township committee.

Presence of the dreaded beasts was discovered by John Gethings, Hutchinson Mills road farmer, when they killed sixteen of his pigs. Last night Gethings again heard a commotion at his piggery and rushing out, shot and killed one of two wolves which were attacking the herd. The second wolf fled, leaving behind four slaughtered pigs.

CAPPER FARM CREDITS BILL PRESENTED IN THE SENATE

Washington, Jan. 8.—The first measure of the farm credits programme, the Capper bill providing for co-operative loan associations and other credit extension features, was reported formally to the senate late today by Chairman McLean of the senate banking committee and leaders planned to begin its consideration tomorrow or Wednesday. Those in charge of the pending administration shipping bill had agreed previously to lay it aside and give way to the farm credits measure.

The banking committee also arranged today to supplement the Capper bill soon with the Lenroot-Anderson government aid bill.

Chairman McLean's report on the Capper bill said that necessity for extension of farm credits was recognized, in view of the importance of the agricultural and livestock industry. In recommending extension of the war finance corporation for another year, the committee report said the corporation had proved no value to agricultural interests and its continuation for a longer period was desirable.

The committee made few changes in the bill as drawn by Senator Capper, republican, Kansas, chairman of the farm bloc. It retained the plan for cooperative credit associations with $250,000 capital and for livestock loan associations with $1,000,000 capital. Loans on livestock paper would be extended to three years, the producing and marketing period said to be necessary. General agricultural paper, under the co-operative plan, would be extended to nine months as compared with the universal limit of three months on ordinary commercial paper.

DAMAGE CAUSED BY FLOOD CONDITIONS IN OREGON

Portland, Ore., Jan. 8.—Flood conditions which have caused damage and tied up traffic in Oregon along the Willamette and Columbia rivers and their tributaries brought real dislocation to Portland affairs today through traffic congestion owing to the closing of two of the five bridges which serve as arteries between the east and west sides of the Columbia.

Reports showed little improvement in the situation throughout the state though the heavy rains which produced the floods practically ended at noon yesterday.

Oregon City was battling today to avert a flood which menaced the city. Practically all the 1,500 men employed at the paper mills there were put to work strengthening a concrete breakwater. The flood was within a few inches of the top of the wall, which protects the city.

The new Windham Center grammar school was opened up for regular sessions Monday morning with a good number of pupils present, despite the weather. Only one session was held however and the school was closed for the day at one o'clock in the afternoon. To allow for the removal of furniture from the old school to the new, the opening was postponed for a week and it was thought Saturday night that it would have to be prolonged still longer as the desks and seats had not been fastened on the floor. The properties committed, however, got busy and Sunday, a force of men were set to work and the work of fastening the furniture was completed. Practically all the work on the building is done except the finishing of the assembly hall. The school which consists of four handsome and well lighted study rooms besides the hall is a great improvement on the old one which has been in use for sixty years.

The teaching staff consists of Miss Florence Truell, principal, and teacher of the seventh and eighth grades, Miss Elsie Eckkson, teacher of the fifth and sixth grades, Miss Millie Driscoll, teacher of the third and fourth grades and Miss Helen MacFarlane, teacher of the first and second grades.

In the local police court Monday morning James Friery, aged 55, of Putnam, was charged with vagrancy to which he entered a plea of guilty. Friery had nothing to say in his own behalf. He stated upon being arrested that he had been employed at the Williams Brothers horse sale stables for some time but he did not like living in Hartford. The man had walked from Hartford to this city, on his way to Putnam.

The court records were looked over and it was found that Monday's was Friery's fortieth appearance before the court since 1902 and that he had been arrested in this city an average of twice a year or seventeen times since the year 1914. Friery spent over half of the time between May 1902 to 1905 in the Brooklyn county jail. The man was found guilty of vagrancy and sentenced to sixty days in jail.

Bootleggers and drinkers of moonshine have been taking advantage of so-called country dances to find room for carousing with the result that the state police are staging a drive to keep those dances respectable for honest folks who wish to attend. Andover, Eastford, Canterbury, Lebanon, South Windham have been the scenes of wild parties due to the imbibing of illicit liquor. Since the building of a dance hall in Eagleville by Edward Champlin bootleggers have been faring well there, with the result that State Policemen Russel I. Harmon and Fred T. Caron swept down upon the place Saturday night and in searching the automobiles parked there, came upon a quart of bootch alleged to have been the property of Herman Colderado of this city. The man was placed under arrest and taken before Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews and released on bonds of $100 furnished by his mother, Mrs. Frances Colderado.

Monday afternoon Colderado was brought before the Justice of the Peace and charged with having in his possession liquor with intent to sell. The defendent entered a demurrer to [illegible] was found guilty and fined $50 and costs amounting to $25.80 which were paid.

A quartet consisting of William Costello, Arthur Roy, H. L. Lester and Walter Costello rendered Lead Kindly Light as the body was borne into the church. William Costello rendered O Salutaris, Arthur Roy sang Rock of Ages as a waiting hymn, and the quartet rendered Nearer My God To Thee. The remains were placed in the receiving vault at St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. John E. Clark assisted by Rev. C. M. Kelly conducted a committal service.

A mixture of snow, hail and rain fell Monday morning and tied up travel in Willimantic and vicinity. Automobilists found it hard going and all the passenger and freight trains on the New Haven Railroad were from one to two hours late as well as the trolleys which were running behind schedule. The street department including a large force of men and the snow plow were kept busy all day as well as local residents who had plenty of chance for exercising.

Early Sunday morning a telephone call was received at the local police station and the party stated in an excited voice that a big fight was taking place on Chapman street. Officers Leahy and Hurley hurried to the scene and found a frenzied group of men and women in one of the houses on the street. The officers were finally successful in quieting the collection of people and it was found that Petro Kusko had been assaulting Jan Kuchure, a neighbor. Kusko was placed under arrest and in police court Monday morning he pleaded guilty but kept muttering that he was going to find out something. Prosecuting Attorney Harvey became interested and called for Kuchure to take the witness stand but the man was missing. The case was then continued until Saturday morning of this week, when Kuchure will be secured to give his version of the row.

The meeting of the Willimantic Ministers' Union which was to have been held Monday was postponed because of the inclement weather.

There were no sessions of the grammar schools of the city held Monday afternoon because of the inclement weather. At 11:30 o'clock the fire alarm was sounded to notify the pupils of the closing.

Two Hartford trucks loaded with merchandise have been mired by the side of the highway between Clark's Corners and Hampton Hill for three days. The road in that section has been undergoing repairs and one of the trucks went off the shoulder in turning out while passing an automobile. The truck sank deep into the soft ground and in attempting to assist the first the second truck also became mired. The wrecker of a local garage was at work on both trucks Monday.

ALDERMAN WEBBER RESIGNS FROM WILLIMANTIC COUNCIL

Willimantic, Jan. 3.—Mayor Charles A. Gates presided over the monthly meeting of the board of aldermen which was held in the common council room tonight. The meeting was called to order at 8.10 o'clock. The minutes of the last meeting were accepted as read by City Clerk John B. Edgarton.

Edgar W. Jacobs, alderman of the fourth ward, was unanimously elected president pro tem for the common council.

Attorney Thomas J. Kelly then addressed the board in behalf of the local branch of the Salvation Army which is seeking a permit to remodel a building situated at 24 and 26 Walnut street. The plans called for a structure consisting of stucco front and back and sides and roof of fire resisting shingles, for which a permit was issued but later revoked by Fire Chief Webster.

The report of the chief police, Daniel J. Killourey, showing 27 arrests during the past month, was read and accepted, as was also the report of the street department which showed a total expenditure of $1,552.62. A letter of thanks from Mrs. Julia A. Dunn for the resolutions adopted by the board of aldermen on the deaths of the late ex-Mayor Daniel P. Dunn was received and read.

Several sidewalk applications were read and accepted. The resignation of Albert E. Spelman as call member of Truck Company No. 1 was read and accepted and the application of Nathan T. Ladd of Crescent street as call member of Truck Co. No. 1 was accepted and Mr. Ladd was appointed.

A resolution by Alderman Sullivan, authorizing the city to borrow the sum of $15,000 from time to time to defray the city expenses was read and adopted.

The resignation of William B. Webber as alderman of the second ward was then read and accepted and the office declared vacant. Bills were ordered paid as read by the clerk.

Permission was granted the Salvation Army to remodel buildings owned by the organization on Walnut street, subject to the approval of the fire chief. In their petition the organization state that the new building is to consist of stucco walls and fire-resisting shingles on the roof.

The sewer committee were given power to act on a question brought up by E. C. Hallock of this city. City Engineer Robert E. Mitchell stated that Mr. Hallock has purchased the old Colonel Morrison property on Jackson street and plans to change the building over into a wholesale ice cream manufacturing plant. The plant would require the use of nine gallons of water per minute in its freezing system and the question brought up was as to the best means of disposing of the water by use of the city sewers.

A resolution introduced by Alderman Jacobs fixing the salary of the street superintendent at $35 per week to go into effect at the beginning of the next term was read and adopted. Alderman Jackson arose and told of the fine condition of the city streets and stated that the street superintendent was only getting $28 a week, probably less than any other city in the state.

Charles H. Beebe of Lewiston avenue was unanimously elected as alderman of the second ward to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of William E. Webber.

Aldreman Hickey spoke in regard of setting aside certain streets with police protection for sliding purposes. The mayor authorized the use of Windham street and Lewiston avenue for coasting between the hours of 3 and 11 p. m. during which time an officer will be on duty on these streets.

The meeting adjourned at 9.05.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Conn. Winter Exposition, Hartford.

The central fact of co-operative industrial activity is that nearly all goods are produced for sale in a market. This is true of the products of the ground, works of art and articles manufactured for industrial as well as individual employment.

Such is the setting that embraces the Connecticut Winter Exposition. Here will the workers of the soil and the workers in the factories combine to show what the state of Connecticut is doing for the world at large. The world needs Connecticut. As markets expand, our independence upon them becomes closer and closer. The progress made by our state as a world market upholds this fact. Within the state, the agricultural interests and the manufacturing interests have become common servants of every individual in the state. It is, therefore, quite fitting that every inhabitant of the state should know about and take an interest in, the things the state produces. To hold our position of National and International necessity and importance, requires the services of every one of us.

Many interests throughout the state are entering in this exposition to make it one of the most useful and servicable, as well as educational, that has ever been held.

Secretary Leonard H. Healey of the State Board of Agriculture is the executive chairman in charge of the committee conducting the affairs of the exposition, which is sufficient assurance that this year it is again certain to be a huge success. Moreover, we, the people of the state, cannot leave it entirely to Secretary Healey to see that this is so, or that it accomplishes the purpose. We must do our part as citizens of the state and enter into the spirit of the exposition with the feeling and understanding that it is ours and for our individual and collective good. Let us all impress our minds now to reserve the dates of January 23rd to January 27th inclusive. It is during this week we shall make the most of the opportunity to express our loyalty to the state by attending the exposition and learn to "Know Connecticut Better."

Marlborough.—The vital statistics of the town for 1922 as obtained from the office of the town clerk show that there were 2 births, 3 deaths and 1 marriage during the year.

Rodolph Valentine Makes Hit at the Broadway.

The day is often big with accomplishments in motion pictures. For example, Philip Rosen, directing Rodolph Valentine in "The Young Rajah," mobilized an army of several hundred extra men, dressed them in the costumes of ancient warriors of Hindu mythology, took them out to a mountain location near Chatsworth, Calif., and in one day drilled them for battle and staged a mammoth battle spectacle, which serves as a colorful vision episode at the Broadway theatre today and Wednesday.

The scenes are fantastic in the extreme and represented the legend of the battle of Krishna, the Hindu god of Love, with earthly influences. His battle is against his father and brothers, who are tyrants over the people and even seek to slay Arjuna, righteous leader of his people. Inspired by Krishna, however, Arjuna slays his kinsmen and puts his hordes to rout, then receives as a reward from Krishna the divine gift of foretelling the future. Amos Judd, the modern hero of the story, is supposedly a descendant of Arjuna, and possesses that same gift. The visionary legend is introduced to show how Amos Judd came to possess this strange power.

An Educational comedy concludes the bill.

"One Clear Call" Proves Big Hit at Strand.

If you want to see a picture that will make you laugh and will make you cry, that will thrill you with the man-hunt of sinister-looking, wild-riding chasmen, and that will hold you in suspense during the anxious moments of tense operation scenes, don't fail to see "One Clear Call," which opened yesterday at the Strand theatre.

The review for this film was really written by the audience yesterday. Probably never before has the Strand had a photoplay that held its patrons under such a spell. Laughs at the bits of comedy broke out simultaneously all over the house, and the highly dramatic scenes held everyone breathless, being followed in each case by gasps or sighs of relief. Excitement mounted to a high pitch when over a hundred white-robed clansmen charged down the main street, scattering the frightened natives before the doomed Owl cafe.

Taken all in all, "One Clear Call" ranks as a great picture. The stellar honors for the cast are about evenly divided between Milton Sills, Irene Rich, Henry Walthall and Claire Windsor, while Doris Pawn, Joseph Dowling, Shannon Day, Donald MacDonald, Edith Yorke, Nick Cogley, Annette De Foe, Fred Kelsey, William Marion, Stanley Goethals and Albert MacQuarrie are all entitled to high praise for the splendid interpretation of their various roles.

With this situation as the turning point in the story, the picture works up to what might be termed a breathless climax. It has plenty of action and is produced on a lavish scale. The film is a John M. Stahl production and is released by First National.

A comedy and news completes the programme.

Breed Theatre.

At the Breed theatre yesterday was presented the Metro-SL photoplay, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," a screen version of the popular novel of the same name which established the fame of its author, Charles Felton Pidgin. In its film form it proved a highly interesting piece of work; exciting, humorous, and extraordinarily well played. It bids fair to become one of the most celebrated films of the present year.

In the cast are a galaxy of stars which is unusual to find in one photoplay. It numbers Blanche Sweet, Barbara La Marr, Lon Chaney, June Elvidge, Elmo Lincoln, John Bowers, Louise Fazenda, Zasu Pitts, Hank Mann, Victor Potel, Edward Connelly and others no less celebrated.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" was directed by Clarence G. Badger. It was adapted by Bernard McConville from the novel and was produced by Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin. Metro is sole distributor.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" will be the feature again today and tomorrow at the Breed theatre and other pictures on the list include the Pathe News and an Educational comedy.

NUGGETS TRIM BATTERY B INDOOR BASEBALL TEAM IN THIRD GAME OF SEASON

The Nugget indoor baseball team emerged a victor over the Battery B team, claimants of the Eastern Connecticut championship, in the third game in the series played between these two bitter rivals by a 12 to 10 score at the local armory Monday evening. The game was undoubtedly the best that has ever been played on the local floor. The game was very close, not more than three runs separating the two teams at any point during the game, although at times it looked as though either team was due to get away to a big lead.

The spectacular part of the game came in the last half of the ninth inning, when the Nuggets, with the score at 12 to 9 in favor of the cigarmen, took the field. The Battery team needed three runs to tie and four to win. Coleman, the first man up, landed one up in the rafters and the ball took a mean hop into the gallery, where Red Lewis, accidentally or otherwise, pushed the ball under the benches so that Coleman was credited with a home run, the first of the season. The hopes of the Battery ran high, only to fall when the next man was thrown out. The third man to face Big Chief Madden got a scratch hit and stole second, but the next man hit into a double play, ending the game.

The crowd at the game was small, but those who were present stuck to the last man and were well repaid. The Nuggets seemed to have the edge on the soldiers almost from the start, for in the first inning they scored four runs. The Battery boys collected two runs in their half. Then for two innings neither side was able to push a run across. The soldiers managed to score one in the fourth inning, while the Nuggets got it back in their half of the fifth inning. The sixth inning looked bad for the Nuggets, for in this frame the soldiers hit Madden's delivery for five big tallies, while the Nuggets were held scoreless. The Nuggets came back strong in the seventh inning and got back the five runs, again putting them in the lead by two runs. The Battery in their half of the seventh scored one run. No runs were scored in the eighth inning, both teams going out in short order. In the ninth inning the Nuggets boosted their total to 12 while the Battery men were satisfied with a single tally.

Joe Bailey umpired behind the bat, while Bill Barry officiated on the bases, both of these officials giving excellent satisfaction to both sides. Mickey Warwick established the foul tip record of the season, getting 14 in succession. Keith featured for the Nuggets and gave Madden some excellent and spectacular support at critical times. Coleman and Lemieux featured for the soldiers.

The score by innings:

Battery B	2	0	0	1	0	5	1	0	1	—10

MUCH DEPENDS ON NORWICH FANS AT WEDNESDAY'S GAME

When the Battery B five takes the floor against the fast Connecticut Mills quintet at the state armory on Wednesday evening local fans will have the pleasure of seeing the two fastest chalked court teams in the eastern part of the state in action. The Danielson team as it stands today is as fast a five as has ever represented that little borough, while the Battery team, formerly the Crescent A. A. is known throughout the state as real class in the basketball line.

The local team needs no introduction to the lovers of this indoor game and those who look on basketball as a tame sport will get a real taste of action if they attend the game Wednesday night. Basketball is no parlor game by any means and it takes real stamina to stand the pace for a forty-minute game when played by two such fast aggregations as will clash at the armory this week. Local fans have been clamoring for the sport which draws many hundreds in other cities, and now that an endeavor is being made to bring some of the first class teams of the state here it is hoped that it will be supported.

Years ago basketball drew large crowds in this city and the local teams were second to none in the state. For the past few years there has been a lack of interest in the sport but efforts are being made to revive the interest here. In going back over the records it is found that such men as Cregan, White, Glon, and Waterman boys, Horan, Ringland and others represented Norwich on the chalked court with credit. Today Norwich has the Murphy brothers, Belair, Normandin and Mills, a quintet equally as fast as any turned out of the old Rose of New England. Can not Norwich support the team of today just the same as they did ten to fifteen years ago? Norwich has been handicapped by the lack of playing room but now that Battery B has taken an active interest in the promotion of sports in Norwich this has been overcome.

The Battery stands ready and willing to promote the chalked court game if the patronage warrants it and now that they have done their part it is up to the local fans to do theirs and support this team. Put a good team on the floor and Norwich will be advertised from one end of the state to the other. Boost your team and boost Norwich.

SOME DIFFERENCE IN PRICE OF PLAYERS

In these days when minor league baseball players are being sold for $75,000 and $100,000 to the major league clubs it is somewhat startling to look back into old baseball records and newspapers and find this head "Ed Delahanty Sold for Record Sum — Philadelphia Pays $15,000." Delehanty is a name that lives in baseball today and in his time was just as great an attraction as the Babe Ruths, the Ty Cobbs and others of today. He was sold by the Wheeling club of the Tri-state league to Philadelphia Nationals for $1500, a sum at that time which constituted the greatest price paid to a minor league for a player.

Another star of the same period was Al Orth, a pitcher of the Lynchburg team in the Virginia league. In August, 1895, the Philadelphia team purchased him for $1000. Our old friend Billy Sunday was another man who was put on the auction block and in 1890 he was sold by Pittsburg to the Philadelphia team for $1,000 and several players."

McGraw Sold for $5,000

Today John McGraw, of the New York Giants, is one of the most liberal buyers of minor league talent. His purchase early in 1922 of Johnny O'Connell of the San Francisco team for $75,000 established a high price mark for a minor league player and shades into insignificance the "princely" sum of $1900 paid in 1877 for Delahanty. McGraw himself was a purchased player when back in 1900 the St. Louis team purchased him from the Baltimore club together with Wilbert Robinson and Bill Kelsler for $15,000, or an average of only $5,000 for each of these men. McGraw and Robinson today being two of the most famed managers in the game.

As an example of the "enormous" prices paid for ball players of other days here are a few purchase prices paid for stars of those days:—

1887, Mike Kelly, Chicago to Boston, $10,000.

1888, Pitcher Clarkson, Chicago to Boston, $10,000.

1890, Billy Sunday, Pittsburg to Philadelphia, $1000 and players.

1895, Al Orth, Lynchburg to Philadelphia, $1000.

1900, McGraw, Robinson, Kelster, Baltimore to St. Louis for $15,000.

1901, Hughie Jennings, Brooklyn to Philadelphia, $3000.

This list gives a fair idea of the way trade values of players have grown in the past years. The figures quoted are taken from official lists.

If a minor league star sells to the majors today for $100,000, as in the case of Kamm, of San Francisco, to Chicago, the fan has a nice mathematical deduction to figure out in this case. If John McGraw was for sale what is his present day value?

WILLARD, HALE AND HEARTY BLOWS INTO NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 8.—(By the A. P.)—Jess Willard, the Kansas Titan, tumbled into town tonight from the great open spaces, weighing a little less than a slice of the Rocky mountains and determined to find out what chance he had to regain the world's heavyweight championship title from Jack Dempsey, to whom he lost it at Toledo in July, 1919.

Big Jess and Ray Archer, his business manager, who accompanied him, announced they would not consider a bout with Harry Wills, negro challenger of Dempsey, but they declined to say whether Jess would consent to a trial bout with some lesser light to convince the public he is fit to meet the champion.

"We have drawn the color line," declared Archer. "Jess never would have met Jack Johnson if he didn't have to do it to get the title."

Jess' ambition to wallop Dempsey won't be interfered by with a lust for lucre.

"We won't have any trouble in agreeing on my share of the money," Willard explained. "I want to show the press and the public I am capable of taking care of myself. If I can't do that, I don't want to fight."

The ex-champion professed surprise when he learned that William Muldoon, chairman of the New York state boxing commission, considers him too old to fight anybody. Jess says he is 36, and the record books which make him 39 are incorrect.

"This is the first time I have been told of such an objection."

Willard declared he hadn't been weighed lately but he approximated his avoidupois at 265, 20 pounds less than when he started occasional light workouts last July. His fighting tonnage is 238 and this he can recede to by the first of July when he will be ready to meet Dempsey, he said.

"I need three or four months of hard workouts and I'll do all my training in public," he added. "There will be no secrets about it at all."

Willard's party arrived seven hours behind schedule, the result of mid-western storms and a freight wreck near Indianapolis. Except for a one-day lay-over at his Kansas farm they had been travelling for a week, but Willard was full of smiles at being back in New York for the first time in two years.

Within half an hour after the arrival, Frank Flournoy, partner of Tex Rickard, the promoter, was in conference with Archer. Jess and Archer will see Rickard when he returns from the middle west Wednesday and a few days afterward the westerners will fold their tent and hie back to the land of sunshine.

AVIATORS TO TRY AND SMASH ENDURANCE RECORD

Dayton, O., Jan. 8.—An attempt to smash their own endurance record will be made early in February by Lieutenants Oakley G. Kelly and John Macready, McCook field pilots, it was learned today.

The flight will be made over Wilbur Wright field and Dayton, with official observers from the American Aeronautical association keeping the time of flight.

The endurance record of 35 hours, 18 minutes and 15 seconds made by the McCook field epilots while flying over San Diego, Cal., is generally conceded in America to be a world's record but no official observers from the American Aeronautical association were on hand to keep record of the time. For this reason, foreign countries have not accepted the flight as a record.

CHESS PLAYERS MAY ORGANIZE A CLUB

During the past few months that time honored game of games, chess, played by the kings of old and indulged in by the master minds of the nations, has taken a firm hold on a number of our citizens who gather nightly to pit their minds against one another across the chess-board. Chess requires the deepest thinking, reasoning and keen foresight; it develops the powers of the mind besides being mighty interesting.

A few devotees of the chess board have conceived the idea of forming a chess club in the city. A. Strom, of 255 West Main street, is sponsor for this idea and would welcome opinions from any of the local men interested in this game.

Battery B Rovers Issue Challenge.

The Battery B Rovers challenge any basketball five in the eastern part of the state for preliminary games to be played at the armory on any evening of the feature games. Address Battery B,

So many precious hours idly thrown away,
And good intentions to Time fallen prey,
Countless opportunities passed in neglect
That wisdom and thought would prone reject.

Such were my thoughts, as thoughts will flow
Oftimes when I'm out a-shoveling snow.
They course my mind and in reflection cast
"What of Connecticut could I tell if asked?"

Of her forests, factories, sea and soil,
Symbolized by Nature's own crowning Labral
Equal to all, without restraining fetter
Would we but "Know Connecticut Better."

Yes since! from Windham, Tolland and Litchfield,
And New London, Middlesex and Fairfield,
New Haven and Hartford—why from every division,
Each Yankee should come to the State Exposition!

New York, Jan. 8.—Fingerprints, centuries old, have been identified on a picture "St. John," owned by George T. Pearsons, as those of Leonardo da Vinci, Mr. Pearsons announced today. The experts who examined the prints did their work so carefully, he said, that "had Da Vinci been on trial the prints would have convicted him."

Arthur R. Sowaal made the check, Mr. Pearsons said. Photographing the fingerprints on the Pearsons picture and comparing them with those on several paintings known to have been done by the old master.

According to Mr. Pearsons, extensive drawings were made of the prints of "St. John" and a plaster cast of the thumb with which the artist had spread his colors was then made. It showed plain arch prints with the mold of a scar appearing among the ridges, similar to a figure eight, or two circles, photographs taken by a finger print camera of the area on "St. John" where the finger prints were found, when enlarge dshow the same identification marks.

Photographs of the "Mona Lisa," the "Madonna and Child" and "St. Anne" which hang in the Louvre in Paris and of "St. Jerome" which is in the vatican, are in the Metropolitan Museum here and, according to Mr. Pearsons show the same prints. These were studied and compared in the same way, he said, and proved to be exactly the same as the prints Mr. Sowaal had taken.

In an affidavit, the expert says he can point out the brush marks, the finger print area clearly defined, and can produce photographic proof that no other than the artist himself could have made the marks.

WOULD CREATE COMMISSIONER OVER CIVIL AERONAUTICS

Washington, Jan. 8.—The law of the air would be established under a bill introduced today by Chairman Winslow of the house commerce committee. The measure, unique in that it deals with a field heretofore untouched by lawmakers would vest in the secretary of commerce authority over all civil aeronautics, with a commissioner at $7,500 a year to administer it.

Besides creating new basic laws to meet the regulative problems of the air, and of the aircraft industry, the bill would undertake to apply statutes in respect to land and water transportation to transportation in the air. It further would seek to encourage development of the commercial aircraft industry through the setting up of governmental agencies which would disseminate information relative to aircraft transportation.

Collaboration between the commerce department, the army, navy, marine corps and coast guard would be established by the bill, and a "civil aeronautics consulting board," composed of seven members chosen from the commercial aircraft industry, would maintain liason between the government and the industry.

The act would follow the precedent of exclusive federal jurisdiction in matters of safety inspection and navigation of the air, wiping out state lines in that respect. Aircraft operators' licenses, registration of aircraft, and a scheme of identification after the practice of states in regulating motor travel would be embraced in the law, and "certificates of air-worthiness" after inspection, would be granted in the manner of "sea-worthy" certificates to ships.

THE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT.

Just what the plan is for dealing with the state highway commissionership hasn't as yet been definitely set forth. Rumor has it that the governor is favorably disposed toward a three man commission. This is because of the expectation that the present commissioner will not consider reappointment at the present salary.

In his message to the legislature at the opening of the general assembly Governor Templeton referred to the "present able and efficient highway commissioner, who enjoys "the respect and confidence of the public to a marked degree" but inferred that inasmuch as he could command much more money in a private capacity there was a likelihood that he would not accept a reappointment. Nevertheless it was the expressed hope of the governor that "his counsel and service may be retained by the state, supplemented by such aid as the general assembly may be able to give him."

This might indicate that the idea of a three headed commission might be resorted to with Commissioner Bennett as one of the three. If such a step were taken it would of course involve a greater outlay for the work that is now being done by a single commissioner. That being the case, and inasmuch as Commissioner Bennett doesn't appear desirous of leaving the job except at a higher salary he could command elsewhere, it would doubtless be a matter of economy for the state to increase the salary and be sure of the present conduct of the important department rather than to appropriate three salaries aggregating a larger sum than is required and not be so certain that under a three headed commission there would result the efficiency that is now obtained and demanded.

In connection with the appropriation of large sums of money for the building of highways, and the necessity of getting good roads for the money spent, and a good distribution throughout the state system, due care must be given to maintenance and like conduct of the present developments with a view to economical interest.

The night school is not the only agency that can bring this about but it is possible for it to make a most valuable contribution in that direction, and Congressman Tilson brings that to attention when he pleads that such an important service be not restricted in connection with the much needed Americanization work.

SETTLING THE DEBTS.

The refunding of the war debts due this country from European nations is a question that has been under consideration for a considerable time. Different plans have been discussed and there has been much said about the ability to pay. During all the preliminaries this country has showed a disposition to oppose all talk of cancellation, but it hasn't taken the position of a Shylock. It regards the debts as legitimate and it is desirous of a discussion of the financial conditions of the various countries that some plan for payment that will jibe with the ability to pay of the various countries may be agreed upon.

It is realized that all do not stand in the same position and that more favorable conditions may be warranted in some cases than in others, such as a longer time in which to pay and possibly a lower rate of interest, but there is that unwillingness to write off the debts because of the encouragement that could be interpreted therefrom to [illegible] much surprise as it does in [illegible] country, because it is expected to [illegible] when proof has been produced in [illegible] in the country it is the [illegible] when a woman is convicted [illegible] admits her guilt or is [illegible] In [illegible] case there has been [illegible] made to secure clemency for [illegible] was without success, the [illegible] understanding being that there was [illegible] for leniency, inasmuch as the [illegible] that was intended and was [illegible] the mind [illegible] Waters was [illegible] she had told him of her [illegible] [illegible] about the end of her [illegible] and she knew that it was [illegible] [illegible] they had agreed [illegible] Thompson should be gotten out of the way in order not to interfere with her happiness. It wasn't a one-sided [illegible] case where both were involved. That likewise was the verdict of the [illegible] and the future of appeals con[illegible] the decision.

Such action gives the impression that under British law sex permits of no discrimination when it comes to punishment for crime. Thus in England a capital offence means something whether it be a man or a woman, or both are involved.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—Will the 68th congress modify the Volstead act? That is a question heard 'round the capitol corridors, now the 67th congress is drawing to a close. Only two short months remain of the present congress and it has thus far refused to modify or change the act under which the prohibition amendment is enforced. But the next congress may be a horse of another color, and its attitude on the prohibition question is not entirely clear.

Tremendous gains were made in some sections of the country for the "wets," but the Volstead men claim that the rank and file of voters stood by the present limitation and that the incoming congress will not change the law although the margin will be much smaller than now when the vote is counted.

Even the wet leaders are only hopeful—not positive. One of them said today, "We may tilt the lid a little but I don't believe we can move it enough to get a good hold and lift it up."

A recent poll of congress by men who profess to know the situation showed the senate as now made up to stand 48 dry and 48 wet. The same poll, or forecast, showed that the senate of the 68th congress will line up 57 drys, 39 wets and 3 doubtful. And it is on that 3 doubtful that each side pins its faith for victory. The dry men, however, predict they will control the senate by at least a majority of from 14 to 36.

In the house the situation at present shows 308 drys to 126 wets. Which means a dry majority of 181. The next house will see a big change, and the forecast gives the drys 248 votes, wets 154 votes and 30 doubtful. That seems to give the drys a safe majority.

The wets are placing their hopes that out of the so-called drys enough votes can be gained for some slight modification of existing law, on the ground that it is better to have a law that can be enforced than to have one so stringent that it is openly evaded. The drys are confident they can hold their men in line and that the 68th congress will make no changes.

Each side takes the recent presidential reference to the prohibition amendment as helping its cause. "Rigorous enforcement will make it so unpopular that the country will demand modification and congress will be unable to resist the appeal" say the wets. The drys retort by saying "Rigorous enforcement will prevent evading the law."

Any bill tending to modify will come before a very different committee than the one that now exists. Chairman Volstead was defeated at the last election and it is rumored that Mr. Graham of Pennsylvania, who succeeds to the chairmanship is moist, if not really wet. At any rate he is regarded as far more liberal in his views than is Volstead.

On the judiciary committee, which sits in judgment on the proposed modifications, is one New England member, and that is Hersey of Maine, who is the dryest of all drys. Moreover Hersey isn't afraid to stand by his convictions and if things don't go his way he will "speak right out in meetin' and want to know the reason why. As the only New England man on the committee, his voice will carry sectional weight.

It is expected the incoming congress will be quickly flooded with bills and proposals for modification. In fact quite a number of the wet members have already made known their plans.

Hill of Maryland wants light wine and beer. He advocates 2.75 per cent alcohol and a tax of 20 cents a gallon on wine containing that per cent alcohol.

Burton of Illinois stands for wine and beer, advocating a tax of 4 per cent on beer and 15 per cent on wine.

These are but two of the many suggestions made and which will be put before congress and pressed for action.

Fess of Ohio, for closed to the senate, but now a house leader says "Prohibition is here to stay. There will be no change or modification of the Volstead act." Gallivan of Massachusetts and others of prominence on the other side of the question say "the people want a law that can be enforced. We want to see a big change in the 68th congress."

Who is making a correct forecast is a matter of guesswork till the votes are counted.

All signs today point to a putting off of congressional slaughters at noon March 4th and not taking them down till the regular winter sessions opens the first Monday of the following December. Chairman [illegible] planned not to have an extra session in the spring if it can be avoided, and President Harding is united in giving a step further and being determined not to call one unless some great emergency makes it necessary when the time comes. At first it was thought the radical men on both sides of the senate chamber would hold up appropriation bills by filibuster, in order to embarrass the president and make a spring session necessary when their numbers would be greatly augmented by incoming members of congress and senators elected under "advanced ideas," as some one expressed it. But the program today seems to be to let the appropriation bills pass, provided it does not add the enemy in passing the merchant marine bill which is so strongly opposed by the men from states that have sent men of a more radical color than those now occupying seats from those states and districts. The present program is said to be something along this line; pass appropriation bills, then filibuster the merchant marine bill till the clock strikes 12 noon March 4th, so it cannot come to a vote. Then the bill would die automatically with the end of the 67th congress, and its opponents would be satisfied to let congress adjourn till fall. That seems to be the plan today—what will be the plan by tomorrow may be quite another matter. Lightning changes and turning turtle are not unknown accomplishments in congress.

"You can't tell by the looks of a toad, how far he can jump," quoted Senator Bert M. Fernald of Maine yesterday. And the senior senator from the Pine Tree state had in mind the matter of women smoking, and was replying to the "jollying" of a colleague who knew of a little incident that occurred here not long ago, in which Senator Fernald figured.

Senator Fernald is a typical state of Maine man, a down east Yankee of the finest type, and sets his standards pretty high. Down in Maine he lives on a big farm; here in Washington he lives in a big family hotel, where family customs prevail and where the women do not smoke in the lobby or dining room.

As the story runs, Senator Fernald thought Mrs. Fernald would enjoy "seeing the sights" in one of the most up-to-date and fashionable down town hotels of the city, so they strolled into the tea room just as the matinees let out and the younger sporting set were much in evidence. The senator ordered tea and the customary fixin's that go with it. Then they begun to look about. Girls at the right of them—girls at the left of them, puffed their cigarettes, just as did their escorts. "Hum," remarked the senator, "I told you we would see the sights" and he and Mrs. Fernald begun to pick out girls they did not think would smoke, but every time the test came, they found they had guessed wrong. Then a fine looking middle-aged woman came in, accompanied by a young fellow about twenty, evidently her son. "There," said the senator, "there's a woman who won't smoke here. She's the type of those young folks to follow." And Mrs. Fernald agreed with him. Scarcely had the couple been seated and were still scanning the tea card when the lady drew out a gold cigarette case and match safe. Lighting a cigarette she puffed out the smoke in little rings, while she offered a cigarette to son. They say Fernald muttered something that sounded like "By Heck"—but the only comment he'll make now is the uncertainty of betting on how far a toad can jump.

Agnes Syme, Wife of Joseph Lister.

Agnes Syme was the daughter of the famous Dr. Syme, under whom Lister, the great physician and chemist, who was a pioneer in modern medication, worked as an assistant at Edinburgh. The young surgeon was at the threshold of his career when he first met Agnes, who was to prove so great a help to him. During his courtship it is said, his thoughts strayed a bit from medicine, but it was well worth the straying, because as his wife Miss Syme was an invaluable aid in his work as well as his home-maker and lifelong sweetheart.

The daughter of a physician, and consequently reared in a medical atmosphere, Mrs. Lister's interest and sympathy in her husband's great work was more than ordinarily strong, and this alone would have been a great help to the man, intent as he was on relieving the world's pain. But her help did not end there. She did more than that. She did a great deal of writing for Dr. Lister at his dictation, and it was she who acted as timekeeper for the doctor, who was inclined to procrastinate. It was she who kept his lecture appointments for him and in general acted as his secretary and assistant. On one occasion she wrote for seven consecutive days one day, and all the next, in order that the paper for a certain lecture should be ready on time. Her husband had become so engrossed in his research work that he had forgotten the entire affair. This was but one of many times that the knowledge and interest of Mrs. Lister got her genius husband out of an awkward position. She is one example of the working woman—the kind who is familiar with her husband's business or profession. Her death in 1893 left Dr. Lister heartbroken. He carried on his work but his great incentive was gone.

INGENIUS GIRL

"There are many things which I cannot understand," confessed the terribly attractive bachelor with the prematurely gray hair which [illegible] last the finishing touch so far as the flapper set was concerned. "I don't understand sunspots, Einstein's theory or why a woman always is nicest to you before she turns you down. But what keeps my brain busiest is why should a fat lady—not plump, or buxom or Junoesque, but simply plain fat—why should she appear in an opera box in an evening gown without any sleeves or much of anything else?"

"Which box is she in?" asked the fair young stylph of a creature in the orchestra seat beside him, heavenly conscious of her own perfection in evening garb. "Let me look at her!"

"She's in several boxes," mourned the attractive bachelor. "And she's generally got so many diamonds and so much sable on that nobody dares betray by the lift of an eyelash that she's fat. Everybody in her box has to act as though she weighed a hundred and twenty-five only. And she always appears so satisfied with herself!"

"But one cannot sit in an opera box wrapped up in a bathrobe," pointed out the sylphlike creature.

"There is one of her in the middle upper box to the right," went on the attractive bachelor somewhat plaintively, not looking that way. "She wears black velvet which makes her expanse all the more startling—with jet strings over the shoulders only—and her arms precisely resemble an ad for smoked hams I once saw. She may have a kind heart and be good to her folks and all that, but she has no regard for the public!"

"You don't have to look at her," said the fair young creature. "They say if you are fat it is awfully hard to get thin!"

"But if I look the other way," the bachelor pointed out, "I see a lady in poison-green brocade tied up over one shoulder and completely off the other, and she never can weigh herself on any of the drug-store scales because they stop at 250. Her husband is strikingly thin, so it must be that she fills up on sodas and chocolates between meals. How they must be hating you when they look at you, Ermentrude!"

"Oh, I hope not!" the fair young creature murmured in gratified tones. "I should hate to make any one unhappy—"

"How long since?" the bachelor demanded. "You keep me in a constant state of misery, so there's no use in that chatter, girl! By your deeds shall you be known!"

"It's because you are so particular and fussy," the fair young creature informed him. "It would worry me to death—lots of things. Such as keeping thin, you know!"

"Never," said the particular bachelor, taking one quickly averted look at the lady in black velvet, "could you look like that!"

"Oh, I'm sure I couldn't!" she told him.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Bird S. Coler, who has startled New York with the assertion that from 20 to 30 per cent of the persons sent to insane asylums from Bellevue psychopathic ward are not insane, is the present commissioner of public welfare, with a record of long experience in city affairs in the metropolis. He was the first comptroller of the city under the form of government creating that office, and he held it from 1897 to 1902. In 1902 he was the democratic candidate for the governorship of the state and carried the city of New York by a large plurality, but was defeated. Three years later he was elected president of the borough of Brooklyn. In addition to performing the duties of public office Mr. Coler has been a prolific writer on civic affairs either for the press or in pamphlets. He has decided views on methods and theories of municipal government, some of which he has given to the world in pamphlets and books.

Stories That Recall Others

He Lost His Cap.

A six year old chap who had just started to school, was running frantically through the hall.

"What's the matter, sonny?" asked the teacher.

"He said: "I can't find my cap."

"Where did you leave it?"

"Oh, in one of these here pantries."

Sticks In Their Mouths.

Lena was visiting in the country and took much interest in watching the farm animals and the poultry.

She had seen some of them before, and pointing to the chickens said: "We had chickens once, Aunt Barbara, but we didn't have any of them things with sticks in their mouths," as she pointed with surprise to the geese with their long, stubby bills.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH MURDER OF HER EMPLOYER

Mineola, Fla., Jan. 8—Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Wells, housekeeper at Massapequa Inn, Massapequa, was arrested today, charged with the murder of her employer, James S. Pettit, whose body, a shotgun wound in the heart, was found this morning in his bedroom at the hotel. She was committed to Mineola Jail.

The murder charge was preferred against Mrs. Wells following the discovery at the inn by a finger print expert of a blood stained sweater and handkerchief, said to have been worn by Mrs. Wells last night. The expert said he also found two bloodstains on the stock of the shotgun lying beside Pettit's body and that they appeared to be those of a woman's hands.

James Mitchell, head waiter at the inn, told the authorities that both he and Pettit had arguments with Mrs. Wells last night. Mrs. Wells discharged him, he said, but he refused to leave because the inn owed him $200 for services. She then went upstairs to talk to Pettit again, the head waiter said.

Pettit was 34 years old, an expert shot and a member of many of the trapshooting and social clubs on Long Island. He had been married twice and was separated from his second wife more than a year ago, the authorities said.

Mrs. Wells, an attractive woman of [illegible] years, came to the inn late in 1921. Assistant District Attorney Edwards of Nassau county, in a statement issued after Mrs. Wells' arrest, said he was certain Pettit was murdered and the deed was committed by someone in the hotel. He added that Mrs. Wells admitted she had quarreled with Pettit.

DECISION FAVORABLE TO CURTIS PUBLISHING CO.

Washington, Jan. 8—Declaring that the "engagement of competent agents obligated to devote their time and attention to developing the principal's business to the exclusion of all others, where nothing else appears, has long been recognized as proper and unobjectionable," the supreme court, today overruled the federal trade commission, and pronounced the whole distribution system of the Curtis Publishing Company lawful under the Clayton act. The decision upheld a ruling by the third circuit court of appeals to which the company took its case when cited by the commission.

The commission had ordered the publishing company to desist from entering into agreements prohibiting wholesalers from selling or distributing the magazines or newspapers of other publishers. Asserting that the contract complained of by the Federal Trade commission was one of agency and not of sale, and therefore, was not prohibited by the Clayton act. The court whose opinion was rendered by Justice McReynolds, stated that "the evidence clearly shows that respondent's (The Curtis Publishing Company) agency contracts were made without unlawful motive and in the orderly course of an expanding business."

EXPECT TO PRESENT WILBUR ON BENCH WARRANT IN SUPERIOR COURT

J. C. W. Wilbur, who has been generally known in Salem as Charles Wilbur, self-confessed slayer of Frank Early of East Haddam, last Saturday night, was brought from his woodchopper's shack in Salem to this city Monday morning by Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton and placed in the Norwich jail.

It is expected that Wilbur can be presented at once on a bench warrant before the criminal superior court, which is in session in this city. This will do away with the necessity of taking him again to Salem for presentation before a justice of the peace hearing on the charge of first degree murder.

Deputy Sheriff Stanton, who was with Coroner J. J. Desmond Sunday when they failed to reach Wilbur's shack because of the snow, made the trip Monday in an automobile driven by Charles Fairclough. As Coroner Desmond was busy in the trial of a case in the superior court he did not go with the sheriff on this trip.

On the way back to this city Wilbur told the deputy sheriff a story of the shooting that differed in some particulars from what he had previously told Dr. Cyrus A. Pendleton of Colchester, medical examiner for the town of Salem.

According to the medical examiner, Wilbur had told him that Early came into his shack Saturday night and went into an upper room where he lay on a bed and was ordered out when Wilbur thought it was time for Early to leave.

According to what Wilbur told the deputy sheriff, Early was drunk when he came into the shack. Early followed him upstairs into the room where Wilbur had his bed and when Wilbur told him to get out, Early's reply was that Wilbur couldn't put him out and no one else could.

Early struck Wilbur, he said, in the shoulder with an axe handle and then grabbed another axe handle with which he struck him in the arm. Wilbur said he fired his shotgun and killed Early after those two attacks with the axe handles.

In response to a question before they left the shack, Wilbur pointed out to the deputy sheriff where he was standing when he fired the gun. According to a measurement made by Deputy Sheriff Stanton this was at a point 9 feet from the bed where Early's body lay.

One of the peculiar things about the case, upon which some comment has been made, is the position in which Early's body was found, flat upon its back with the hands tightly clasped together and folded across the chest, as if in the position in which he might have gone to sleep. It is considered improbable that he would have fallen that way if he had been shot while standing and has aroused the suspicion among some that he may have been shot while lying in bed.

GIVES DEMONSTRATION OF COOKING BY ELECTRICITY

A very interesting Ladies' Night meeting was held Monday at the Community house when the Brotherhood of the United Congregational church entertained the wives and lady friends. The meeting was opened by President Walter E. Lester who after brief words of welcome turned the meeting over to Frank J. Allan of the Westinghouse Electric company who gave a demonstration of the use of electrical appliances.

Mr. Allen explained how the electric stove saved money for the housewife. As a demonstration he asked the audience to imagine that they were to go down town at 8 o'clock in the morning, and remain away from home until 6 at night. Before they left the home 4 pounds of roast, onions, potatoes, and turnips were placed on a single platter and placed in the broiling oven. Then peas, rice, cabbage and carrots were placed in the steaming oven. The alarm clock was set for 4.30 p. m. and the adjustments made.

The people then, supposedly went down town and when the clock hands showed 4.30 o'clock the alarm rang, and the electricity was turned on in the two ovens. In the steaming oven the correct adjustment was 1½ and the oven reached this temperature in 23 minutes. The broiling oven reached 6 points, in 48 minutes. When the correct temperature was reached the electricity was automatically turned off and the food within continued to cook under the temperature in the oven.

The audience arrived home at 6 o'clock and the dinner was taken from the oven and each member received a sample of each food, every article being delicious, tender and sweet. There was no need of watching the oven, no worry, the electricity did all the work.

In explaining the uses of the stove and the savings derived from its use, Mr. Allen said that the stove used 100 K. W. H. a month, or would cost $4 a month to operate in Norwich. The time used to cook the eight foods used in the demonstration dinner in K. W. H.'s would cost but seven cents.

In speaking of the saving in meat, Mr. Allen said that in an ordinary range for every six pounds of meat cooked 1 to 1½ pounds were lost in the cooking. In an electric oven only a few ounces were lost, or about a saving of one pound in every six pounds used. Not only is the weight saved but because there is no circulation of air in the electric oven, there is no loss of moisture that makes meat and vegetables so unpleasant to the taste. Everything cooked in the electric oven can be used, even to the liquids found in the containers after a vegetable has been cooked, for this liquid contains products of great food value and can be used for soups.

Asked how long it took to cook by electricity, Mr. Allen said from 45 to 60 minutes for bread, 35 minutes for veal or pork, and 15 minutes per pound for roast. There is, however, he said, the saving in cooking. A four pound roast like we have tonight, as you saw, took but 48 minutes to reach the proper cooking point, 30 minutes being allowed for the oven to warm. The oven was started at 4.30, reached the warming point at 5 o'clock, the electricity stopped at 5.18, and we let the heat in the oven cook the meat for about 40 minutes.

Mr. Allen then went on to explain many other electrical appliances manufactured by the company he represents, such as chafing dishes, warming pads, curling irons, toasters, water heaters, coffee percolators, urns, waffle irons, flatirons, etc., all of which was very interesting to his audience.

The final demonstration was of the waffle iron, and waffles were served to those desiring them.

During the meeting a brief business session was held during which time Harold F. Johnson, secretary, read the usual reports, and matters of business were discussed.

At the close of the meeting a vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Allen for his interesting and instructive talk on electrical appliances.

DRAFT BILL TO LESSEN THEFT OF AUTOMOBILES

A special committee of the State Chamber of Commerce has approved a bill which will tend to lessen the theft of automobiles in this state. The bill provides that upon registration of automobiles at the office of the state motor vehicle department the owner will be given a certificate of title. Upon sale of the vehicle, or conditional sale, the owner is to transfer his title to vendor and a record kept of the transfer. No certificate will be required for new automobiles up for sale.

It is believed that legislation of this kind will be of great benefit to dealers in second hand cars and will greatly lessen their chances of purchasing stolen cars in this state or elsewhere. Similar laws are in force in Indiana, Michigan, Maryland, and it is likely that Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York will adopt like legislation.

If the proposed legislation meets with the approval of Motor Vehicle Commissioner Robert E. Stoeckel and the board of directors of the state chamber, it is likely to be introduced in the legislature.

AUTOMOBILE STOLEN FROM BROADWAY SUNDAY NIGHT

Frederick Sayles of 110 Washington street reported to the police Sunday night that his new 1923 Ford coupe had been stolen from Broadway where he had parked it just down from the Broadway theater. The car had the 1923 license number 92-911.

No trace of the stolen car has been discovered but it is believed that it was driven towards Willimantic.

The theft of a Hudson car belonging to Otto Eames, 2501 Montauk avenue, New London, was reported Sunday to the New London police. The car was stolen from in front of Central Supply rine's cafe. A certain person known to the police was seen and talked to before they left the scene of the theft and the naval authorities in the New London police were notified. Both the car and the man in question could not be found.

BIT PIECE OUT OF WOMAN'S EAR IN FIGHT

Mrs. Mabel Gurley showed had the top of her ear bitten off Monday evening in a rough and tumble fight with Effie Allen, colored, in a tenement on the northwesterly corner of West Main street and Falls avenue where Effie Allen is housekeeper for Harry Fox.

The trouble between the women according to the story told the police came from making change out of a two dollar bill, which Mrs. Gurley gave Effie Allen to change. She expected to get a dollar back, but Effie kept it all. She then threw her out into the hallway and a piece of her ear off another was struggling on the stairs.

Mrs. Gurley complained to the police and Effie was arrested by Officer Patrick Keenan, while Mrs. Gurley had her torn ear bandaged at police headquarters by Dr. A. C. Freeman.

SHIVERING DOG WAS GUARD FOR BOY'S SLED

Some boy who visited the Otis Library Monday evening devised a novel yet cruel way to guard his sled while he was within the building. The sled had evidently come down on a hill strewn with his dog, one of the tiny Newfoundland canines that weighed only about 15 pounds. Not wishing to leave his sled outside unguarded he lashed the dog to the rear on the sled and left him within. The poor dog, too small to draw the sled, stood shivering with the cold, perched on top of the snowbank where the owner of the sled had placed it, patiently waiting for his master to come out and give him a chance to run and get warm again.

TOWNS PUNISH THEMSELVES BY UNLAWFUL EXEMPTIONS

In his report telling of $2,621,001 property in the state unlawfully exempted by various towns, among them Groton, Stonington, North Stonington, and Sprague in this county, Tax Commissioner W. H. Blodgett declares such exemptions were increased in the aggregate by $946,078, or 56.8 per cent. in the past four years, according to the tax commissioner's report. Twelve towns discontinued the practice during that period, but 12 others "adopted this unlawful method of exempting property from taxation in the same period of time."

Towns which engage in this practice, the commissioner pointed out, "not only punish themselves to the extent of the loss of revenue which would be derived, if such property were taxed, but another loss is sustained in every case by the assessment and collection of the state tax. The amount which would have been collected from the taxation of such property is included as part of the basis for the laying of the state tax.

Property valued by local assessors at $230,387,014 in the aggregate was exempted from taxation for various reasons in the several towns of the state at the beginning of last year, the commissioner's report shows, this being an increase of 40.2 per cent. over the total, $200,381,957, of such exemptions at the time of the last quadrennial report in 1918.

Except for the property "arbitrarily exempted" by town officials as stated above the exemptions which went to make the total of over a quarter billion were legitimate. The kinds of property in the general exempt list, with the aggregate of exemptions allowed for each were as follows:

Public schools	$48,494,306
Private schools, colleges, etc.	39,000,393
Ecclesiastical societies	47,783,567
Cemeteries	3,739,256
Benevolent and charitable societies and penal institutions, etc.	34,071,344
Scientific, literary, etc., societies	5,515,820
Public libraries	5,153,134
Agricultural societies	381,979
Soldiers, sailors and blind persons	9,205,659
Fire departments and hose companies	5,934,434
Public buildings not included above	38,127,126
Tree plantations	23,525
Parks and playgrounds	20,415,514
Miscellaneous statutory exemptions	30,400,646
Special exemptions by towns and assessors	2,621,001

Corporations and associations were the owners of property to the value of $163,... 464,835 which was exempted last year, an increase of 75.4 per cent. over the aggregate of $93,337,548 of such exemptions four years previous.

14.8 Per Cent. of List Exempt.

The report shows that 14.8 per cent. of the state is exempt from taxation. The increase in value of tax exempt property in 1918 over that of 1914 was 19 per cent. The increase of such property in 1923, over that of 1918, as reported by the assessors of several towns, was 40.2 per cent. "Therefore it is clear that the question of tax exemptions is no longer inconsequential or academic," the commissioner concludes.

Would Eliminate "Injustice."

"It is worth while," he continues, "that public attention be centered in the direction of tax exemptions, not only to the end that the practice of granting new exemptions be discontinued, but that such favors previously granted to organizations which may be ascertained to be no longer in need of further public support of this kind be withdrawn. Exemptions granted to associations similar to those which are demanding, but which have not received this favor should be withdrawn, rather than to permit injustice to continue or to again open the door to admit other property to escape taxation. No public favor of this kind should be extended to any property in which a competitive business enterprise is carried on. Any exemption of privately owned property is hateful and violative of conduct of a business enterprise, although when such property is used for the conduct of a business enterprise, the exemption itself becomes an instrument of advantage over those who pay taxes in support of organized society. Such an abuse of an exemption privilege justifies its prompt withdrawal. The rule is that where public revenue is raised by an advalorem tax, all property not belonging to the public should bear its fair share of the public burden. It may be impractical to reach the ideal in this respect, but the nearer it can be approached the better for the state and for all concerned."

In an effort to correct this situation, a bill was created by the legislative committee on finance two years ago which was calculated to withdraw tax exemptions from fraternal, semi-religious and semi-charitable societies. After a spirited hearing it was finally decided not to report the bill.

Narrows Down Taxable Property.

Scarcely a session of the general assembly adjourns without having extended in some manner or another its generous provisions to include property not previously made exempt from taxation," says the tax commissioner in his report. "No amendment in recent years has been enacted which in terms or by implication has in any way restricted exemptions previously granted. The language of this statute has generally received generous application by assessors. Notwithstanding all this, the demands upon the general assembly at each successive session for special exemptions is increased. Semi-charitable, semi-religious and fraternal societies and corporations, represented by worthy and public spirited citizens, contend that the particular society in which they have chosen to interest themselves should be permitted to own property which should be made free from bearing any part of the public burden. The contention is that taxation is a hardship and that the entire public should be interested in said particular enterprise that it should be encouraged to the extent of relieving it from paying taxes.

Those who take this position ignore the fact that the taking of property out of the tax list imposes additional burdens upon many others who own property and who can ill afford to pay any additional amount whatever. Nor is attention given to the further fact that the many who may be thus required to bear an additional tax burden, may not be in sympathy with the purposes for which the society receiving the exemption exists. It is clear that each person which owns tax exempt property is also being supported in part by taxpayers within the town where such exempt property is situated, in the case, and there are many cases where the taxing power is used for the distribution and support of [illegible] which the state, in the exercise of its power, being used [illegible] With reference to the commendable [illegible] be allowed to continue [illegible] property in which a business enterprise is carried on, [illegible] have been made by those whose property is [illegible] elimination is allowed to [illegible] and similar organizations which maintain cafeterias, lunch rooms and dormitories in competition, they believe, with public restaurants, hotels and lodging houses.

Tough Travel for Autos in Streets.

There was considerable comment Monday on the condition of the main streets in the city, muck and slush ankle deep prevailing on most of them. People were heard to remark that such conditions are new to Norwich, as in other years the streets have been cleared from snow as soon after a snow storm as was possible. This year, they say, the snow has been down since last Wednesday, and the city has been slow about ridding the streets, particularly Franklin square, of the slush and snow.

Broadway was a tough spot for automobiles Monday night, full of deep snow, ruts and humps that tossed the machines about and tested springs to the limit.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Monday morning from his home in Attawaugan the funeral of Thomas Hughes was held, with services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at 9 o'clock. Rev. Ignatius Kost, the pastor, being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. The bearers were James Monohan, John Farrell, Charles Hughes and Thomas Gannon. The body was placed in the receiving vault in St. Joseph's cemetary. Lotis E. Kennedy was the funeral director.

Final bulletin on the weather forecasting caterpillar: Monday brought information of the death in action of a caterpillar whose black head piece was alleged to foretell that the early part of the winter would be the most severe. This crawling prophet died while facing one of the series of northeasters that have occurred since he was first noticed ambling about the property of the Crystal Water company at the corner of Main and Hutchins street. Julian Rainville, a water company employe, discovered the remains and reported the earthly end of the caterpillar.

Arrival of about 150 tons of chestnut coal in the town of Killingly staved off a prospective coal famine for another brief period. This shipment is not nearly sufficient to meet more than a fraction of the orders dealers have on hand, some of these orders placed last summer, and is equivalent to tossing a bone to the pursuing wolves that they may be held off for another brief period. When one considers that there are approximately 9,000 people in the town of Killingly and that less than five per cent. of the families have only a meagre surplus of hard coal, 150 tons represents only an emergency ration. Every little bit helps, however, as every day brings spring just a little nearer at hand.

And in this real period of winter weather one may be excused for reflecting that strange indeed is an economic theory through the application of which the wives and children of union craftsmen in this corner of eastern Connecticut are made to worry, if not actually endure serious inconvenience bordering on suffering because union miners in Pennsylvania and other states could not during the past year reach a wage agreement with avaricious coal operators and those affiliated and associated with them. One is impressed that something fundamental is wrong when a fuel situation worse than any experienced during the World war is visited upon the people five years after the turning point in the great struggle was reached.

Quick action was obtained Monday in restoring the Joseph Dragon place, seriously damaged in the Sunday morning blaze on Railroad street. Carpenters, unheeding of the punishing northeast snowstorm that prevailed Monday morning, were on the job at the Dragon home, restoring the badly damaged roof, that the home might be closed in before night against the harshness of the weather. Complete repairs to the house will be made with all promptness, though the season is decidedly against carrying on such rebuilding operations.

Monday morning before Justice George Torrey at Central Village George A. Bedard, proprietor of a store and restaurant located near the railroad station at Central Village was fined $25 and costs for operating a place where gambling was allowed. The state police raided the place Saturday night and seized two slot machines and a punch board. A raffle board also was taken in the haul. One slot machine was a nickel affair, the other to attract pennies. The machines and boards were confiscated.

Clayton A. Brown of Attawaugan was also before Justice Torrey at Central Village Monday and was fined $25 and costs for reckless driving of a motor vehicle, at Wauregan on December 31, when the machine he was operating struck an injured a man named Mosier, who is said to have been out on the log. This case also was brought to Stoddard's conclusion by officers from the state police barracks in Danielson.

Having started out on the very first day of the year to make an exasperating weather record, January appeared to be trying to maintain its record on Monday when a sharp northeast snowstorm set in in the early morning and eventually changed to rain as the day wore on. This added storm, following so closely on the heels of weather disturbances of the past few days has added to transportation problems and for one thing is holding up the delivery of coal and wood from the surrounding country sections. There is now upwards of a foot of snow on the level where it has remained undisturbed in this corner of the state and some back roads remain unbroken since last week's storm. Monday morning's snow added three to four inches to what had already covered the country before it.

PUTNAM

Notwithstanding the thermometers were hovering just above the zero mark there was a large gathering in St. John's hall at 7 p. m. Sunday evening when a meeting in the interests of Americanization was held under the auspices of the French Canadian Cercle d'Advancement. A feature that added interest and pleasure to the program was the music by the Putnam High School orchestra, which volunteered its services in the interest of the movement. The gathering was presided over by Mayor Victor Chapdelaine, who is also president of the Cercle d'Advancement. After a few words of welcome he introduced Dr. G. T. Lamarche, town school physician, who talked at some length in French explaining the Americanization movement and also the advantages offered by the night school.

The next speaker was Robert C. Demming of Hartford, state director of Americanization. He spoke interestingly on the subject and pointed out the advantages of education in the English language and American customs and a familiarity with our form of government for the foreigner coming within the gates of the United States and adopting our country as their future home. The advantages of the night school in obtaining such knowledge was emphasized and the progress to be made by those ambitious to advance themselves and their families was depicted in a moving picture entitled, "The Making of an American" which followed the advancement of one coming to this country ignorant of the language and customs and taking advantage of opportunity such as offered by night schools, vocational training schools and other free institutions of learning. It is believed that the meeting will bear results in attracting foreign born citizens of Putnam to seek education through the fine night school maintained at the Putnam high school building under Supervisor Louis F. Flatley, who is also the local director of Americanization.

For the first time during the present school year the signal denoting that there would be but one session of the public schools was blown on the whistles of the H. K. H. Silk Company and the Putnam Foundry & Machine Corporation at 11.45 o'clock on Monday morning. The school committee some time ago took the stand that regular sessions of school would be held every school day except under the most extraordinary weather conditions for it has been found that on those days when there was no school or only one session of school because of the elements many of the children were out in the streets and it was argued if they were able to be out in the streets they were able to attend school. But Monday morning proved the contrary, as the children who had braved the outdoor elements to be able to attend school in many cases changed their minds as the morning progressed and in other schools the attendance was small. As the storm increased during the morning Superintendent of Schools Ralph C. Jenkins decided that it was best to declare one session.

The storm which broke early in the morning with a heavy snow fall increased in force and fury as it progressed when the snow changed to sleet making it by noon nearly a foot deep that had piled all kinds of travel. The motor bus line in the elements gradually began to lose time and by noon were off schedule. The New Haven road, however, reported that conditions were worse than usual and trains moved west of most any time in the business section there was little activity.

Shoe dealers did a good business in overshoes and rubbers and also did a good business had they had goods to sell. One shoe man said that he lost at least 25 sales because there are no overshoes available in the wholesale market. He accounts for the shortage in this commodity by the fact that many people, especially young people are wearing overshoes who never wore them before. This he points out is due to two reasons—it has become fashionable to wear high buckled overshoes and people are protecting themselves against colds to a greater degree than heretofore. The meeting of the town school board, which was to have been held Monday evening, was postponed a week on account of the storm and attendance at local theatres was meagre.

Negotiations are under way between a committee of the Arcanum club and the town committee that has charge of selling the so-called Gardner property on South Main street, left to the town by the late Mrs. John Gardner, which it is expected from the present statutes of the negotiations will result in the club finally owning its own home. A price, as yet undisclosed, has been agreed upon and the club will take action on the matter at a meeting to be held later in the week. The Arcanum club is the only independent, non-sectarian, non-political and non-society organization club in the city and it is hoped that if the deal is consummated to make it a representative city club.

The property being considered extends from South Main street through School street and includes a house on South Main street which is now rented by the club and a three tenement house fronting on School street fully occupied. The committee has devised financing plan whereby it is believed that the club can be made self supporting and put on a sound financial basis. It is the oldest club in the city and for years occupied the building on Main street recently purchased by the Putnam Savings Bank necessitating the club's vacating the premises.

Funeral services for Mrs. Keyeren Cotter, who died at the Day Kimball hospital early Friday morning following an operation Thursday afternoon were held from Holy Trinity church, Pomfret, Monday morning. Rev. J. J. Eley celebrating a high mass of requiem. Burial was in the St. Mary's cemetary, Putnam following the mass.

Henry N. and Eva M. Withey of Thompson have bought from the Elizabeth Segar estate the so-called Segar place on Brandy Hill in the town of Thompson just west of the Baptist church.

There is a prevalence of severe colds in Putnam in some instances whole families being confined at home. Doctors are advising in all such cases that those afflicted remain indoors as a pneumonia preventive.

Mrs. Albert Ralston and child, who recently underwent minor operations in a Pawtucket hospital, have returned to their home on School street.

Putnam lodge of Elks will initiate a class of candidates entitled to the degree at the regular meeting of the order Tuesday evening. Following the initiation and business session there will be a social session at which a buffet luncheon will be served.

Editor John J. Whitehead, Jr., has returned to Putnam after spending the week-end with friends in New York.

One of the largest congregations that ever gathered in the Second Congregational church was out Sunday morning to welcome the new pastor, Rev. Simeon E. Cozad who arrived in Putnam last week to begin his new pastorate.

Mrs. William Barbour and children have removed from East Thompson to Brooklyn, N. Y., where Mr. Barbour has secured a position.

Herbert E. Smith of Omaha, Neb., a former aviator, has been the guest of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smith, Bradley street.

Word was received in Putnam Monday morning of the death Sunday night at a private hospital in Worcester of Sarah D., widow of Edmond Stratton, a veteran of the Civil war. Mrs. Stratton was born in Cambridge, Vermont, December 19th, 1856, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Goodwin. Mr. Stratton died in 1909 and for the past several years Mrs. Stratton and her mother, Mrs. Sarah D. Pellett, have lived together on Wilkinson street. Mrs. Stratton had lived in Putnam 33 years.

A few weeks ago she suffered a nervous breakdown and went to visit her daughter, Mrs. Carrie Griggs in Abington. As she seemed to grow worse she was taken to the Worcester hospital in the hopes that she would respond to treatment. Her death came unexpectedly and was a shock to her many friends in this city where she has lived so long. Mrs. Stratton did not belong to any societies but was a regular attendant of the Congregational church. Besides her mother and daughter already mentioned she leaves one son, Harry Stratton, of this city.

The hard snow storm of Monday morning subsided during the early afternoon allowing a good sized gathering to attend the annual open meeting of Elizabeth Putnam Chapter, D. A. R. held in the chapter rooms on Pomfret street at three o'clock. The hostesses for the event were:

Mrs. S. M. Warner, chairman; Mrs. L. E. Leach, Mrs. J. B. Kent, Miss Harriet H. Brown, Mrs. Omer J. Milot, Mrs. S. Nikoloff, Miss Marjorie C. Bradford, Mrs. C. F. Hopkins, Mrs. Genevieve Letters, Miss Anna Sampson, Miss Eleanor C. Carpenter, Mrs. George R. Harrington, Mrs. Hattie C. Bownen, Mrs. G. Stanley Shaw, Miss Emma J. Kinney and Mrs. Helen P. Torrey. It was expected that Dr. Loring Holmes Dodd of Worcester would be present to make an address on "Whitman and After" and that Mrs. Ida Spalding Masters of Woodstock would sing but as the storm was so severe they were informed early in the morning not to try to reach Putnam. It was however decided not to postpone the annual meeting and a literary program and instrumental and vocal selections were rendered by members after which refreshments were served.

At the regular meeting of Anselm Mayotte Post, American legion, held in the legion rooms on Main street, Monday night, the newly elected officers were installed. Charles H. Williams of Moosup made a report of his trip to the national convention and there was a smoke talk with refreshments served during the evening.

Mrs. Alice Carpenter, South Main street, has gone with her daughters Miss Mary Carpenter, to Sweet Bria, Va. Miss Carpenter is a teacher in the southern city and her mothe will remain with her until the close of the school year.

While there have been rumors that the "Legislative Special" a train that during the last session of the legislature left this city for Hartford shortly after eight o'clock, was to be returned to the run again it has not made its appearance as yet and no word that it is to go on the run has been received at the local ticket office. Members of the general assembly either have to take a train about six o'clock in the morning or wait until shortly after ten o'clock for the New York express which it inconvenient reaching the capital.

WESTERLY

Fred S. Opie has returned to his duties at the P. H. Opie Co. after a brief illness.

The funeral of Mrs. Charles S. Wilbur was held Sunday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George B. Utter, of Grove avenue. Rev. William F. Williams of Stonington former rector of the Episcopal church of Westerly, officiated at the services. The body was taken to Haverhill, Mass. for burial.

Professor Williston, sleight-of-hand expert, gave an entertainment Monday evening at the Colonial club on High street. There was also a bridge game which is part of the bridge tournament being conducted at the club.

The Westerly Music club met Monday evening at the home of Miss Dorothy Ward on Elm street. Willard Kelgwin of Mystic and Miss Florence Levy of Boston featured at the meeting.

Daniel F. Larkin, past commander of Merrill post of Westerly, and present state vice president for Washington county, will attend a meeting next Saturday in Providence of the Rhode Island department executive committee of the American Legion which is to be held at the Hotel Dreyfus in that city.

Archie D. Marr was recently presented a gift of gold at a meeting of Craigiella lodge, No. 112. The presentation was made by Chief Daughter Margaret Greenman.

Peter P. Palmer of Woodville was a business caller in town Monday.

Joseph Coduri and son have returned from a business trip to New York city.

Ernest Gulley was a caller in New London Sunday.

The Brown building quartet—consisting of Messrs. Moore, Farnham, Roche and Gold—are preparing to make a public appearance in Westerly in the near future.

STONINGTON

Assistant Charles E. Main of the Stonington fire department, who has served many years in that capacity has been unanimously chosen as chief engineer of the department, to take the place of the late Ed P. Tyrell. Charles H. McCoart has been chosen assistant chief. Mr. Main has held the position as assistant chief since Sept. 11, 1903.

Ocean View Commandery, W. O. G. C., have chosen the following officers for the ensuing year: Noble commander, Mrs. Mary McCafferty; vice noble commander, Mrs. J. B. Gallup; keeper of records, Mrs. Joseph Delagrange; collector, Mrs. Louise Ballam; treasurer, Mrs. Isabella Armstrong; chaplain, Mrs. Miss B. Patterson; herald, Charles Harriet Burch; warder, inner gate, W. Fred Williams; warder, outer gate, Mrs. Wilbur; representative, Mrs. Amelia Mercantey; alternate, Mrs. Joseph Mary Mercantey; alternate, Mrs. Joseph line Delagrange.

The officers of Nina council, D. of L. were installed at the K. of C. home on Main street Sunday afternoon. The work was done by Mrs. Clara O. Clancy district deputy of New Haven. The members entertained at a dinner for their guests from Norwich, New London, Mystic and Westerly.

With the large amount of snow on the ground here and with a driving rain and hail storm, which struck in here about 7 o'clock Monday morning, travel, both walking and automobiling, was hazardous. The Shore Line electrics made good time.

Inasmuch as one-half of the village of Mystic is situated in the town of Groton, and one-half in the town of Stonington, the people here are materially interested in the new proposed high school building. If this is to materialize, the students in the Groton section of Mystic will have a fine new building of their own, as a $300,000 structure located at Fosmoso may be erected soon. The present plans call for a modern building three stories high, 12 class rooms, one drawing, two manual art for girls, two manual art for boys, one biology and science, one physics, one chemistry, two commercial, four administration, one library, one lunch, one gymnasium, one auditorium, beside corridors, vestibule and boiler rooms. The building is to be about 130 feet front, and 142 feet in depth, fire proof throughout and will be built of either cement blocks or stone or brick.

Mrs. Norman R. Spring of Washington, D. C., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. King of Mistuxet avenue.

The island at Williams Pond has been purchased by the T. Buhler Company of New York, as a summer resort for its employees. The island contains a seven-room summer home, which will be altered along with other extensive changes to the resort.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

The first week in January did not start off with the boom that was expected largely due to the fact that the weather has been very unfavorable to building conditions. Little progress was made on buildings in the city outside of small inside jobs that were not effected by the snow and ice. No building permits were granted or any application received at the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton during the past week. This is to be expected owing to the fact that this is the height of the slack season in building. So far this winter the number of building permits issued far exceeds the number issued in any previous year.

According to the Commercial Record statistics of building permits issued in Bridgeport, Hamden, Hartford, Meriden, New Britain, New Haven, New London, Norwalk, Stamford and Waterbury, show 48 permits granted in these places during the week, for buildings costing $311,468, against 82 permits in the same week of 1922, for buildings the cost of which was $431,904, and 57 in 1921, the cost of buildings being $572,238.

There has been some progress made on the inside work of the remodeling of several buildings in the city and even some cement work has been done by the aid of heaters. Plans are being drawn for a number of new buildings under consideration and work is to be started on these as soon as the weather permits.

Several projects in the city that were well along when the bad weather set in have been completed and are ready for occupancy. Contractors report that the remarkable boom of 1922 bids fair to continue through the present year and other building records will be set.

Try This Way

Combat the film on teeth

Every careful man or woman should learn what it means to fight film.

Dentists urge it. Millions of people have profited by it. All the world over are seen the results, such as you would gladly have.

Ask for this 10-Day Tube.

Film is dingy

You feel on your teeth a viscous film. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush used in old ways does not effectively combat it. So countless teeth are dimmed and ruined by it.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. It forms the basis of cloudy coats. Tartar is based on film. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

New methods now

Dental science has in late years found two ways to fight that film. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, without any harmful scouring. Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research, and those two great film combatants were embodied in it.

The name of that tooth paste is Pepsodent—now advised by leading dentists the world over. It does what nothing else has done.

Two other needs

Investigators also found two other things essential. So Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Some 50 nations use it

Careful people of some 50 nations now use Pepsodent, largely by dental advice. You see the results in glistening teeth wherever you go today.

Make the test we offer. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. One week will convince you that this new way brings results you need. Cut out the coupon now.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, it does the work without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Gained Strength, Weight, and Now Doing Own Work by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Marion, Ind.—"I was all run-down, nervous and bent over. I could hardly drag around, let alone do my work. I read some letters in the papers telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and I thought I would try it. Then a man told my husband about his wife and what good it had done her and wanted him to have me try it. I took one bottle and could see what it did for me in a week's time, and when I had taken three bottles I had gained both in strength and weight and was doing my own work. I took it before my last baby was born and it helped me so much. I sure am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who suffers from female ailments, for I know by experience what it can do. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, also the Liver Pills, too, and think them fine."—Mrs. Wm. ELDRIDGE, 620 E. Grant Street, Marion, Indiana.

A record of nearly fifty years service should convince you of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

SOLDIERS READY TO GUARD RUSSIAN CROWN JEWELS

New York, Jan. 8—While soldiers patrolled the snowy mounds of the national cemetery at Cypress Hills, Brooklyn, guarding the grave of Seaman Samuel Jones, reported to contain $4,000,000 of Russian crown jewels, United States customs experts tonight decided that if the jewels are found they shall be handed over to the nearest kin of the assassinated Czar Nicholas.

Officials admitted that a check-up of progress in the case warranted their preparations for disposing of the gems—if and when they are recovered.

By a precedent dating back to 1831, said Edward Barnes, assistant solicitor for the customs service, in New York, the Russian jewels would not only go to the legal heirs of the czar but the informants who brought about the discovery of the gems would be entitled to nothing. When Andrew Jackson was president the gems of the princess of Orange were stolen by a man named Palori and brought to this country, where they were seized by the customs.

President Jackson held they should be returned to the princess. Roger B. Taney, famous justice of the United States supreme court, upheld President Jackson's ruling. In his decision, justice Taney said:

"Property thus obtained and thus introduced against the consent of the owner, stands on the same footing with that which is case upon our shores by the violence of the winds and waves, and is entitled to the same protection. It is not liable to forfeiture in either case, and the innocent owner shall not be visited with that penalty for an act which it was not of his power to prevent."

MRS. EDITH THOMPSON TO BE HANGED IN LONDON TODAY

London, Jan. 8—(By the A. P.)—Mrs. Edith Thompson and Frederick Bywaters will pay the extreme penalty by hanging tomorrow morning for the murder of the woman's husband, Percy Thompson. A dramatic last-hour effort was made in behalf of the woman by her solicitor, Mr. Stern, who rushed by automobile last night to the Shropshire country home of the secretary for home affairs, William C. Bridgeman, in an endeavor to secure a stay of execution. But this was without avail.

The solicitor's effort was mainly on Bywater's solemn and vehement reiteration alleged to have been made on Saturday to his mother and other relatives that Mrs. Thompson was innocent. The lawyer argued that while it was true Bywaters had made the same assertion at the trial, he now had nothing to gain and it was inconceivable that a man would go to his doom with a lie on his lips.

The home secretary, however, replied that Bywaters' declaration of Mrs. Thompson's innocence had been made before and had not been believed.

Late this afternoon the home secretary caused a communique to be issued, stating that "after full consideration of all the representations made to him, he finds no grounds to depart from his decision."

Crowds lingered this evening around the gates of Holloway Jail, where at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning the first execution of a woman in sixteen years will take place, simultaneously Bywaters will be hanged in Pentonville Prison.

WOMAN WHO FED CATS IS DYING FROM STARVATION

New York, Jan. 8.—The "Cat Woman of Avenue B" was in Bellevue hospital tonight, dying from starvation.

Cat Woman is the name neighbors gave to Mary Bosarti, a queer little woman who never smiled, who moved to the avenue two years ago. Beyond the fact that she loved cats and fed every feline prowler in the neighborhood once a day, just after nightfall, the neighbors never learned a thing about her.

Mrs. John McGowan, who lived in the next apartment to Mrs. Bosarti, tried time and again to question her, and even invited her to supper once. But Mary Bosarti wouldn't talk about herself; neither would she accept any supper invitations. So Mrs. McGowan shook her head and gave it up.

All day long, even in the hot summer time, the cat woman stayed indoors. Then, as night came, she would go around the corner to the dairy for her daily purchase of six quarts of milk. Returning, she would pour the milk in some dozen saucers on the pavement in front of her apartment. There was always a scrambling bunch of cats awaiting her.

But the cat woman seemed to have a strange influence over them. She would talk in a low tone and they would quietly await their turn at the saucers.

The weather being bad for the last week, the cat woman's neighbors didn't pay much attention to her. They had become used to her habits. But last night the neighborhood was disturbed for several hours by the wailing of hungry cats gathered before their mistress' window. A policeman finally shooed them away.

This morning Mrs. McGowan, curious, knocked at the cat woman's door, heard a faint moan and called other residents of the house.

The found Mary Bosarti, starving, surrounded by more than two hundred empty milk bottles.

Dr. A. A. Brill, of New York, in his study of 400 cases of patients who had been only or favorite children, found that only ninety-three of them had married, though their average age was thirty-four, says a writer in McClure's Magazine. In his opinion most of them remained bachelors because they were unduly dominated by their attachment to their parents.

WAS ALMOST A NERVOUS WRECK

Says Wincarnis Restored Her Health

"Ten months ago I began to lose my strength. My household duties became burdensome. I felt exhausted after the slightest exertion. Then my nerves got so bad that at the slightest noise I used to tremble, my legs would shake and my heart beat violently causing me to gasp for breath. One afternoon a friend called to see me and she was shocked at my pitiable condition. She went out and bought a bottle of 'Wincarnis' and gave me a dose right away. I continued taking 'Wincarnis' three times a day and its effect has been almost miraculous. Gradually but surely my strength came back, a color came into my cheeks, my nerves grew steady and it seemed as if I had taken a new lease on life. Today I am a very happy woman because I am well."

MINUTE AND RESOLUTION

passed at regular meeting of Directors, New London County Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Monday, Jan. 8th, 1923:

William H. Prothero, Treasurer of this Company for nearly twenty years, died at his home in Norwich on Sunday, Jan. 7th, 1923.

Mr. Prothero's death came as a great shock on the eve of this regular quarterly meeting of the Directors of the Company, who realize that a vacancy exists which will be exceedingly difficult to fill. Elected to the Treasurorship on Feb. 2d, 1905, Mr. Prothero at once took up the duties with rare energy and faithfulness to his responsibilities. Never did he fail at the time of necessity though during the years of service his service unusual demands were made upon him, through the rapid growth of the Company. As Treasurer, he saw the business of the Company increase four-fold and its resources more than trebled.

With deep conviction of our loss, be it therefore,

Resolved, That this minute be made a part of the permanent records of the Company, and that a copy of it be transmitted to Mr. Prothero's family with expression of our deep sympathy in the loss they mourn.

Attest: W. F. LESTER, Secretary.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

New York, Jan. 8—Price movements in today's dull and irregular stock market were unimpressive, traders generally adopting a hesitant attitude pending more definite developments in the foreign situation. Saturday's reaction, coming somewhat as a surprise, induced further selling at today's opening, but the offerings were well absorbed and the resumption of special buying movements in individual shares had a steadying effect on the rest of the list.

Chief interest in the financial markets centered in the weakness of French bonds and the further collapse in German mark, which finally sold as low as a penny a hundred, compared with 1 1-8 cents a hundred less than three weeks ago and 8 cents a hundred early last September. French francs, which were selling at 7.41 cents last Tuesday, dropped to 6.68. Belgian francs also sold nearly 3-4 of a cent below last week's high, being quoted at 6.15 cents, while the Italian lira again dropped below the 5 cent mark, selling at 4.90. Sterling held steady around $4.64 1-2. French government and municipal bonds sold off 1 to 2 points.

Crucible yielded 2 1-2 points to selling pressure in the first half hour, made up its loss and then dropped back to 68 7-8, where it was off 1 1-8 on the day. American and Baldwin Locomotives were each off nearly two points, the former recovering all but 1-8 and the latter closing at a net gain of 3-4. Bethlehem B. closed at a net gain of 1 1-8 and Stedebaker, which fluctuated within a range of 2 points, ended 5-8 over Saturday's close.

Oil shares also had their ups and downs; Pan American A and B changing early losses of more than a point each to net gains of 2 1-2 and 2 points, respectively. Cosden common and preferred and general Asphalt each closed a point higher.

Other strong spots were American Can, Associated Dry Goods, Continental Can, Consolidated Gas, Corn Products, Crucible Steel preferred, Eastman Kodak, General Baking, General American Tan Car, Savage Arms, Steel & Tube preferred, Stromberg Carburetor, Stewart Warner Speedometer, Woolworth, Wells Fargo Express, Manhattan Electrical Supply and International Nickel preferred, the gains running from 1 to 5 points. Atlantic Refining closed 8 points higher. Some of the outstanding weak spots were Elkhorn Coal preferred, Jewel Tea preferred, Montana Power, Otis Elevator, Sloss Shaffield preferred and Lorillard Tobacco, the losses ranging from 3 to 6 points.

Rail shares lagged behind the rest of the list. The only noteworthy changes being a point gain in Chesapeake & Ohio and a break of 3 3-4 points in "Clover Leaf."

Call money opened at 4 1-4 per cent, advanced to 4 1-2 and thence to 5, where it closed. The bulk of the time money business was done on a 4 3-4 per cent. basis although a few 45 day loans were placed at 4 1-2 per cent. Commercial Paper rates were inclined to easy. The majority of prime names commanding 4 1-2 per cent.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 8—France's apparent determination to invade the Ruhr brought about a heavy selling of French and Belgian securities in today's bond market. The heaviness of these issues having a depressing effect on the general list, particularly the railroad lines. U. S. government securities were firm with the exception of liberty 3 1-2s, which yielded 4 cents on $100. Reflecting the competition of some of the new municipal issues. The other active government bonds showed gains of 2 to 14 cents. The new treasury 4 1-4s crossing par and closing at 100.02.

French 5s, Seine 7s, and Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean 6s, each dropped 2 points while issues of 1 to 1 1-4 took place in French 7 1-2s, Belgian 8s, 7 1-2s and 8s. Bordeaux 6s, Lyons 6s, and Marseilles 6s. Other weak spots in the foreign group were Czecho-Slovakian 8s, Denmark 8s, City of Montevedio 8s, and Mexican 5s, all off 1 to 1 1-2 points. Zurich 8s and Dominican Republic 5 1-2s each closed a point higher. British bonds held steady.

Illinois Central Refunding 4s, which dropped 2 1-4 points, was the weakest spot in the railroad list, losses of 1 1-2 to 2 points being sustained by Norfolk & Western Convertible 4s, Denver & Rio Grande Improvement 5s and Delaware & Hudson Refunding 4s. Heaviness also cropped out in Frisco Adjustment 6s, Rio Convertible 4s, series D., St. Poul, Puget Sound 4s, New Haven 4s of 1957, Chicago & Alton 3 1-2s, Lake Shore 4s of 1928 and Chicago & Great Western 4s, all off 1 to 1 1-2 points.

There were a few strong spots in the industrial list, notably Laclede Gas 5s, up 3 3-4 points; Chile Copper 7s, up 2 1-4 and Cerro de Pasco 8s, Liggett & Myers 7s and Remington Arms 6s, each up a point. Magma Copper 7s, Bush Terminal 6s and U. S. Rubber 7 1-2s, each dropped a point.

Total sales (par value), were $13,473,000.

Two large public offerings were oversubscribed. These were the $50,000,000 issue of 5 1-2 per cent. bonds of Armour & Co., of Delaware, which were put out to yield 5.85 per cent. and the $12,500,000 issue of 4 1-4 per cent 1922 Equipment Trust certificates of the New York Central railroad.

TAFTVILLE

A heavily loaded truck stalled traffic on Post Office hill for about two hours Monday morning, when, as it was trying to make the hill, it slid into a drift and finally the rear wheels of the truck settled against the curb on the side of the street. Several other trucks collected about the one which was stalled, and finally after a great deal of digging to get the wheels free of the snow bank, a rope was tied to the truck and dragged out by another. The traffic block caused a large number of spectators to collect many of them helping to get the truck back into the road.

MURDER ATTEMPT IN GROCERY STORE IN NEW LONDON, SHOOTER ESCAPES

Pulling a revolver and shooting without any known reason, Joseph Venditti wounded Dominick Mariolo in a New London grocery store Monday afternoon about 5 o'clock and is now sought by the police on the charge of attempted murder.

Mariolo escaped, but Venditti was taken to the Lawrence hospital, where at first little hope was held out for his recovery. The bullet entered the man's side in the region of the kidneys, but a complete examination disclosed that it had made little more than a superficial wound and Venditti will probably be discharged in a day or two, it was reported Monday night.

According to the police report Mariolo showed that he had been drinking when he came into the grocery store on Woodbridge street near Shaw. He was leaning on the counter when he suddenly pulled out a gun and shot Venditti, who happened to be there. He fled from the store while his victim was hurried to the hospital.

The police sent out a general alarm for Mariolo, who is described as an Italian 30 years old, 5 feet, 8 inches, 160 pounds, light complexion, smooth face, and wearing brown coat, dark trousers, soft brown hat.

Mariolo recently came to New London from Lancaster, N. Y., and had been employed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

CONNECTICUT STRIKES LESS IN LAST TWO YEARS

"The past two years have been remarkable free from labor trouble," says Labor Commissioner William S. Hyde in a printed report submitted to the governor.

"There were but 62 strikes or lockouts, as compared with 280 for the preceding period. The number of employes affected were but 8,959, as compared with 75,543 of two years ago. The loss of days to the employers was reduced from 4,155 to 1,869 and the loss of days of the employe from 1,397,603 days to 805,190. In five cases only the demands of the employes were granted in full. Twenty-three cases were settled by compromise and 35 were unsuccessful," continues Commissioner Hyde.

Other significant statements in the report follow:

"The business depression for the past two years is shown in the decline of new factory construction throughout the state. The value of the new building is approximately one-third that of the preceding 2 years, while the actual number of buildings shows an even greater decline."

"The erection of tenement houses shows the same depression as in other lines of industry. The most marked falling off was in the number of tenement houses which were constructed of brick, as there were only 85 of brick as compared with 271 for the preceding period.

Commissioner Hyde recommends that occupational diseases be placed under the supervision of the board of health rather than having them reported to the department of labor and factory inspection as at present.

The report shows that there are 193 labor organizations in this state affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and 237 independent of it.

MEAD IN DANNEMORA, WANTED IN NEW LONDON

James Mead, 44, an alleged dope fiend, who broke into several local New London offices on June 17, 1920, and who later was sentenced to the New London jail from which he escaped on October 20, 1920, has been located by the police, through the aid of the New York prison department at Albany, N. Y. Mead escaped from jail while enjoying yard freedom as a trusty prisoner.

He was subsequently rearrested on Nov. 29, 1921, under a different name and sentenced to five years in the Dannemora jail, in Dannemora, N. Y. He was arrested under the name of James Allen and was found guilty of having robbed a dentist's office. Mead claims to come from Fairmount, W. Va., and seems to make the breaks into dentists' offices more to secure dope than for actual robbery, though he usually does take all the loot gold on hand. The New York authorities have informed the New London police that by sending a warrant they may secure the arrest of Mead when his prison term expires.

NORWICH TOWN

In the First Congregational chapel Monday evening, before an interested and enthusiastic audience, John C. Hinrichs, D. C., gave an intensely interesting address on The Truth of Chiropractic, at the January meeting of the Norwich Town Men's League, which also included women friends.

At the close of his address Dr. Hinrichs was applauded by the audience. The speaker answered several questions and was given a rising vote of thanks on motion of Rev. Gordon F. Bailey of the executive committee. Henry A. Frazier, chairman of the executive committee, presided over the business session during which Francis Gilman was elected to membership in the league.

Avery helpful and comforting service was held at the Sheltering Arms Sunday afternoon, when Thomas P. Bachelor of East Town street officiated, assisted by Miss Helen Lathrop Perkins and Mrs. Gardiner Greene. Clyde M. Beebe led in prayer and Miss Louise Fuller was the accompanist at the piano. Several hymns were given which included Nearer, My God, to Thee, and Jesus Lover, of My Soul. Scripture readings were Luke 2. 40, to the finish; and John 1:18. John 3: 16-17, was the text. For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved.

The address by Mr. Bachelor follows: These were toasts on the celebration of Christmas, the birth of Christ. Very little reference was made to that, except that He was born like any one of us; but possible in poorer circumstances, than we. He was lost by His parents in Jerusalem, as other boys are lost. At His father's death He became the support of the family, because He was the oldest. He became a master-builder, a contractor or builder of houses; that is why in His parables we hear so much of foundations and buildings. While He was about His earthly father's business. He was in preparation for attending to His Heavenly Father's business. Most of what we know is crowded into His three years' ministry. His ministry is ended by His death on the cross, attended by such circumstances as the centurian said: Surely this was the Son of God and His resurrection and ascension, and because He was raised, if we accept this Gift as a Saviour, we shall be raised also.

Miss Perkins and Mrs. Green were in excellent voice and their beautiful numbers were an important feature of the service. The Birthday of a King, given by Miss Perkins, was especially pleasing.

ROCKVILLE YOUTH AT 24 TAKES FIRST TRAIN RIDE

Coming to this city from Rockville on business connected with workmen's compensation, a young man of that town who is 24 years old told Commissioner J. J. Donohue last week that this was the first time he had ever ridden on a railroad train. He had never ridden that way before, he said, because he didn't believe in getting on trains, but he had to make part of this trip by train and part by trolley.

One part of his journey that was of much interest was the trolley ride through Baltic, Occum and Taftville, he said. He had heard a lot about these places and had always wanted to see them. He thought they were quite sizeable towns and found much of interest to look at as the trolley carried him along.

PREACHING ON CHRISTIAN RESPONSIBILITY IN WORLD

The Connecticut Federation of Churches announces, in response to the suggestion made to the ministers of Connecticut that they address their congregations upon the subject of "The World Crisis and Christian Responsibility", that responses have already been received from over one hundred pastors, indicating that this theme has lately been presented to their congregations or that it will be so presented during the month of January.

From the returns received it is evident that there is a general movement among Connecticut clergymen without regard to denomination or location, in favor of a more definite acceptance of responsibility by this nation in world affairs.

The text of the appeal follows:

Dear Brethren in the Ministry:

The world is confronted by a most serious crisis. No man of thoughtful mind can blind himself to the disintegrating forces that threaten civilization. It is no time for easy optimism but for a stern and resolute facing of facts.

Another world-war is possible. Some say it is being prepared. If it should come it would be destructive on a scale hitherto unknown. It might compass the utter collapse of modern civilization.

Certain it is that historic causes of conflict still persist in national rivalries and aggressive policies. These will have their inevitable issue so long as the war-system remains as the court of last appeal.

This system, as the instrument of aggression, is condemned at the bar of public opinion. The spirit of humanity denounces it as intolerable. It is contrary to the fundamental principles of our democracy. It violates the heart of Christianity. As men, as citizens and as Christians we seek it as a system and to provide a proper substitute.

At such a time as this the church of Jesus Christ can not be silent. Over against the system that so readily leads to war she not only urges her ideals of brotherhood for the individual but as a constructive agent in human society she must promote an organization of mankind in harmony with her ideals and lending itself to the spirit of the Master.

Civilization finds itself in default because nations in their relations to each other are not thoroughly organized on the basis of justice and goodwill. Our civilization breaks down at the national boundaries. The mind of Christ can not function fully or effectively under the present order.

Some way must be found to base all human relations, not only personal but now particularly national, on a foundation where justice shall be the accepted standard. The will to good must be given a chance throughout the entire scale of human interests. Deference to the law of right inherent in man, now generally accredited by individuals, is the unmistakable requirement for international stability and peace.

Our Christian conviction is urgent that the U. S. shall find ways of cooperation with other nations to avert the likelihood of war. A permanent relation should be established corresponding to the vital interests already actually involved. It is disheartening and unworthy of our noblest ideals for our nation to stand aloof when the needs of humanity are so pressing.

We commend the proposed participation of the U. S. in the Permanent Court of International Justice. We approve the informal cooperation our Government is now giving to the League of Nations along the lines of humanitarian interests. We urge the importance of some properly constituted association as an instrument of international understanding and cooperation. We should welcome a conference of nations, called by our President, to consider ways and means of re-construction in a sadly disordered world.

We are convinced that something must be done and that right speedily to solve the grave and menacing problems and to bring mankind to a new level of reliance on the principles of justice intercepted in this free and open conference and maintained by cooperation.

Among those who have spoken upon the subject or, who have indicated that they will do so are the following:

New London County—Rev. P. S. Collins, Rev. E. C. Dunbar, Rev. F. C. Williams, Norwich; Rev. W. L. Mutart, Preston; Rev. Kenneth Mackenzie, Westport; Rev. Myron E. Genter, New London; Rev. F. S. Leathers, East Lyme; Rev. E. B. Day, Yantic. Northeastern Connecticut—Rev. F. W. Tholen, Stafford; Rev. F. H. Bigelow, Rev. J. Spencer Voorhees, Pomfret; Rev. T. D. Childs, Moosup; Rev. John R. Pratt, Brooklyn.

WANTS WOMEN PRISONERS PUT ON STATE FARM

The directors of the Connecticut state prison at Wethersfield puts in a strong argument in their annual report for the removal of all women convicts and the discontinuance of the women's ward.

There are ten women in the state prison who would be affected by such a policy. Among these is Mrs. Mabel Kenyon of Pawcatuck, who is serving a sentence of from 10 to 15 years for shooting and killing Dr. George Tallow. In their recommendation to Governor Templeton the directors said:

"It is the judgment of the directors that the state should develop its farm for women and send there all women who merit prison confinement, including those guilty of capital crimes. Other states have worked this problem out successfully and we feel sure that if Connecticut will make the necessary investigation the conviction will be reached that the penitentiary is not the place for the few women sent there, and that an institution in which all women of the criminal class are confined would best serve the interests of society." The alternative is to extend the women's quarters at the prison and provide more room for their recreation. At present, female prisoners have only a small court in which to exercise.

"The philosophy which supports this recommendation," the statement continued, "relaxes none of the horror of this major phase of criminal indulgence nor does it modify and minimize the sternness of society's attitude towards it. It proceeds in the hope that even this class of offenders may both propitiate their crimes according to the requirements of the law and yet be restored to a useful and creditable place among their fellow creatures. Admitting this class to possible parole rights would go far to clarify the study of penology and hasten the solution of the problem involved."

There are now ten women in the prison who would be transferred to the state farm at Niantic, if the recommendation of the prison directors is adopted by the legislature.

"It has long been the conviction of the directors that life prisoners should be eligible to parole after 25 years' imprisonment."

There are ten women in the prison who would be transferred to the state farm if the recommendation of the prison directors should be adopted. Six of them are serving sentences for murder, Mrs. Amy E. Archer Gilligan, of Windsor, Bessie Wakefield, Mrs. Mabel Kenyon of Pawcatuck, Mrs. Alexandra Sokolowski of New Haven and Mrs. George B. Nott of Bridgeport are convicted murderesses now within the prison walls.

Earnings from prison labor during the last fiscal year aggregated $130,464.13, and for the previous year $152,215.14. Additional miscellaneous earnings brought the total for the last year to $148,520.50.

INCREASE MAKES MAYNARD HAPPY

Says Tanlac Removed Stomach Trouble and Added 15 Pounds to His Weight.

"Stomach trouble couldn't get far with me again, because it'll never catch me without Tanlac. The reason I am so strong for Tanlac is that it brought me from misery to health and built me up fifteen pounds." This emphatic statement was made by Victor Maynard, of the Nichols Construction Co., residing at 41 Foote St., New Haven, Conn.

"For one long year," he said, "my stomach was in such fearful shape I couldn't eat a thing without suffering afterwards. Gas bloated me up till I had to loosen my clothes, my nerves were shattered and I got so run down I had to give up a good job and get lighter work. I couldn't sleep nights and was losing weight gradually.

"But I'm the same as a new man now. My nerves are like steel, I sleep like a top, eat anything I want and feel full of energy. If anybody wants to know more about Tanlac, let them come to me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good drug-

SYMPTOMS OF TUBERCULOSIS BUT WITHOUT BACILLI

"Have these patients tuberculosis or some less serious disease. This was the question submitted at Undercliffe, the Meriden state tuberculosis sanitorium, Monday to the assembled tuberculosis specialists who, comprise the medical staffs at the five sanatoria of Connecticut by Dr. Cole B. Gibson, superintendent, and Dr. William Caroll, assistant superintedent, as they pointed to a dozen patients that had all the signs and symptoms of consumption, but in whom no tubercle bacillia were found. The patients themselves were carefully examined, X-ray pictures of their lungs were taken, and finally it was demonstrated that all of the patients were hosts to a germ which had a few of the characteristics of the tubercle bacillus but was different in so many ways as to deserve a different classification.

The discussion of the paper showed that it raised the serious question whether the human tubercle bacillus is a fixed type or whether it is only one phase of a bacterial cycle.

The members of the state tuberculosis commission were present at the meeting and afterwards examined the new combination school house and recreation hall which is now ready for occupancy at Undercliffe.

POETRY

THE PROMISE OF BREAD.

Out on the frozen uplands, underneath the snow and sleet,
In the bosom of the plowlands sleeps the Promise of the Wheat;
With the ice for head and footstone, and a snowy shroud outspread,
In the frost-locked tomb of winter sleeps the Miracle of Bread!
With its hundred thousand reapers and its hundred thousand men,
And the click of guard and sickle and the flails that turn again,
And drover's shout, and snap of whips, and of horses' tugs,
And a thin red line o' gingham girls that carry water jugs;
And yellow stalks and dagger beards that stab thro' cotton clothes,
And farmer boys a-shocking wheat in long and crooked rows,
And dust-veiled men on mountain stacks, Whose pitchforks flash and gleam;
And threshing engines shrieking a high-lo syllables of steam.
And elevators palmed red that lift the giant arms
And beckon to the Harvest God above the breeding farms
And load-of trains that hasten forth, a hungry world to fill—

—C. L. Edson, in Boston Transcript.

THE FROST.

The Frost looked forth, one still, clear night
And he said, "Now I shall be out of sight;
So through the valley and over the height
In silence I'll take my way.
I will not go like the blustering train,
The wind and the rain,
The wind and the rain, the hail and the rain
Who make so much bustle and noise in vain,
But I'll be as busy as they!"

Then he went to the mountain, and pow'dered its crest;
He clothed up the trees, and their boughs he dressed
With diamonds and pearls, and over the breast
Of the quavering lake he spread
A coast of mail, that it need not fear
The downward point of many a spear
That he hung on its margin, far and near,
Where a rock could rear its head.

He went to the windows of those who slept,
And over each pane like a fairy crept;
Wherever he breathed, wherever he stepped,
By the light of the moon was seen
Most beautiful things. There were flowers and trees,
There were beves of birds and swarms of bees,
There were cities, thrones, temples and towers, and these
All pictured in silver sheen!

But he did one thing that was hardly fair—
He peeped in the cupboard, and, finding there
That all had forgotten for him to prepare—
"Now, just to set them a-thinking,
I'll bite this basket of fruit," said he;
"This comfy pitcher I'll burst in three,
And the glass of water they've left for me
Shall 'chick' to tell them I'm drinking."

FRENCH FORCES READY TO MOVE FOR THE OCCUPATION OF RUHR AT DAYBREAK

Airplanes Will Make Observations and a Long String of Tanks Will Proceed in Advance of Foot and Horse Troops—President Ebert of Germany Has Issued a Manifesto Exhorting the Inhabitants of the Ruhr Valley to Remain Calm—Belief Prevails in Cologne That French Entry Will Not be Made Before January 15.

Paris, Jan. 9.—(By the A. P.)—France is ready tonight to seize the Ruhr at daybreak. There are many reasons to believe that tomorrow's sun will disclose French airplanes hovering over Essen, while a long string of tanks crawl into the Krupps home in advance of foot and horse troops.

The zero hour has been fixed, but, until the occupation army marches, the time, place, manner and exact objectives are held by the government as a military and political secret.

France late today notified England through the French ambassador at London, and the American ambassadors at Paris and Brussels were informed by the French and Belgian governments respectively, what France plans to do. The French tonight are also armed with the reparations commission's declaration that Germany is in voluntary default in coal deliveries; so there is no apparent cause for further delay.

M. Maginot, the war minister, has had a final conference with Premier Poincare, assuring him that the army is ready; the technical men, even emergency crews of railroaders and telegraphers, in case of strikes in the Ruhr, are awaiting orders at Duesseldorf, and their military escort is impatient to be off.

This readiness, however, is no proof that the French have set their advance for Wednesday morning; there may be a delay until Thursday, so that Premier Poincare can give parliament the news while it is still fresh, and there are some who think that the premier may wait until he has informed the chamber of his plans so that parliament may by a vote of confidence be responsible for the order to Foch's men—"Take Essen."

Whatever date is fixed there is no longer any vague uneasiness that the United States or Great Britain may stop the advance by a protest, for the French government and people alike consider it quite settled that Essen will be occupied in a matter of hours or days and that the progressive seizure of the Ruhr can only be stopped by Germany coming to terms.

France is taking the situation with surprising calm, but there is a very evident determination to make the Ruhr pressure effective. The posting of German proclamations to the population in the Ruhr district about to be occupied, is taken as showing that the German government has abandoned hope of stopping the seizure and recognizes that M. Poincare really means what he is saying about being willing "to talk to the Germans in Essen."

GERMAN PROCLAMATION TO RUHR VALLEY RESIDENTS

Berlin, Jan. 9.—(By The A. P.)—In a manifesto issued today, President Ebert exhorts the inhabitants of the Ruhr valley to remain calm "despite the continuation of French injustice and force, which constitutes a breach of the Versailles treaty, committed against a disarmed and defenceless nation."

"The policy of the force which has violated treaties and trampled the rights of humanity now threatens the key district of the German economic world," says the manifesto. "The execution of the peace treaty thus becomes an absolute impossibility, and at the same time the living conditions of the suffering German nation are disorganized.

"Germany was ready to fulfill all the obligations within her power. She has now been attacked without being given a hearing. We lay this act of force before the forum of Europe and the entire world."

FRENCH TROOPS PREPARED FOR OCCUPATION OF ESSEN

French Military Headquarters, Mayence, Jan. 9.—(By The A. P.)—General Degoutte and part of his staff left for Duesseldorf today after completing all military preparations for the occupation of Essen, and subsequently, other cities in the Ruhr valley.

No more troops are to be moved from the Mayence Bridgehead, it is stated, as all the necessary forces already are in the Dusseldorf area. A report is current among the troops here that the occupation will occur before the end of the week, but this is not confirmed by the military authorities.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT TO INCREASE ALL DIRECT TAXES

Paris, Jan. 9.—(By The A. P.)—The French government, has decided to increase all direct taxes, except those on salaries, by twenty per cent., as the only means of meeting the deficit in this year's budget, it was stated today.

This measure, it is unofficially estimated, will yield probably 3,000,000,000 francs.

FRENCH GOVT REQUISITIONED ALL AUTOS AND MOTOR TRUCKS

Dusseldorf, Jan. 9 (By the A. P.).—All passenger automobiles and heavy delivery trucks have been requisitioned by the French government on orders issued by General Simon. The general, with the ober-burgomaster, will inspect and select the best of the automobiles for use by the French.

Those refusing to hand over their cars will be tried by the French military courts.

FRENCH ARMY CHIEFS CONFER WITH BURGOMASTERS

Essen, Jan. 9 (By the A. P.).—A conference was in progress at 8.30 o'clock this evening between the French army chiefs and the burgomasters of Duisberg, Essen, Muelheim, Ratingen, Gerresheim and other towns to be occupied. No information is yet available, as the conference is behind closed doors.

FEELING AT MAYENCE ON FRENCH OCCUPATION

Mayence, Jan. 9.—(By the A. P.)—The consensus of opion here is that "whatever happens, it cannot be worse." And this apathy characterizes the mood of the Mayence population toward French occupation of Essen and other Ruhr cities, which is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Dignified and subdued, but without servility, the Germans for the past two days have stood in groups about the station and railroad yards and watched the troops entrain for the Ruhr, without outward sign of emotion and without comment. Fully 20,000 French troops have left the Mayence Bridgehead for the Ruhr since Saturday morning.

The troop movements are now ended, the last train leaving this place at 5 o'clock this evening. The troops are white, with the exception of a small percentage of Indo-Chinese, and there are no Senegalese or black troops among them.

100,000 AT INAUGURATION OF GOV. WALTON OF OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 9 (By the A. P.).—A milling, joyous, care-free crowd of more than 100,000 persons saw Governor J. C. Walton inducted into office today at a public ceremony at the state fair grounds. A voice amplifier carried the new executive's words to the fringe of the army of his supporters as he welcomed them to his inaugural celebration.

In a brief address, frequently interrupted by cheering and volleys of pistol shots, the new governor told the members of the multitude they were his guests and bade them feel at home and to turn the occasion into one of merrymaking and feasting.

The inaugural ceremony today was a repetition of that of yesterday when the governor took the oath of office before a joint session of the state legislature at the capitol. Both houses of the legislature were grouped about the new executive when the oath was administerd today by Vice Chief Justice Johnson of the state supreme court.

Following the governor's brief speech, the cry went up that the barbecue was ready and at 1 o'clock serving of the feast commenced.

It was a scene such as Oklahoma had never witnessed before. The throng formed in eager lines before the serving stands as barbecue assistants began handing out great chunks of beef, buffalo, bear and reindeer meat. Bread sliced and piled high like cotton bales began to shrink under the onslaught.

The giant coffee urns, each holding 10,000 gallons, and heated by a steam engine, likewise became the mecca of the thousands.

It was estimated that serving of the barbecue would continue most of the afternoon, so great was the crowd.

IMPORTANT RAILROAD CASE BEFORE THE SUPREME COURT

Washington, Jan. 9.—A railroad case described as one of the most important to reach the supreme court in recent years was taken up for augument shortly before adjournment today, and the court set aside its entire session tomorrow for its consideration.

The proceeding is that brought by the Akron, Canton and Youngstown Railway company and other railroads west of the Hudson river to challenge the order of the interstate commerce commission granting the New England railroads an increase of 15 per cent. in the division of joint freight rates.

Several broad questions considered of vital importance to the railroads and the commission in its future functioning under the transportation act are presented in the case, including the powers of the commission to group or "zone" railroads. The government contends in its briefs that should the railroads win and the commission be prohibited from acting in such matters by groups, it would be paralyzed by the multiplicity of cases which would arise involving division of rates.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON EXPRESS TRAIN DERAILED

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—The New York-Washington express on the Pennsylvania railroad was derailed late today at Winans, Md., near Baltimore. The engine, baggage car and two coaches left the rails, blocking both tracks. According to information received at the general offices of the company here no one was killed or seriously injured.

The engine and baggage car turned over on their sides, but the coaches remained upright, the reports stated.

The cause of the accident, which occurred at 5.41 p. m., has not been determined.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 9.—The lure of the pulpit proved too strong for the Rev. David B. Tompkins to resist, so he retired from the police court bench today after serving two years as police justice.

Floggings Directed by Leader of Klan

According to Testimony Brought Out at Morehouse Parish Hearing—Ordered Deportations.

Bastrop, La.,—(By the A. P.)—Delving into the secrets of the Morehouse parish branch of the Ku Klux Klan in an effort to fix responsibility for the kidnapping and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, victims of black hooded raiders, states attorneys today produced testimony to show that floggings and deportations had been carried out under the direction of the leader of the parish klan and that black hoods were part of the regalia used by bands of klansmen on various expeditions.

Captain J. K. Skipwith, recognized leader of the klan organization in Morehouse, was named by J. F. Noseworthy, who described himself as a former klansman, as the man who gave orders to the parish organization.

"With hoods and robes were for ceremony—to be worn inside the lodge room and on parades—but the black hood was for raiding parties," Noseworthy declared.

Noseworthy's testimony reached a climax when he identified a black hood with low hanging apron under the chin, produced by A. V. Coco, state attorney general, as the headgear worn by klansmen on raids.

The day's testimony carried the narratives for a time beyond the incidents of the actual kidnapping of the two men, to expeditions on which Norseworthy said he was sent to lash and drive several men from Louisiana.

Norseworthy declared himself rated as a former "captain" in the klan organization.

Half a dozen witnesses testified today—men who were taken prisoner or were present at the time Daniel and Richords were kidnapped.

All agreed that the kidnapping was at the hand of a black hooded mob, armed with rifles, pistols, and shotguns. None, however, could identify members of the band.

During the examination of two witnesses, C. C. "Tot" Davenport and Sidney White, attorneys for the state, set up the question as to whether there had been intimidation since they had been subpoenaed and spoken to by a man he knew in a "surly" manner. At the time Davenport was on his way to lunch in company with the attorney general and his assistants.

Davenport walked away with the man and did not keep his luncheon appointment.

In addition to Norseworthy, White and Davenport, four witnesses were heard today. The testimony of all of them, with the exception of Norseworthy, related to incidents in connection with the detention of the party of Mer Rouge citizens, and the kidnapping of Daniel and Richards and three other men.

White, the last witness for the day, remembered only dimly incidents of the fateful August 24 last when Daniel and Richards disappeared and three other men of a party of Mer Rouge citizens on route to their homes after attending a barbecue and baseball game here, were kidnapped.

"Wasn't it a strang thing to see hooded men, well armed take away your companions and you not feel alarmed?" White was asked.

"Well, I had heard of the klan taking out fellows and whipping 'em; then letting them go."

"Therefore, you had no occasion to feel alarmed; you believed they were going to whip him and then turn him loose and there was nothing for you to worry about?"

"That's right."

White told of a conversation he had with Marshall Mott, a resident of the same community in which he lived, Oak Ridge, in which Mott told him he had seen a truck similar to the ones in which the men had been placed after they were kidnapped, pass about 11.30 o'clock at night. The truck contained what appeared to be hooded men and the forms of two men lying on the floor.

TO QUESTION SURVIVORS OF THE SMYRNA DISASTER

New York, Jan. 9.—D. D. Shepard, representative of the state department, arrived here today to question survivors of the Smyrna disaster, who arrived last night on the refugee ship King Alexander, regarding the alleged inhuman conduct of Maynard Barnes, American vice consul, during the burning of Smyrna.

P. S. Spiropolous, a Smyrna manufacturer, in the refugee party, said he was appointed chairman of a committee to confer with the state department at Washington in an effort to have the American government recover damages from the Turks for the loss of Smyrna property owned by American citizens.

Nicola Kyros, formerly a resident of Waterbury, Conn., who was married in Smyrna the day before the fire, declared that his bride and his two sisters hid from the Turks for hours in a newly dug grave in a Smyrna cemetery.

The defense has announced its intention of seeking to prove alibis for all of the defendants.

Carnaghi's movements were traced step by step by the witnesses from 7 o'clock the morning of June 21 when six non-union prisoners were marched through Herrin to a cemetery on the outskirts of the town where they were shot down, until 11 o'clock the same morning when the bodies were brought back to Herrin.

Volstead Violations by Many Public Men

Washington, Jan. 9.—Representative Upshaw, democrat of Georgia, in a speech in the house today, declared that "bootleggers ply their devilish trade among too many public men in Washington," and that he had seen with his own eyes "some of the highest officials in Washington, not members of either branch of congress, lifting the devilish bottle to their lips."

The Georgia representative told the house he would not make public the names of senators and representatives, who "do not practice the prohibition which their votes profess," but would promptly turn over to federal and local authorities all evidence relating to liquor drinking by government officials placed in his hands.

With this evidence, Mr. Upshaw said, he will "turn in the name of a high official (not a diplomat), who returned from abroad some time ago with more than a score of cases of foreign liquor marked 'Diplomatic.'"

Commenting on reports that liquor imported for embassies and legations under diplomatic immunity was being diverted into bootleg channels, Mr. Upshaw said this problem called for "delicate, but firm treatment."

Touching on liquor shipped from abroad to embassies and legations at Washington, Mr. Upshaw declared:

"One problem that calls for delicate but firm treatment is the use and abuse of liquor shipments to some of our foreign embassies. An able man who was an attache of our state department for more than 30 years has written on the question. He has seen the prohibition ideals of this prohibition country suffer terribly right here in the nation's capital because of the social exchange of intoxicants that 'leads to bewilder and dazzle to blind.'

"This prominent diplomat observer declares that a polite, forceful note would cause a ready and universal response from all foreign legations who would really rejoice to help the United States, the first great nation that has launched upon the greatest moral experiment of all time, to work here at the heart of national and international influeces that great plan for redemption of humanity contemplated in the ratification of the eighteenth amendment."

Mr. Upshaw took a shot at Governor Smith of New York, who he said, "took an oath to defend the constitution and then in his next breath joined the nullifiers of the constitution by calling on congress to allow beer and wine."

"Repeal the eighteenth amendment?" the Georgian exclaimed, "why, you might as well talk about repealing the Ten Commandments of God because after thousands of years they are broken every day."

ONTARIO HAS NO POWER TO PREVENT EXPORT OF LIQUOR

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 9.—The Ontario provincial legislature has no power to prevent the export of liquor and beer to the United States, Judge J. J. Coughlin held at Sandwich today, declaring the liquor carriage act, passed by the Ontario government in 1922, ultra vires.

Judge Coughlin ruled that while the wording of the act, which prohibits breweries and distilleries from using public highways to transport liquor or beer, did not expressly state that exportation was barred, it had that effect and was therefore an encroachment upon the jurisdiction of the federal government.

Judge Coughlin's decision means that breweries and distillers again may use the highways and street railways in transporting beer to the river front warehouses for shipment to the United States.

FINDS VOLSTEAD LAW NO CHECK TO DRUNKENNESS

Boston, Jan. 9.—The eighteenth amendment and its enforcement laws have failed to check the spread of drunkenness, Dr. Hugh Barr Gray, superintendent of the Washington home (for inebriates), said in his annual report made public today. Congressman Tinkham is president of the Washington Home corporation.

"Unless the tide of lawlessness in this country has reached its crest and will recede from now on, it must be evident to all but an exceedingly small portion of our populace that the law is much worse off with the law than without it, and that congress might better revise its opinion as to what percentage of alcohol is intoxicating," the report said.

MOVE TO CURB LIQUOR PRESCRIPTION DRUG STORES

Bridgeport, Jan. 9.—State regulations to curb the setting up of druggists solely for the purpose of filling liquor prescriptions were urged at the mid-winter session of the Connecticut Pharmaceutical association here tonight. They urged that permits be granted only to those in a bona fide drug business for themselves.

In the 18 months, the records show, there were 58,862 cases reported, resulting in 27,301 convictions.

WAR DEBT PROBLEM MAY CALL FOR LIBERALIZATION

Limitations Laid Down by Congress May Prove Barrier in Negotiations Between the British and American Refunding Commissions—President Harding Feels That When the American Commission Has Decided What Modifications Are Absolutely Necessary There Will be a Test of What the Country Desires and What Congress Will Permit to be Done.

Washington, Jan. 9.—President Harding is convinced, it was disclosed today at the White House, that there can be no settlement of the eleven billions of dollars of war debts to the United States within the limitations laid down by congress—payments of the principal within 25 years with interest at 4½ per cent.

The executive's views, in which members of the American debt commission concur, were crystallized by developments at the preliminary negotiations with the British debt commission looking to the refunding of the four billions of dollars owed by Great Britain. The progress of these negotiations was laid before the president in detail yesterday by Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, members of the American commission.

Whether congress will be asked to liberalize immediately the terms of the existing statute or the American commission proceed to make the best arrangements possible with the debtor nations subject to final congressional approval is yet to be determined. It was indicated at the White House, however, that the latter course was regarded as preferable certainly so far as the British debt is concerned, because the British commission is on the ground ready to reach a settlement and advance action by congress might result in a long delay in the negotiations between that commission and the American body which are to be resumed tomorrow.

Mr. Harding considers that the British and American delegations may reach some sort of an agreement within a week and he feels that when the American commission has decided what modifications are absolutely necessary there will be a test of what the country desires to do and what its representatives in congress will permit to be done.

The president also was represented as feeling that if out of the present negotiations there came a plan which would be approved by congress, even at the cost of relieving some of the burdens on the debtor nations, a precedent would have been set which would serve as a guide in the settlements among all the governments associated with the United States in the World war.

While President Harding's views were being made known at the White House, the debt situation was discussed in both the senate and house with increased indications that efforts would be made to amend the debt refunding law in many important particulars. In the senate discussion centered around the proposal of Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, that the commission be enlarged so as to include democratic representation, but in the house the direct issue was the liberalizing of the terms of the settlement by the debtor nations.

As these discussions went forward, members of the American commission held group conferences for further discussion of the general statement presented yesterday on behalf of the British mission. During the day Montagu C. Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and a member of the British delegation, conferred with Assistant Secretary Wardsworth, secretary of the American commission. Neither would discuss the subject of their conversation, nor was any statement forthcoming from either of the commissions.

Ambassador Harvey who returned recently from London, has been in conference with members of the American commission and the impression was gained today at the White House that one of the reasons for his temporary recall from London was a desire of officials to consult with him on the subject of the British debt refunding.

House debate on the debt was precipitated by Representative Garner, democrat, Texas, who read a press rport of an address delivered in New York by Representative Fess, republican, Ohio, to the effect that some freedom must and would be given by congress to the American debt commission, Mr. Garner contended that the only deduction was that congress would be called upon to "yield its control over $11,000,000,000 of the people's money."

"Nothing but a cowardly congress—yes, almost a criminal congress—would surrender the trust placed in their hands to the extent of $11,000,000,000 without having gone before the electorate and received authority to that effect," declared Mr. Garner.

Representative Fess denied that he had advocated surrendering the powers of corporation should have "some latitude to make the best terms possible."

Mr. Garner contended that if all restrictions were removed the American commission could accept bonds running for 1,000 years and remit the interest during that time, which would amount to a virtual remission of the entire debt.

"It is entirely probable," said Representative Burton., a member of the debt commission, "that in a short time some proposition will come before the house with reference to the settlment of that (the British) debt."

"I do not pretend to speak for the commission," continued Mr. Burton, "but I want to say that if the proposition in regard to this English debt is to be made, it will not be made in the form of a request for a general revision of the statute. We do not want to take the responsibility in regard to this four billions of dollars, of making a decision which will be final. I do not regard that as quite fair to the congress and the legislative powers If there is a change in the term fixed by the general statute, that change will be made here in the congress of the United States."

ERIE ROAD SHOP CRAFT STRIKE HAS BEEN SETTLED

New York, Jan. 9.—A wage agreement affecting 20,000 union shop craft workers, restoring seniority rights and providing back pay for nearly 10,000 men who went on strike last July, has been signed by the Erie railroad and its subsidiaries, John J. Dowd, chairman of the central strike committee of the Metropolitan district and head of the American Federation of Labor Shop Craft Unions in this district, announced tonight.

Negotiations which resulted in signature of the contract by the railroads and the union officials have been in secret progress since October, when most of the strikers returned to the shops, Dowd reported.

The new contract, he said, closely follows the so called "Baltimore Agreement," on the basis of which employes on a number of railroads returned to their jobs three months after the strike was called. Subsidiaries of the Erie which, according to Dowd, become parties to the new agreement, include the Chicago & Erie railroad and the New York, Susquehanna and Western.

It will expire November 1 this year, and is subject to cancellation after that date upon thirty days' notice by either the rail or union officials. W. A. Baldwin, vice president of the Erie in charge of labor matters, signed the agreement in behalf of the roads, according to Dowd.

Attorney Barnes, who represented Morrisette, asked for a continuance of the case until the March term of court as he had a mass of correspondence connected with the case which, he wished the state's attorney to examine and which in the mind of the attorney would take up so much time that the case would probably not be ready for this term. State's Attorney Searls took the correspondence and stated that he would do all in his power to have the case tried during the present term.

Bonds were ordered called by the state's attorney in he cases of Walter F. Brown and Ethel Murdock, charged with adultery. The names of the principal and their bondsman. Benjamin Brown, were called by Sheriff Charles A. Gates and were not responded to. The bonds were then ordered called.

Several pedestrians had a narrow escape from injury early Tuesday morning when a horse owned and driven by John Conway of Warner district, suddenly became frightened and bolted up Bain street. Mr. Conway, who was riding in a sleigh, was proceeding up Main street and when near the Main street trolley terminal he was forced to make a sharp turn to avoid striking two women who suddenly appeared on the street from the curbing. The sleigh ran up a snowbank and overturned, throwing the driver out. The horse then sped off up Main street and when passing by the trolley car two women were knocked down but were not injured.

The animal then turned into Church street and ran up the left hand side of the road, as far as the Methodist church where the right shaft of the sleigh became entangled in the harness of one of the pair of horses hitched to one of the Willimantic Lumber & Coal Company's wagons which were coming from the north. The harness of the Conway horse was broken by the impact and the animal broke free but was caught a short distance up the street. The sleigh was undamaged but the horse sustained a badly cut hind leg.

In the local police court Tuesday morning Michael Kemler of Mansfield, was charged with breach of the peace, to which he entered a charge of not guilty. Sarah Kaplan of Mansfield was the complainant in the case. It was only after a long argument that the court succeedd in getting her to take the oath as she was in such a hurry to tell the court just what kind of a man Kemler was. According to her story the man stopped her Saturday of last week at the junction of Ash and Jackson streets and called her vile names.

In his turn Kemler stated that he was a neighbor of Mrs. Kaplan and had never had anything to do with her. He said that he was a milkman by occupation. Some time ago a dead horse which had belonged to Mrs. Kaplan had been hauled close to his land and the carcass caused a stench. He said that Saturday he met Mrs. Kaplan at the place designated and told her to keep the dead horse away from his land. He denied calling the complainant any vile names.

PROPOSE TO CONSOLIDATE DUAL GOVERNMENT IN WILLIMANTIC

Willimantic, Jan. 9.—The matter of revising the city charter was taken up at an open meeting of the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening in the chamber rooms and over which President Valentine L. Murphy presided. The public works committee of which P. D. Donohue is chairman, presented to the meeting a list of amendments which were suggested as being necessary to the present charter. The first matter taken up was a change in the remuneration fee of the city health officer. It was deemed advisable to have a permanent health officer who would be paid a stipulated fee for all work done, the amount of the fee to be liberal and the officer to do only the duties of the city health officer which would occupy his entire time. The present health officer only receives $100 a year and consequently can only devote part of his time to public work.

The second matter discussed was the establishing of a pension fund for the fire department and the matter was approved by the meeting, as was also the matter of abolishing the positions of the board of engineers and the establishing of a permanent chief in the fire department. The matter of making a change in the method of providing police protection at fires was also approved by the meeting.

When the matter of revising the method of compensation for both of the city tax collectors was taken up, Frank P. Fenton arose and stated that at the present time it was costing the city and town over $3,000 yearly for the combined salaries of the town, city and personal tax collectors. He said that one man could be paid a good yearly salary and by having an office in the town building and being permanently employed could collect all the taxes. Besides reducing the expense a great deal it would also lessen the trouble which the tax payers find in having to go to three different men to pay their taxes.

Another feature of this system would be that the tax collector would have time to go out and collect overdue taxes which at the present time have to be neglected.

A motion by W. C. Norris, made and adopted by the meeting, stated that the chamber of commerce invite the selectmen of the town and the board of aldermen to meet with the public works committee of the chamber to discuss matters in regard to revising the city or town governments. The movement being to abolish the present form of dual government which is very expensive, and antiquated and inadequate and to consolidate the governments under one head.

The question arose as to whether or not the city could change its charter under the home rule act passed in 1917 and Chapter 25 of the state statutes. A resolution introduced by W. C. Morris was adopted by which Representative Frank P. Fenton is to file a petition for the right to revise the city charter. The petition is to be presented at the next general assembly on January 26.

WARDEN McCLUGGAGE OF JEWETT CITY RESIGNS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Jewett City, Jan. 9—Warden Joseph H. McCarthy, finds is necessary, on account of other business interests to resign his position as warden of the borough of Jewett City. His resignation, which takes effect, Jan. 23, leaves one year unexpired term. To meet that emergency, a warden will be elected for that period on the regular borough election day, this month.

Mr. McCarthy, resigns after a considerable number of years of service which as burgess and warden, he has spared no effort, that would accrue to the public benefit. No man, filling any important public position, coming continually in contact with the needs of his people both real and fancied, is entirely immune from criticism as the result of differences in opinion.

Mr. McCarthy first served eight years as burgess, being elected in 1904. His terms as warden have been 1912-13-16-17-20-21-23.

When any man retires from public office, two things are at once considered, his successor and his record. It is then in order, and due to the passing official to note the outstanding benefits that have been accomplished during the seven years of his administration.

Mr. McCarthy and William Johnstone, years ago, were the prime movers in the ball game, between the married and single men. The small amount of money realized at that time served as a nucleus for the soldiers' monument fund. May 30, 1913, during Mr. McCarthy's second term as warden, he saw the monument unveiled at the David Hale Fanning park in Jewett City where it stands today, equalled by few in its impressive beauty and with none that excell.

After years of the most evident need, a system of whistle fire alarm was established, and a new fire truck purchased.

The silent policemen that serve so well to adjust the Main street traffic, were the warden's personal idea.

Many other matters might be mentioned, the macadamizing of the numerous streets of the borough accomplished by vote of the freemen, during Mr. McCarthy's term of service has well been proven as standing at the head of the list of borough improvements. Visitors say, that no town in the state the size of Jewett City has all its streets in macadam.

Attention is also called, to the sewer system which was put through and actively sponsored by Mr. McCarthy during his term as burgess. Those best acquainted with Mr. McCarthy were unanimous in expressing their belief that his interest was for the borough's benefit and that he did his duty as he saw it.

WHO FIRST FELT "LIKE A FIGHTING COCK"?

COCK-FIGHTING was born with the cocks.

But it is only 89 years ago that the first man felt "like a fighting cock!"

Now it has brothers, sisters, nephews, nieces, all over the world—all feeling "like a fighting cock!"

It happens this way. A person half sick with a bad stomach, dull and heavy headache, takes Beecham's Pills just before going to bed. Immediately the Pills begin to harmonise the digestive and eliminative organs.

Consequently, this person has a good night's sleep and arises in the morning with clear brain, bright eye, keen appetite, and full of energy for work and play.

It is now just 80 years since Beecham's Pills first began correcting disordered stomachs and stirring sluggish livers and bowels to natural activity — and feeling "like a fighting cock" is associated as inseparably with Beecham's Pills, as the pills are with good health.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG
It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets
The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.
Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

Breed Theatre

Miss Sweet was the sole occupant of a ferry boat which headed for the falls but controlled from shore by a steel cable not visible above the surface. John Bowers, swimming, was to make a rescue for the camera. As it happened, it was a real rescue, for the current gave the ferry a vicious jerk and snapped the cable.

The wreckage over the falls was so complete that not enough remained for the camera. Director Clarence Badger had five ferryboats constructed and sent over the falls for a total loss before he could get one which would hold together long enough so that it would have some semblance to a ferry boat when photographed.

Other pictures on the bill include Movie Chats and an Educational comedy.

Vaudeville at Broadway Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The five B. F. Keith acts scheduled for the Broadway for the last half of this week as as follows:

Glades Correll-Harry Weston and Dave Gardner make a wonderful combination in their comedy offering called Nautical Nonsense.

Murray and Clara Ferguson are called The Comedy Manias, and rightly so. They work for fun and give abundance of this.

Mack & Stanton in Home Sweet Home are immense. The title misleads one all to what these; two capable comedians do but it can be said that this skit is vimful of good wholesome, clean fun interspersed with several double numbers.

A despairing woman who jumps from a steamship into the sea and and who is rescued by a seaplane, is the chief figure on one of the most dramatics incidents of Outcast, a new Paramount picture starring Elsie Ferguson which will be a feature at the Strand theatre for three days beginning Thursday.

The story of this impressive and thrilling photoplay deals with the efforts of Miriam, a deserted wife who is thrown into the street through poverty, to reclaim a man who dissipates because of his hopeless love for a fickle woman. The various phases of this picture narrative which have their climax in an attempt at suicide and rescue at sea, are highly thrilling, and all in all, the role partrayed by Miss Ferguson is said by her to be one of the strongest she has essayed during her screen career of five years.

The supporting cast includes among others, William Powell, William David, Charles Wellesly and Teddy Sampson.

An Educational Christie comedy called Chop Suey, will furnish the laughs and a Selznick news completes the bill.

When the unexpected happens a man's true nature begins to show on the surface.

KIVIAT, FORMER OLYMPIC TRACK STAR, TO STAGE REMARKABLE COME-BACK

New York, Jan. 9.—(By the A. P.)—Abel I. Kiviat, former distance running star and veteran of the American Olympic team of 1912, has undertaken one of the most remarkable come-back attempts in athletic annals—an attempt which he hopes will lead to his participation in the Olympics at Paris in 1924, after an interval of 12 years.

Kiviat retired from competition in 1915 after he had been indefinitely suspended by the Amateur Athletic Union for asking alleged exorbitant expenses for participation in a meet, but was reinstated by the A. A. U. at its annual convention last November.

Since then Kiviat has adhered to a program of rigid training and today demonstrated at an informal exhibition that he is close to the form when a decade ago made him one of the greatest milers in the world. Seven years of competitive idleness and the fact that he is now 40 years old, apparently have not been a great a handicap to overcome if his lithe-limbs appearance is any proof. Unable to carry out his full program today, because of a snow-covered track, he plans to stage another work-out tomorrow to remove any lingering doubt that he can return to form.

Kiviat will undertake a strenuous indoor campaign this winter and later turn his attention to outdoor work. It is no secret that one of his chief ambitions is for a test of skill with Joie Ray, present national mile champion. It is possible that the pair will meet February 10 when Kiviat will make his initial competitive appearance at the annual games of the Wilco Athletic Association, whose colors he will wear in future races.

Ray has accepted an invitation from the Wilco A. A. to enter a special 3,000-metre event which he won last year, establishing a new world's record of 8 minutes, 31 3-5 seconds. Kiviat's entry is tentative, however, and because of the fact that it will be his first real test, he may confine his efforts to the half-mile event. He is practically certain, however to oppose Ray during the indoor season, as the Chicago star plans to take part in about a half dozen meets in the east.

Kiviat intends, if satisfied he can regain his former speed and staying powers, to concentrate his attention on the 1,500-metre event, a distance slightly less than a mile; and one of the Olympic features. He now holds the American record for the distance, 3 minutes, 55 4-5 seconds, made at Cambridge, Mass., June 7, 1912.

He finished second in this event to A. N. S. Jackson, of England, at the Olympic meet in Stockholm, in 1912.

RULES PROPOSED FOR DEMPSEY-LEWIS BOUT

Kansas City, Jan. 9.—A set of rules under which the proposed mixed bout between Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, and Ed (Strangler) Lewis, heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, could be held has been promulgated by Lou Cutler, the sporting promoter of Wichita, Kan. The code, while brief, seems to cover the principal points to be taken into consideration in such a bout.

The rules follow:

1. The boxer must have soft handages on his hands and wear five-ounce gloves.

2. The boxer is permitted to hit so long as both men are on their feet.

3. The wrestler must leave his corner in a standing position and remain in that position until he has secured a hold that will put the boxer to the mat.

4. The wrestler must not attack the boxer while the former is on his knees, nor will the boxer be permitted to hit while the wrestler is down. If one or both men are under the ropes or outside the ring they must be called to the center of the ring and come to a standing position.

5. Should the wrestler throw the boxer to the mat, the boxer then may apply any hold he knows or protect himself as best he can, and may, if possible, pin the wrestler's shoulders to the mat.

6. The wrestler will not be permitted to hit the boxer with his bare hands, or fists.

7. The strangle hold, butting or heeling are barred.

8. If the wrestler should remain on the mat for a period of ten seconds while the boxer is on his feet, he will be declared the loser.

9. The wrestler, to be declared the winner, must pin the boxer's shoulders to the mat for three seconds.

10. The contest is to be under the supervision of two judges and a referee, and the time limit is to be 30 minutes.

HOBEY BAKER WAS AN ATHLETIC PRODIGY

In these days when one reads so much about infant prodigies who read Horace and Homer at six, write short hand and use a typewriter at eight and compose poetry at ten, it is rather refreshing to hear about a boy wonder in athletics. Such was Hobey Baker, in whose honor the Baker Memorial Skating Rink was dedicated at Princeton last week.

At the tender age of 11 Hobey Baker, played quarterback on the Isthmian football eleven at St. Paul's school. At 12 he coxed one of the school crews, ran the century sprint, performed on the swimming team and, just to show that he could do something outside of athletics, sang in the school choir on Sundays.

Hobey made a place on the varsity hockey sextet at St. Paul's when only 13 years old; he was the youngest hockey regular in the history of the school. A year later he was elected captain of the school hockey six which defeated the Harvard varsity, 7 to 5, and being also a good football, baseball, tennis and golf player, as well as a working gymnast, he was awarded the all-around athlete medal by a popular vote of his schoolmates.

Young Baker was re-elected hockey captain the following year—he was then 17 years old—and also played halfback on the school eleven. His sextet of that year enjoyed the greatest success in the history of St. Paul's school, defeating every college and school opponent, succumbing only to the powerful St. Nicholas and Crescent clubs. Five of the six members of that team, including Hobey, subsequently became varsity hockey captains at Princeton, Yale and Harvard.

At 18 Hobey entered Princeton, where he won a name in athletics which will go down in the annals of Old Nassau with those of Princeton's greatest athletes—but that is another story. The 8,500 who witnessed the dedicatory encounter between the Tiger varsity and the St. Nicks recently paid tribute to Baker, the Princeton athlete. But before the man there was the boy, whose prowess at St. Paul's should make intellectual prodigies weep with shame.

NEW LEAGUE FORMED TO BE KNOWN AS ATLANTIC

New York, Jan. 9.—Formation of a new six-club baseball circuit, to be known as the Atlantic League, has been completed, it was announced yesterday by Ernest C. Langraf of New York, vice president and organizer.

The league will be composed of clubs in Trenton, N. J., and in five Pennsylvania cities, York, Allentown, Pottsville, Lancaster and Harrisburg, for the coming season, Mr. Landgraf said, but in 1924 it is planned to enlarge the league to eight clubs. Membership in the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues has been granted and the new circuit given a rating in Class "B."

John Conway Toole has accepted the presidency of the Atlantic league in addition to his duties as president of the International league. Preliminary organization steps were taken in Philadelphia some time ago when definite assurances of membership were received from four cities. Since then Mr. Landgraf has added Harrisburg and Pottsville to the list.

None of the territory involved was represented in organized baseball last season, so that affiliation with the National Association, the minor league ruling body, met with no difficulties.

President Toole will call a schedule meeting soon to arrange details of the league's inauguration. The season will be opened about May 1.

Mr. Landgraf, besides serving the league in an official capacity, holds the Allentown franchise. He formerly was one of the owners of the Syracuse club of the International League, disposing of his interests there last summer.

MANY LINEMEN TO CAPTAIN FOOTBALL TEAMS

Election of football captains for the 1923 gridiron campaigns discloses an unusual preponderance of linemen chosen as field leaders. While a number of colleges have delayed selecting new leaders, a list of thirty-eight embracing the South East and Middle West shows twenty-six linemen and twelve backs elected.

Among the linemen, guards were most frequently chosen, the list revealing eleven playing that position. Eight tackles, four centres and three ends completed the choice from the front line ranks.

Only two quarterbacks were among the eleven backfield men elected, a fact which emphasizes a further dissipation of the old idea that the quarterback should be the actual as well as the nominal field general.

Quarterback

LANDIS SENDS HIS ANSWER TO McCARTHY

Chicago, Jan. 9—Baseball commissioner Landis today wrote President William H. McCarthy of the Pacific Coast League confirming the report that the major leagues had adopted an increase in the optional player limit. In reply to McCarthy's inquiry, he said the National association, through Secretary Farrell had notified the majors of a resolution of protest, adopted by the minors before the major league action.

The resolution of the minors, the commissioner wrote, was regarded by the majors as a violation of the major-minor agreement which provided that all such amendments be acted upon jointly. The majors thereupon voted that in transferring a player to a National association club, agreement with that club should be made, providing that the transferred player be subject to the draft.

The preliminary game will be between the Baltic Bantams and the Plainfield Buddies.

MAJOR LEAGUE EXPECT STRIFE WITH MINORS

New York, Jan. 9—The joint ruling of the major leagues, promulgated at their meeting here last month, will go into effect tomorrow, making all players sent by a major to a minor league club subject to draft.

Execution of the ruling is expected to create strife between the major and minor leagues.

The minor leaguers claim that the ruling, understood in baseball circles here to have been conceived by Commissioner Landis, is a violation of the major-minor agreement of 1921. The minors assert it presages restoration of the complete draft plan which was abolished with Mr. Landis' acceptance of the commissionership.

Commissioner Landis will be final arbiter in the dispute expected soon to come to a head.

GREENFIELD'S WINTER CARNIVAL TO BE A BIG EVENT

Greenfield, Mass., Jan. 9.—Greenfield's winter carnival, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, January 12, 13 and 14, has assumed such large proportions that the committee in charge claim it will be the biggest and most complete carnival to be held anywhere, in New England this winter.

Four horse races on an iced track, featuring Carter June, the champion ice horse of America; an exhibition of Arthur T. Walden's champion dog team, all direct descendents of Robert E. Peary's Arctic pack, led by that famous Chinook, with skijoring, snow shoeing, and skiing races, preceded by a big parade from the ice castle to the fair grounds, in which no vehicles on wheels will be allowed, comprises the most important parts of Friday afternoon's program. Friday evening there will be tobogganing, zip sliding, skating, snowshoe and sleigh ride parties, concluded by an immense bonfire at the toboggan chute, with a real old fashioned sugaring-off party for everyone.

Saturday will start with a band concert at the ice castle and a parade to the two Highland Park skating rinks, where there will be exhibitions by some of the world's best fancy and trick skaters, including Russ Jones, direct from the Hippodrome, New York, followed by a hockey match between the Springfield Hockey Club and the Hartford Hockey club; speed and obstacle races of various kinds, concluded by the storming of the ice castle on the Common. Saturday evening's feature will consist of a grand carnival ball at the state armory, with sport clothes and winter togs the favored attire.

Sunday's program will consist of an organized baseball game on snowshoes; another hockey match; more professional and exhibition skating; and a big snowball fight. Every day there will be continuous band concerts during the whole carnival.

CONN. MILLS TEAM TO OPPOSE BATTERY FIVE AT STATE ARMORY TONIGHT

What promises to be one of the fastest basketball games of the season is slated for the state armory this evening when the Battery B Five stacks up against the Connecticut Mills Five of Danielson. The Danielson aggregation as it stands today appears to be very fast and should give the local five a tough battle. Manager Pellegrin of Danielson says he is bringing down a very fast team, the lineup of which includes Reddy, Danielson's chalked court flash at forward; George Allison, formerly with the Milford Five, at one time New England champions; Huston, formerly with the Ware Town team; Armington, of the Worcester Tech five and Kinney, formerly of the Milford five.

This quintet should be able to give the local team a real battle if not to make them bow in defeat. The local five will be Jim Murphy, formerly with the Taftville team; Davis, formerly with a number of fast Y. M. C. A. teams, and Joe Belair, one of the fastest forwards in the game today, will play the forward positions. Harry Milz will jump at center and is expected to do a heavy part of the scoring. Milz uncanny eye for the hoop is dreaded by all opposing teams and his percentage of baskets runs high. The Murphy brothers, Jack and Denny, will be at the guard positions. These two boys are not only clever on the defensive but are dangerous men when in possession of the ball.

For the preliminary game the Battery B second team will line up against the "Five" Emps. The Battery seconds is a fast little aggregation of hoopsters and this game should be one well worth seeing. The Battery seconds line up as follows: Brown, F. Murphy, Lemieux, Cardie and Coleman. The Emps lineup is: Roach, Hollander, Harris, Handy, LaCombe and Brennan.

Chick Stanley, ex-basketball star, will referee the game which is to be called at 8 o'clock.

WAR BETWEEN GIANTS AND YANKS OVER

New York, Jan. 9—The war between the National and American baseball leagues over the scheduling of conflicting Sunday games here this summer by the New York clubs has ended without the firing of a shot and peace will be signed at the Chicago schedule meeting of league presidents next month, Ban Johnson, president of the American league, announced tonight.

"Everything was arranged satisfactorily," Mr. Johnson said. "There was some discussion of scheduling both New York teams here on some Sundays, but as the Yankees' objected to course the plan was given up.

President John A. Heydler of the National league could not be reached for confirmation, but skeptics were inclined to discount Mr. Johnson's announcement since Barney Dreyfuss, the other member of the schedule committee, insisted in a statement last night that the American league club would lose in its effort to keep the Giants from playing here on the same Sundays on which it was scheduled.

NO PURSES UNDER $1,000 ON GRAND CIRCUIT

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 9—Grand Circuit stewards closed their two day annual meeting here this afternoon by voting to meet next January in Syracuse, N. Y.

The stewards also adopted a rule providing that no class event for a purse under $1,000 be given on any track in their circuit. It was said that at least one of the eastern tracks had gone under this mark last season and that the departure had proved unsatisfactory to the horsemen.

Old officers were re-elected.

The schedule provides for opening the circuit at North Randall, Cleveland, July 2 and closing at Lexington October 13.

BITTERNESS AT CLOSE OF VETERANS' BUREAU HEARING

Boston, Jan. 9.—Colonel Charles R. Forbes, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, presiding at the hearing on charges brought against the heads of the New England Bureau, late today threw up his hands, declared the hearing closed and said that he would render a verbal verdict tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock if he had to sit up all night reading transcripts of the proceedings.

The hearing came to its abrupt termination when Arthur E. Brides, suspended managing director of the New England Bureau, testifying against his suspended chief administrator, Captain William J. Blake, denounced the latter as a "gutter rat," after testimony to the effect that Captain Blake had been disloyal.

When Colonel Forbes stopped the hearing counsel for Captain Blake appeared to be on the verge of launching a physical attack on Dr. Brides. In announcing that he would give his decision tomorrow, Colonel Forbes said he would have something to say about Dr. David J. Flannagan, suspended chief medical officer of the local bureau.

Although Dr. Flanagan was bitterly attacked during the hearing by Colonel Forbes he will not be heard by the trial board which heard the evidence against the managing director and his chief administrator because he is a member of the public service and will have to be tried by a board from that service.

Accusations against Captain Blake alleging inefficiency and failure to co-operate with Dr. Brides and his defense occupied the greater part of the day at today's hearings. Charges against Captain Blake were to the effect that he had been disloyal to Brides, had been drunk at a meeting at Lowell, and had talked about "getting Dr. Brides' job."

Dr. Brides, the last witness to appear, made a bitter attack on his subordinate. He declared that Captain Blake had never protected him at any time, and instead of keeping things quiet had given out "rumors to the newspapers."

EXTRADITION PAPERS TO BE ISSUED FOR "WIRE-TAPPERS"

George McRea and Louis Silverman, two of the alleged members of the gang of "wire-tappers" who fleeced Dr. E. B. Carman of Freeport, L. I., of $14,000, and bilked Edward Meixner of Newark, N. J., of $10,000 in fake gambling operations at Narragansett Pier, R. I., from New York to Rhode Island, will probably bt signed by Governor William S. Flynn of this state tomorrow, if brought to Rhode Island the men will be tried for larceny.

5285 INSPECTIONS PER CAR

The faithfulness of performance so universally remarked in Dodge Brothers Motor Cars, is due, in no small part, to the thoroughness with which each unit is inspected during the process of manufacture and assembly.

A trained staff of 1100 experts is employed in this work alone, and approximately 5,285 inspections are made on each car.

So exacting and rigid are the standards applied to these inspections that the slightest variation, either in workmanship or material, is sufficient cause for immediate rejection.

Dodge Brothers are almost over-scrupulous in their constant aim to make each car as sound and perfect as is humanly possible.

School began Tuesday morning. Thursday morning the snow was so deep the school team that conveys the children from Usquepaugh did not go up, but Mrs. Carrie F. Brown, principal, came through just the same—walked the whole distance and opened school about 11 o'clock. There were only a few children present, but the teacher was on hand.

GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATIONS.

When there are those who criticise the quick disposal of the appropriation bills in congress, it may be that they are judging action by certain instances in the past where delays have been deplorable and resorted to for the purpose of influencing action on other legislation. Too often have the appropriation measures been used for log-rolling purposes and rider carriers, with too little regard for the need of providing the departments with the funds required to carry on their work.

The idea of a careful scrutiny of the amounts asked for and the purposes for which they are intended is proper, but intelligent consideration doesn't call for putting off action until the last moment and then rushing the bills through as if they were of little or no consequence.

It is entirely possible to give wholesome deliberation to the appropriation measures and dispose of them, especially when it is recognized that economy is being practiced instead of extravagance. Nothing is more unjust than the idea of holding up supply bills and through failure to act upon them force the calling of a special session of congress.

It is to be realized that at the present time there is an additional safeguard against unwise expenditures in the supply bills that come from the budget commission. It is not to be supposed that the entire dependence will be placed upon the recommendation of that bureau and yet when that has given consideration to the requirements and the means which the government has to meet them it is evident that the country is far better protected than it was when congress acted along the haphazard lines.

The budget system may well serve to aid in the speeding up of action. That doesn't warrant negligence on the part of congress and there is no evidence in the manner in which the bills have been acted on in the present session that there is any danger now. Because congress shows a disposition to prompt action may be a bit unusual but it doesn't warrant condemnation.

IN THE SOFT COAL FIELDS.

When it is hinted from the fact finding commission that there will be no strike in the soft coal fields in the spring it is to be inferred that there is some inside information on which such a view is based. Likewise it is to be sincerely hoped that it will prove to be true. But in order to avoid a strike from the present outlook it means that there must be an agreement between the coal operators and the miners. That hasn't been an impossibility in the past, although there is invariably friction if it is necessary to pay any attention to the welfare of the consumer.

In the recent meeting of the miners and operators there wasn't anything to indicate the approach of an understanding, barring the fact that another conference is to be held. According to the demands that were put forth by the respective sides it doesn't appear from the first meeting that there had been any change in their attitudes. The miners were firm for an agreement in accord with the plan whereby the central competitive field would govern the matter of wages, while certain of the operators were insistent upon the fixing of wages by districts that consideration might be given to the conditions prevailing in the different districts. One of the weak spots from the standpoint of the operators was that they were not able to agree amongst themselves. Some favored one thing and some the other.

Inasmuch as the operators are far from being a unit, it seems not improbable that the view as expressed by the fact-finding commission is based upon the fact that there is such a strong tendency among the operators to accept the central competitive field plan that that will be settled upon at the coming gathering of miners and operators. With such an agreement, governing as it would the bituminous coal production in Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania and Ohio, the probability of a strike would be practically wiped out, or the effect of strikes in other fields would be far from serious.

THE FORCES ON THE RHINE.

By the passage of the Reed resolution in the senate favoring the withdrawal of the American forces on the Rhine the government is not bound to act. The view has been frequently expressed that our troops ought to be off of European soil, and it has been stated that they would be withdrawn just as soon as it was believed wise. The greater part of them are already home.

But inasmuch as it was considered important that they should be a part of the army of occupation up to this time, the government feels that that same responsibility exists, and that action concerning them ought not to be taken now at a time when it would be open to the criticism of being guided by the result of the Paris conference.

In the action favoring the return of the troops the purpose is to avoid being drawn into any clash that may result as France takes action to put his plan of showing Germany into operation. If the troops are not there they cannot be involved, and it is figured that this country cannot be drawn in. However, the Ruhr is not where the American troops are located and our forces are not under the direction of the French so that it appears that the government is fully conscious of what it is doing when it is declared that the view of the senate will not be compiled with at the present time.

If orders for the return of the American forces should be issued it would be interpreted as taking sides with Germany as against the French. That is a view that would not be correct. Again if we resort to such a step it would end all possibility of favorable consideration being given to the plan as suggested by Secretary Hughes. Quite the same as the other countries having troops there as the result of the peace treaties it behooves us to hold to the position which has been previously adhered to. That doesn't commit us to anything additional, and it doesn't make us seem to run away.

DAUGHERTY'S VINDICATION.

The impeachment charges against Attorney General Daugherty have resulted in just what was expected. The adoption of the resolution declaring that the charges have not been sustained by an almost unanimous vote in the committee shows what an impression was made by Congressman Keller's attempt to make a grandstand play with a lot of claims which he could not substantiate.

No better idea of the foundation on which the impeachment charges were based can be gained than from the conduct of the complainant at the time of the hearing. It was a sorry spectacle. The claims he made fell flat and the attitude of the congressman was anything but cred table.

At the time the charges were made and when a hearing of them was insisted upon there was the clear cut denial of the attorney general. Possibly that might have been expected in any case. But had there not been a demand for an early hearing such a cloud would have been permitted to hang over the head of this important cabinet member indefinitely. When, however, the attorney general was insistent that there should be no delay, that the charges should be heard on their merits and at once, he displayed the attitude of an innocent man and it became clear as the hearing proceeded that the charges were unjust and unwarranted. Except for the fact that it was of the greatest importance that such serious charges should be disposed of the hearing was nothing more than a waste of time.

The outcome is what was looked for. The attempt to make the attorney general the goal has signally failed and the part that has been played by Congressman Keller adds nothing to his credit. It is to be expected that a congressman will have the courage to take such action when conditions warrant it, but this case has demonstrated the importance of making sure you're right before going ahead.

A WEAKNESS INVOLVING SAFETY.

Because of the growing problem of dealing with motor traffic violators attention is being turned by many states to the methods which have been employed by others in the solving of their problems. In this respect the motor vehicle laws of Connecticut have been frequently sought and much commendation received for the results obtained.

That there is still an opportunity not only to study but to apply them is furnished by the situation that prevails in New York. According to the figures of the traffic court in Manhattan, where over a half million cases were heard last year, there were only 87 chauffeurs and 11 owners who had their licenses revoked and only 427 chauffeurs and 3 owners who had their licenses suspended. This is the situation in spite of the great number of fatalities there and the fact that 390 were arrested for reckless driving and 153 for driving while intoxicated.

How this compares with the enforcement of laws concerning motor vehicles in Connecticut is shown by the fact that in eleven months of 1922 there were 1,690 instances where licenses were suspended for varying periods, 566 of the drivers having lost their licenses for a year because of driving while intoxicated.

New York doesn't appear to be striving very strenuously in behalf of greater safety in its highways, and for some reason it hasn't as yet been impressed by the importance of taking away the right to drive motor vehicles as a punishment for violation of regulations. That is one of the backward tendencies displayed in our neighbor to the west which gives the impression that it is not giving as serious consideration to the problem as it might, or as prevailing conditions warrant. With an insignificant number deprived of the right to drive their cars because of their failure to respect traffic requirements New York seems to favor charging a license fee for violations instead of trying to check them.

Governor Templeton is an enthusiastic supporter of a central purchasing agent for the state institutions. Economy is highly desirable at all times but some consideration must be given to proper administration.

PROVED BY STATISTICS

"I wish I knew," groaned the distracted young man with the mournful eyes, "whether Cinnamonia cares for me or not. The suspense is driving me crazy!"

"You can find out if you ask her," suggested the practical roommate, who liked to reduce everything to figures, add them up and crush people with the result thereby produced.

"That's the trouble," the distracted young man said still more mournfully. "I might find I wish I hadn't found out. If she said she didn't, what would there be left for me in life?"

"Apple pancakes, new shows the baseball season and several hundred thousand other recompenses," the practical roommate told him. "Even if she does care for you there will be spaces of time every few minutes during the rest of your life when you will be looking for other items of interest than Cinnamonia."

"I think that when people are married," the distracted young man stated, "their interests should be common and—and everything like that."

"It's a perfectly good theory," the statistical roommate agreed, "but it doesn't work. Cinnamonia can't tag along when you go to your tailor's or for a game of billiards or out on a golf foursome. And she'd object decidedly if you wished to attend her when she went for a fitting or to get a shampoo. But why not assume that she is wild about you instead of looking on the gloomy side of the affair? If it makes you happier to imagine that Cinnamonia is gazing at the moon nights and thinking of you, or tearing her hair out because she fears you do not love her, go ahead and plant your feet firmly on that viewpoint.

"Statistics prove that 11.98 per cent. out of every ten young women beloved by man invariably return that affection, anyhow, so there is no need for you to worry. When times are so hard and matrimony so high, any girl who gets a man to the point of even considering the parson and a ring has achieved a great success in her line, and she knows it. Choke back those sobs in your throat and powder your nose and cheer up——"

"But she is so different," interposed the distracted young man. "Cinnamonia is not in the least like any other girl I ever knew, and it is impossible to judge her feelings by statistics, I tell you! If she was just an average girl perhaps it might be done—but when I consider how wonderful, how utterly remarkable, that girl is, I realize how impossible it is that she should care for a worm like me——"

"Statistics prove," said the callous roommate, "that 103 per cent. of 100 men arrested for brutally beating their wives went around before marriage shouting about what insects, worms and generally no-account individuals they were. After you are married to Cinnamonia and discover that she is precisely and completely just a mere human being like everybody else and puts her hair up in curl papers and gets mad when you track mud into the house and threatens to go home to mother when you are late to dinner, you will wonder why you were not more calm."

"If you had ever been in love," the distracted young man paused in his worries long enough to remark tartly, "you wouldn't be so brutal and unsympathetic! Some girl is mighty lucky to have escaped marrying you!"

"I was in love several times," said the statistical roommate reproachfully. "And I treated those girls splendidly, if I do say it! I was too good to 'em, that's what, and they got cheeky and careless and tried to throw me down, only I dropped them first.

"What I'm looking for is a girl who doesn't make me feel humble and groveling as you are. I want one who will look up to me and admire me for my manly qualities and feed me Welsh rarebits and telephone me six times a day to ask whether it is possible that I still love her! That's the kind of girl to be engaged to, and then you don't have to worry at all and have time to attend to business.

"Go around and see Cinnamonia and scowl at her and roar and be primitive and she'll hurl herself upon your chest and beg you to be kind to a mere weak girl who trembles at your frown! Just try it and you'll see!"

"I suppose I might as well do that as anything," sighed the distracted young man. "Whatever I do I'll wish I hadn't, I expect! Gee, what if she turns me down and out!"

"Huh!" said his roommate. "Statistics prove she won't—most of the world gets married eventually, you know!"—Chicago News.

A Little Talk on Thrift

You Cannot Waste and Have.

There is an old saying we all used to hear when we were children that you can't eat your cake and have it. If each individual in this nation would learn the profound truth of this homely old maxim and put its teachings into effect in his own life, many of the social and economic troubles of the present time would disappear.

You can't squander all that you earn in days of prosperity and have a competency for the periods of adversity. You can't waste your time in idleness or ill-advised pursuits and hold your own in the race for success. You can't keep late hours, dissipate, over-indulge your appetite, or over-work to an unreasonable degree, and retain the blessings of good health. You can't associate with evil companions and retain the honor and respect of your worthy acquaintances. You can't be a miser in your practices and still have the vision, courage and good judgment to keep up in the procession of progress.

You don't waste your dollar and have it; but you can spend it prudently and have its equivalent.

You can't waste your years and have them; but you can employ them usefully and have priceless possession of your own creation.

Many of the ills of life are due to the mistaken attempts of those who try to eat their cake and have it. If son would develop in your work and achieve the ambitions of your life, remember this simple truth. Today's sacrifice is very often tomorrow's prosperity. Hard knocks are frequently blessings in disguise.

But following the line of least resistance; yielding to small and ill-advised impulses; making things easy of pleasant for the time being without thought of the future, inevitably lead to hardship and trouble.

Guard your resources; conserve your strength; improve your opportunities. You cannot eat your cake and have it. These are the truths of thrift.—American Thrift Society.

Eunice Macdaniel, Wife of Charles A. Dana.

Beautiful, brilliant and charming, Eunice Macdaniel, wife of Charles A. Dana, writer and newspaper publisher, was precisely the sort of woman one would expect to find married to a man of affairs. Gifted in every way, possessed with many talents, including that rare one of social assurance, Mrs. Dana was hugely successful in all her undertakings.

She and her husband shared every thought. Both were interested in politics, literature, music and all other forms of art. Eunice was the youngest daughter of a Maryland widow, and was lavishly endowed with the traditional southern charm. Her family was one of fame and attainment. Her personal appearance was attractive and reflected her mind and disposition. She was high spirited and always active; her black eyes sparkled with mirth and mirrored her thoughts.

She was rather slight, but she stood erect and she was just as energetic play, steadily as she was nervous. There is little doubt that, had she been a man, her achievements would have carried her far on the road to fame. As it was, she was well known and admired not only for her intellect but also for her excellences in domestic matters.

Before her marriage Mrs. Dana cherished an unfulfilled ambition to go on the stage, but this did not interfere with her accomplishments as a housekeeper. In addition to this, she was very public-spirited and took a special interest in civic affairs. All together, her life was unusually well rounded for a woman of her day and age.

Kris and Santa.

Mary was riding in the back seat of the automobile on Christmas day. "Daddy!" she called out to the driver. "Listen to me." Daddy obligingly listened and there came a hard question: "Who brought Santa Claus his Christmas presents when he was a little boy?"

Daddy had to give a plausible answer, but the best he could say was Kris Kringle, who was Santa Claus's father, brought Santa his presents when he was a little boy and this satisfied a curious four-year-old girl. He hoped nobody would pipe up and say that Kris Kringle was another name for Santa Claus.

"Major Trousers" Introduced.

A well known citizen had his favorite tailor and also a poor memory for names. He had arranged an informal reception in his home in honor of a prominent guest from another city. The tailor attended.

When the tailor greeted the host who stood in the receiving line beside his guest, signs of perplexity over his identity appeared on the host's face.

"Made your trousers," whispered the tailor into his patron's ear, thinking to help him remember.

"Meet Major Trousers," boomed out the introduction as the tailor received the hand of the guest.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Another Protest Against Dismantling Norwich-Westerly Trolley.

Mr. Editor: I was much interested in the protests against the discontinuance of our trolley from Norwich to Westerly. The trolley has been our dependence in years past and some of us have gone on them lately as long as they were run, making the long waiting at each place to help them along. There are people here who have no automobiles and we know the trolleys are warm and safe in all seasons of the year. We have the bus from Westerly to Norwich, but there is no comparison to the comfort of the trolley. I think that if the trolley had been run at the times the bus has gone the patronage would have been better, as it would have accommodated the people from here and along the line. Several work in Westerly and they have had to go some other way in the early morning and also at night, and one car kept running at the right times would have been a great help. I, too, think there must be some way to keep our much needed trolleys.

A Word to the Friends of Arbuckle.

Mr. Editor: Arbuckle seems to have another friend in "West Side." If Arbuckle did not assault Virginia Rappe, why should her first statement be to the effect that he was to blame for her injury?

A great many people harp on the question of immorality and always place the blame on the woman, saying she must have given the man encouragement. In the majority of cases the man is to blame. No doubt Arbuckle belongs to this class.

Were Arbuckle a laboring man those who are his friends today would be his strongest enemies.

I wish to impress upon the mind of "West Side" that the angels among the men whose wings have started is not even one-half of one per cent.

It is the likes of "West Side" who sits on juries and acquits the Almighty Dollar and encourages a repetition of the act.

The Unfortunate Native Americans.

Mr. Editor: A great Teacher said some 1900 years ago: "Let the children first be filled; for it is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it unto the dogs." —Mark 7: 27. But when the United States government decided to take part in the World war, it drafted the native young men to meet its hardships and probable death itself, for $30 a month or $1 a day and found. Instead of putting before the alien, a subject of a foreign government, the alternative of sharing the duties and the draft, as well as the privilege of America, or of returning home, it gave them work here, the less skilled at about $4 per day, and the skilled at $8 or $9 per day, on government work, so raising enormously the scale of wages of their fellows in all industries, safe away from the war in a land of peace and plenty; and when our own sons returned, if they did return, from the war, they generally found the alien snugly ensconced in their former positions, and themselves adrift and jobless. The older natives past the age for wage-earning, find their little savings, if they have been able to make any under wages less than half those of the war time, melting away like fog under war profiteering prices, and many now in want and poverty. No wonder my old friend Johnson declares, "The native Americans are the biggest 'dubs' in the world, to endure what they do from the fool management of self-seeking politicians, and as 'easy mark' for all."

Another instance of privileges accorded the alien in our cities is the advantage of the best schools free, being paid for by taxes upon the older-settled property owners; while the Americans of the rural districts because of their poverty have inferior schooling, and in large sections of the country, mountainous or infertile, as in Tennessee, etc., they have very little even of that. Yet what a howl against the bill which proposed federal aid to such regions, because it gave the government the right to inspect, to see that the aid was applied to public education and wisely applied.

BETTER FEELING PREVAILS AT NEAR EASTERN CONFERENCE

Lausanne, Jan. 9.—(By the A. P.)—A distinctly better feeling characterized today's proceedings of the Near East conference. Full agreement has been reached on all points except those of the amnesty, the exemption of Christians in Turkey from military service and establishment of national homelands for the Armenians and Assyro-Chaldeans.

The expectation is that the first two of these difficult problems will be settled later by private negotiations and incorporated in the projected treaty, but the solution of the last named problem appears hopeless, for the moment at least.

Ismet Pasha, chief of the delegation from Angora, told the conference today that Turkey could not admit of any discussion touching on national homes for the Armenians or the Assyro-Chaldeans.

"We have a firm conviction," he said, "that the measures we have taken in Turkey for the future will heal all wounds and that everybody in Turkey will work together in peace and tranquility. Our motto is 'An Indivisible and harmonious fatherland.'"

Marquis Curzo, the British foreign secretary, made an eloquent appeal to the Turkish delegates to reconsider the question, which, he emphasized, had an enormous importance from the point of view of world opinion. Both the Armenians and the Assyro-Chaldeans, he said with deep earnestness, had suffered greatly; their future was terrible uncertain, and they were entitled to some adequate guarantees.

Sir Horace Rumbold, British high commissioner in Constantinople, had suggested an autonomous home for the Armenians in Cilicia, and this seemed to Lord Curzon the best way for Turkey to secure the satisfactory cooperation of a hard-working and intelligent people in the contiguous of a new Turkey.

Turkey, he said, was obdurate now, but he was confident that later she would perceive the wisdom of doing something along the lines suggested.

DAUGHERTY IMPEACHMENT CHARGES ARE DISMISSED

Washington, Jan. 9.—Dismissal of impeachment charges brought against Attorney General Daugherty by Representative Keller, republican, Minnesota, is recommended to the house in a resolution adopted today, 12 to 2, by the judiciary committee, which held public hearings on the charges last month.

At the same time the committee approved, 11 to 2, a formal report to the house holding that that body had the power to punish Mr. Keller by imprisonment or otherwise for his refusal to obey a subpoena issued for him immediately after his dramatic withdrawal from th case on the third day of the hearings.

Both the resolution and the report will be submitted to the house tomorrow by Chairman Volstead, but whether there will be formal action on them appears to be a moot question. Some committeemen are of the opinion that house action is unnecessary. But others think greatly; their future was terrible uncertain, and they were entitled to some adequate guarantees.

GEN. GOETHALS NOW FUEL ADMINISTRATOR OF NEW YORK

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 9.—Governor Smith late today announced that he had accepted the resignation of William H Woodin as fuel administrator of New York state. Mothers Advise Their Daughters to Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Keep Them in Health

A Mother's Advice Prevents Operation

Corona, N. Y.—"I had a terrible pain in my left side and had to go to bed every so often. Doctors had told me I must be operated on, but I do not believe in the knife and would rather suffer than go through it. My mother also did not believe in it and she made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it had helped her. It has also helped me for I am better and able to do all my work. I recommend your medicine and give you permission to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. BUSCH, Jr., 11 S. Railroad Avenue, Corona, N. Y.

A Sickly Child

Mahoningtown, Pa.—"I would like to say a few words about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About a year ago I thought it would be necessary for me to take my daughter out of school. She was losing weight, was nervous, and when she would come home from school she would drop into a chair and cry, and say, 'Mamma, I don't believe I can go to school another day!' I gave her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now she is a healthy, happy, hearty, strong girl and weighs 120 pounds. She has no difficulty in doing her 'gym' work, and she works at home every night and morning, too. I am a mother who can certainly praise your medicine, and if it will be of any benefit you may use this letter as a reference."—Mrs. GEORGE E. WHITACRE, 621 W. Madison Ave., Mahoningtown, Pa.

Every girl wants to be healthy and strong, and every mother wants her daughter to do well in school and to enjoy herself at all times.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for young girls just entering womanhood. Mothers may depend upon it. Remember it is prepared from roots and herbs, contains nothing that can injure, and tends to tone up and strengthen the organs concerned, so that they will work in a healthy and normal manner.

For nearly fifty years it has been used by women of all ages, and these women know its great value.

Let it help your daughter and yourself.

KIDNEYS NEED LOTS OF WATER AT TIMES

If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Also Take a Little Salts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; make a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

WATERBURY MAN LECTURES BEFORE ART ASSOCIATION

At the regular January meeting of the Norwich Art Students' Association held Monday evening at Slater Memorial Edward J. Balthazar of Waterbury, gave a most interesting lecture on modern art. Beginning with the works of Eugene Delacroix, whose manner Mr. Balthazar characterized as an intellectual revolution, and the methods of the Barbazon school, as an emotional deviation from old pseudo-classic art prevalent in Europe before 1830, the school of Manet, he stated, was a move nearer to actual realism in art than the romantic school of Millet, Rousseau, and Corot. Mr. Balthazar dwelt several times on the fact that most intellectual art revolutions are coincident with political ones. The Franco-Prussian war of 1870 saw the birth of impressionism, whose characteristics he analyzed at great length. He also emphasized the merit of Cezanne, after warning against his idiosyncracies, and terminated his lecture by showing in what degree our most famous painters were influenced by Monet, Renoir and Cezanne, and predicting, the high role the future has in store for American art.

The lecture was well illustrated by lantern slides.

Nothing Heard of Taftville Girl

Nothing had been heard yet on Tuesday, so far as the police knew, of 13 year old Annie Bontempo, who disappeared from her home in Taftville last Saturday. It is said the girl had stayed away from school and was afraid to come home for fear of the whipping she might get.

POOR $5 COUNTERFEIT REPORTED IN CIRCULATION

The circulation of another counterfeit bill is announced by the treasury department in a letter. The new counterfeit note is a $5 silver certificate described as of the series of 1899, with the check letter C and the plate number 40. The signatures of W. C. Elliot, register of the treasury, and John Burke, treasurer of the United States, are attached. The certificate also bears the portrait of an Indian.

The counterfeit is poorly executed and apparently printed from zinc-etched plates on a single piece of paper bearing red ink lines to imitate the silk fibre of the genuine. The note is so apparently spurious, particularly on the back, which is dark green with few of the fine lines of the lathe and ornamental work clearly defined, that it should be readily detected.

TAKES UP NEW PASTORATE AT UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

Rev. A. N. Foster, the new pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist), took up the pastorate there on the first Sunday of the new year, preaching a strong sermon upon "The Primary Purpose of the Church," which, he said was to reveal the vision of the Spirit and to give vision to life.

His text was Proverbs 29, 18: When there is no vision the people perish, and he spoke in part as follows:

An institution with long history and sustained contact with different social classes, makes a many-fold appeal. Its purpose seems to shift and vary according to circumstances. At times the primary things are obscured and all but forgotten and the incidental and the accidental features are unduly magnified. We need, at times, a new evaluation of the social initiations of society; a new statement of the relations between things primary and things subordinate and contributory.

In the larger sense, a factory exists—not to provide employment or even to commend financial profit — but rather to provide shoes or other necessities for society.

A mine is developed—not for the sake of studying geology, etc., but rather for the sake of providing coal for the community needs.

A school exists, not for the sake of sport and athletics nor even for the sake of imparting information and knowledge. It does exist for the sake of training the mind so that the resources of character and of Nature may be readily and efficiently commended.

Commonly an analysis of an institution implies the three fold appeal suggested by physchology—body, mind and soul. The church has endeavored, in its long and varied history to respond to all three appeals. If we are interested in the church as a voluntary association of thinking men and reflective women banded together for the sake of social uplift, the question of relative purpose becomes of pertinent interest.

Some emphasize social acquaintances and that is indeed valuable but it is incidental and not primary; others magnify the appeal for truth—the truth of the creedal doctrines; the truth of scientific research or of industrial endeavor; but even the research for truth does not confuse the great purpose of the church. The primary purpose of the church is to reveal the vision of the spirit.

The recently chosen president of the great Armour Packing Company has declared that his purpose is, not financial profit or mechanical skill, but rather it is to put "vision" into the working of a vast commercial corporation.

The distinctive and all precious mission of the Christian church with its revered memories, its hallowed traditions and its costly equipment is to give "vision" to life; without such vision the people perish. Its primary purpose is to show the necessity of routine in the light of a high faith and to glorify the common place; not so much to displace the old gospel for a new gospel as to proclaim the old in the light of new revelation and in the strength of new understanding. Vision of the spirit implies a responsibility to the weak and unfortunate and also requires that communion with high influences which comes through prayer and devotion.

LYME ARTISTS OPPOSING PROPOSED CHANGE IN ROAD

Anticipating that the intention of the state highway department is to cut a road across the grounds of the new art gallery of the Lyme Art Association to get rid of a dangerous corner in the present state highway at Pilfick Store corner, petitions are being freely circulated in Old Lyme asking that a new route be selected.

The corner is a sharp one and in the past, although not recently, there have been bad accidents to automobiles. Surveyors are at work on lines to make the turn easier and these lines run close to the art gallery, which cost $25,000 in 1921, and which was placed where it is because of the excellent setting.

Friends of the art association claim that alteration of the grounds would spoil the site and affect the value of the gallery. The gallery is said to be one of the first erected in any summer colony of artists in the country, and its annual exhibitions draw many visitors from distant parts.

ASKS FUEL ADMINISTRATORS TO WATCH RETAIL PRICES

In order to protect the public against the possibility of increase in coal prices resulting from the present exceedingly unfavorable transportation conditions, Fuel Administrator Thomas W. Russell sent on Tuesday to all local administrators throughout Connecticut a telegram asking that the attitude of retail dealers be carefully watched in regard to prices and delivery restrictions. "Because of difficult weather conditions I request you to use extraordinary diligence in watching attitude of retail dealers under your jurisdiction as regards retail prices and delivery restrictions. If you see any inclination of dealers to take advantage of present situation please wire facts to us. necessity seems justified I will immediately recommend to the governor that emergency legislation be passed by legislature."

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Windham County National bank was held at their banking rooms on Tuesday at 10 a. m., and the following were elected a board of directors to serve for the ensuing year: Timothy E. Hopkins, Milton A. Stanaway, Nathan D. Prince, William A. Gaston, Charles A. Tillinghast, Nathaniel G. Williams, Obadiah Butler and Andrew D. Bigood. The officers will be elected at a subsequent meeting of the board.

As pretty a sight as has been seen hereabouts in a long time came before the vision of J. H. Milligan on a recent afternoon at his place on North Main street. Eight beautiful deer were herded near the edge of the wood a short distance in the rear of his garage. There were two bucks and six does in the herd, all scampering away as Mr. Milligan's dog joined him in the yard where he was viewing the unusual sight.

Mrs. Julia Tigue, 77, is dead at her home in Dayville, where she has been a resident since she came to this country from Ireland 22 years ago. Mrs. Tigue passed away about 11 o'clock Monday night. She was the mother of Patrick Tigue and Mrs. Patrick O'Neil of Dayville.

Legislators from towns hereabouts will go to Hartford this (Wednesday) morning for the reconvening of the legislature. Among those having special duties to perform in connection with the organization of the legislature is Representative E. L. Darble of Killingly, who is acting as chairman of the committee appointed to assign seats to the members of the house. Permanent committee appointments are expected to be made at today's session. In all probability Representative Darble will again be a member of the judiciary committee, as he was during the session of 1921. Representative George Williams may be named as a member of the incorporations committee.

It was announced Tuesday that the Mc-Laughlin motor garage property, which has been idle for some time, has been rented to a dealer having headquarters in Putnam and handling a very popular make of car, for the storage of new cars during the remainder of the winter period. About 40 new machines will be placed in the building as fast as they are received.

A recipe for getting a ton of coal came through the mails to The Bulletin Tuesday. No guarantee that it will work is attached with the formula, but the giver is ready to swear for what he knows.

One wishing a ton of coal should post himself in some secluded spot near the railroad and watch for trains hauling anthracite. It may be necessary to watch day and night for a week, but this is a mere incident if one really is in need of coal. In due time some train will slow up and shunt a carload of coal on to a siding. Watch the cars carefully to be sure it has not been left merely for a temporary stay. When assured of an unloading process begin your mad as soon as one car is really destined for this locality.

Then you rush for the lucky coal yard in hurry to the nearest telephone. At this point in the plan of persuasion must manifest itself. Tell the holds of tons of coal and you know there is going to be at least 12 tons of requests to the dealer that applicants be given a share of it. The dealer has many orders placed months ago, and listens to a constant clamor that they be filled. All these things you must explain. You must be prepared to assure him that you have a dying grandmother in a refrigerated house or that children's toes are frostbitten, while any sleep to make even a dent in the manners that are just up this winter against those who are struggling for fuel. But the dealer cannot help you. He is doing his utmost to keep everyone as nearly satisfied as is possible by making the most equitable distribution of such meager coal as comes to him.

Your next move therefore is to buy a coal mine in Pennsylvania, build a railroad, mine your own coal and haul it home. Then you will be sure of an ample supply of fuel if the interstate commerce commission does not butt in. If your railroad is not blocked by storms or your coal is not seized in transit to keep some public building warm. This is all so easy that there seems not the slightest need for any further worry about getting coal in this winter of normalcy. It will be noted that strikers, coal operators or railroad owners do not figure at all in this scheme of things. That is why it appears so entirely reasonable.

A snappy bunch of basketball with Killingly High school and New London Vocational school as contenders is scheduled for Friday evening of this week at the town hall. Manager Brotchneider of the Killingly team says that it appears likely this game will be one of the very best of the season. The Killingly High team has improved materially since the opening of the season and New London has a notably strong team. That is why followers of high school basketball are looking for a really fast and closely contested game—the kind that sets the entire attendance to cheering with greatest abandon.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard P. Morrison of Morris avenue will leave today to motor to New York for the national exhibition of automobiles now being held in that city.

Mrs. Lucile Caron will have members of the Treble Clef club at her home this (Wednesday) evening for one of the weekly meetings of the organization.

Preparations were being made Tuesday to begin the harvesting of ice at the Hygeia reservoir near East Killingly, where part of the borough's supply is obtained. The ice was said to be about 10 inches thick on Tuesday.

Tuesday turned in another snow storm for good measure and as a demonstration that this January is proving a tough proposition.

Undertaker A. F. Wood was called to Providence Tuesday in connection with the death of Katie Purcell Lowell, 73, widow of George Henry Lowell. Mrs. Lowell died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward F. Ward, of Point street. She also leaves another daughter, Mrs. Leon Stone, of North Foster. Mrs. Lowell was a daughter of Isaac and Maria Nash and was born in Newark, N. J. For 20 years the family was resident in the town of Foster.

Jeremiah McGrath, whose death occurred Monday in Norwich, was for many years a resident of Brooklyn, living for years on a farm now known as the Harrington place, on Church street, and for other years on what was known as the Scarborough farm, near the Allen Hill section.

PUTNAM

At the weekly meeting of the directors of Putnam chamber of commerce Monday noon at the Putnam Inn, there was considerable discussion as to the failure of Putnam people to support the annual Red Cross roll call. It was deplored that only thirty dollars was raised in the whole city, and the directors felt that this failure should not deter the Red Cross chapter from redoubling its efforts and reconduct the drive with a new organization and most thorough and carefully laid plans as possible. Feeling as they did, the directors voted a resolution to the effect that the Putnam chamber of commerce, appreciative of the invaluable work that is being rendered to the people of our city the public health nursing service, carried on under the auspices of the Putnam Red Cross chapter; and learning of the almost utter failure of the annual Red Cross roll call, by which money is raised through annual memberships of $1 each to help finance this humanitarian work, that the directors of the Putnam chamber of commerce earnestly recommend to Putnam Red Cross chapted that arrangements be immediately made to re-conduct the annual roll call, for it is our conviction that the people of Putnam are still vitally interested in this work and want to support it, and if given this new opportunity will contribute gladly; and further that the directors of the Putnam chamber of commerce will do everything possible to make such a drive of greatest possible success.

For the 40th time, says the Willimantic correspondent of The Bulletin, Jim Friery "of Putnam" was sent to jail by the judge of the Willimantic city court, Monday morning, on a charge of vagrancy. No exception is taken to the item of news as a new item, but it is the sixteenth time that Willimantic has tried to foster Jim onto our fair city as one of its citizens. Friery has been sent to jail from the Putnam city court many times in the past and has worked off and on in Putnam between times out not for years has Jim of the long police court record has been a resident of Putnam.

A Putnam man met Jim in Hartford last week and made him a small loan at his request. It was with surprise that the generous gentleman learned that Jim was again a lodger in the county institution in Brooklyn. The smoke from the soft coal in the capital city having irritated Jim's throat as no hooch or white mule could ever do [illegible] living in the rural [illegible] where coal is [illegible] and has arrived just in time to help put [illegible] the summer's supply of ice for old Windham county.

There was a large gathering of Elks in the lodge rooms of Putnam lodge, Tuesday evening, when a class of candidates were given the degree. Following initiation there was a social session at which a buffet chicken supper was served.

F. J. McGuire of Main street has gone to the Peter Brigham Memorial hospital in Boston for observation and treatment. He expects to remain in the hospital for some weeks.

If one sticks to the state highway travel by automobile is not difficult as the state highway department has been busy with a set of road scrapers ever since the first fall of snow. From Putnam to Providence travel is made easy but on the Connecticut end the roadway is narrower than on the Rhode Island end. The only difficulty experienced in making the trip is the possibility of meeting and having to pass large trucks.

A large truck of the Inter-State Trucking company became stalled on Main street, Tuesday morning, and for a while partially blocked traffic as the heavy truck and its load came to a stop on the trolley track.

State's Attorney Charles E. Searls and Public Defender Charles L. Torrey were in Willimantic Tuesday, where trials of criminal cases were begun before Judge George E. Hinman. There are no important cases on the docket for this term of court and the session will probably be a short one.

Putnam people are asked to think of the birds and throw out crumbs for them to eat. Many are doing this and in some places suet is seen tied to trees for the birds to feet on. On account of the deep snow the birds have a hard time finding sufficient food unless thoughful people come to the rescue.

George Lewis, Jr., is chairman and John Lynch, Archibald Macdonald, Jr., J. Alfred Gagne, James Murray, A. Grayden Sharpe and Oscar Rich members of a committee of Putnam lodge of Elks in charge of arrangements for the annual Charity ball this month. The proceeds of this annual event are used by the lodge for charitable purposes during the year, more especially during the holiday season when many baskets of food are distributed among the deserving and needy poor.

People were interested in a rotary snow plow which appeared Tuesday on the front end of a Connecticut company trolley car. The plow cleaned the tracks almost to the roadway itself and made travel very easy. It enabled the road to maintain its schedule for the first time since the recent snow storm.

Letters from W. H. Johnson and E. L. Davis of Putnam, who are spending the winter months in Florida, tell of sitting about in light clothing trying to keep cool in the middle of the day. No snow to shovel and no empty coal bins to face. But still there are many people who do not care to forego a good old fashioned winter.

Very little coal has been coming into Putnam the past few weeks and supplies are low. If one wants his favorite steak he is usually told that he will have to take a substitute and it is getting to be a fortunate householder who is able to get even a substitute. The plentiful supply that was forecasted for after January 1st has not as yet materialized. Meanwhile many cords of wood are going up in smoke.

An item that appeared in the con-densed news on the front page of The Bulletin Monday morning to the effect that Fred J. LaPlante of Worcester was sentenced in the district court at Salem, Mass., to 18 months in jail after pleading guilty to fraudulent healing treatments and admitting convictions for practicing medicine without a license, was read with much interest by the older members of the Putnam police force for it was only a year ago that the members of Putnam's finest were looking for that self same Fred LaPlante who had been playing his miracle cure in Putnam and collecting dollars from the gullible.

LaPlante worked Putnam under the alias of Fred J. Hanley. He appeared at homes of the poorer people where there were cripples or invalids and told imaginary tales of the wonders that his concoctions had performed. He always got a substantial advance payment and gave a receipt in which it was stated that money paid him would be returned if a cure was not effected. After getting his victim's money he never appeared a second time and soon complaints began to find their way to the police. They sought the man but he had disappeared and nothing further was known of him until the news of his arrest and conviction was read in The Bulletin.

The annual meeting of the First Na-tional bank was held in the temporary banking rooms on Union street Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. The following directors were re-elected: Charles H. Brown, Lebbeus E. Smith, Ransom H. Bradley, John O. Fox, G. Harold Gilpatric, Silas M. Wheelock, John A. Dady, Edward W. Mullan and Oscar Dugas.

Following the stockholders meeting the directors met and re-elected Charles H. Brown, president; G. Harold Gilpatric cashier and Guy L. Baker, assistant cashier. The First National Bank building on Main street is now in process of reconstruction and by the time the next annual meeting is held the bank will be occupying its enlarged quarters.

The first meeting of the Putnam chamb-er of commerce will be held Thursday evening in Odd Fellows' hall when State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett will be the honor guest of the evening. It is understood that the tax commissioner feels very strongly about Putnam's continued violation of the state law of 1915 requiring every town in the state to revalue its real estate. Putnam is one of the five towns in the state that has neglected to comply with the law and therefore is classed as a law violator.

In view of the situation existing the coming of the state tax commissioner is of more than usual interest and the members of the chamber of commerce are anticipating hearing him answer such questions as: Will the state send experts here to make the revaluation? Can the bill be collected if this is done? Will he play his cards on the table or will he give the town another chance to make good and tell how to do it. It is expected that Mr. Blodgett will tell his audience much of what has been done in other parts of the state; about taxes, valuation, etc. An effort is being made to get together a large number of citizens to welcome the state official.

The continued good sleighing has made a ready market for sleighs. People who have formerly owned horses but have changed to automobiles and who have had old sleighs stored away have been sought by buyers and a good number of transactions have been recorded. Sleighs which cost from $75 to $190 during the time that the horse drawn vehicle was the only mode of transportation have been selling from ten to twenty dollars and the owners were glad to get rid of them at any price. Most of the sales were to people living in the country where in every farmer's barn is one horse, or more.

This is the first winter that sliding has become a popular pastime among the young people of Putnam.

Putnam was treated to its daily snow fall Tuesday. The morning was bright, sunny and warm but in the afternoon the skies clouded up again and by two o'clock the snow was falling.

It has become known that Mrs. Sara D. Stratton of Wilkinson street who died in a private hospital in Worcester Sunday night committed suicide by tying the bed clothes about her neck and leaping from a second story window. She suffered a nervous breakdown some time ago and was at the hospital for treatment.

While not unexpected it is gratifying to Putnam's citizens to know that John B. Byrne of this city is to receive from the hands of Governor Templeton the appointment as state bank commissioner to fill the unexpired term of Everett J. Sturgess, deceased and also for a full four years' term beginning July 1st next. Since the death of Commissioner Bissell Mr. Byrne has held the position by appointment of former Governor Everett J. Lake.

Antonio Bonneville, who has been at St. Vincent's hospital, Worcester, for an operation has returned home and is slowly regaining his strength.

Attorney Howard C. Bradford has been in Worcester this week where he good his son, Searls Bradford, aged 6, for an operation which it was hoped would restore the full use of one of his fingers. Some months ago the boy fell and as he put out his hand to save himself it came in contact with a piece of glass. The result was the severing of a cord that controls one of the fingers. The operation resorted to was the taking of a piece of muscle from the lad's leg for use in his hand. The operation was performed successfully but no great amount of hope is held out as to the result that will be obtained.

The death of Mrs. Ellen E. Whitford who died in the Wolf Neck district, at Old Mystic Sunday came as a shock to her many friends here. She had been failing, but her death was unexpected.

The deceased was born in Ledyard Aug. 15, 1856, the daughter of Amasa M. and Lucy (Frink) Main. Besides her husband, Urban O. Whitford, she is survived by a son, Urban C. NORWICH TOWN

The Truth of Chiropractic, was the subject of an interesting talk given Monday evening by John C. Hinrichs, D. C., of this city before an enthusiastic audience at the First Congregational chapel. It was the January meeting of the Norwich Town Men's league. In part Dr. Hinrichs said:

It is surprising how little, most of us really know about our spines or backbones. Which reminds me of the little boy who when asked to locate the spine said: "Me head set on one end and I set on de udder."

I want it clearly understood at the start that any reference that I may make to the medical doctor or to medicine, is done for a matter of comparison only, and is in no way meant in a detrimental way to the doctor himself.

Chiropractic has been cussed and discussed, brow-beaten and trampled upon, hauled into court and out again to jail, but in spite of all this and because it is right, because it has done such wonderful work among the sick, has had such success where all else failed, and while even only in its 27th year, it has grown to such proportions that about half the state have passed laws protecting the science for the suffering. There are over twenty thousand practicing chiropractors.

There has been some talk as to the education of the Chiropractor, and in all fairness it should be known that most of this talk about correspondence schools etc., is simply propaganda by the medical fraternity. It is true that there were some small schools that sprung up and I believe some still exist, that claimed to teach chiropractic in a few weeks time or by correspondence, but it has been the same in all other successful ventures, when a thing seems to be successful there immediately springs from nowhere the imitators who prey upon the unthinking public.

The truth as to the necessary education of the chiropractor is that it is necessary for a student to take a full course of 4,163 hours, the same being equal to any three year course in any large college. It is also necessary to pass a state board examination in order to be allowed to practice in any of the state where they have passed protective laws which are now twenty-two in number. The subjects are, beside the technical chiropractic subjects, in a great part the same as those taught in the medical school with the exception of a few subjects that are of no use either to the medical men or the chiropractor. So you see the correspondence school has no chance to produce any chiropractors who could practice.

Now as to just what chiropractic is, I can best illustrate this by using as an example electricity with which you are all more or less familiar. Let us suppose that we have a ten story building that is lighted by electricity from a generator in the cellar. From this generator there runs a main cable up through each floor, and branching off from this cable are smaller cables at each floor which rebranch until they at last lead to the individual lights. At each floor we have a switch which cuts off this floor from the main cable or supply line.

Now let us refer to the human body and say that the head is the top floor of our building, the neck the ninth, etc., down to the feet. Here we have the generator in the top floor (the brain). Running down through the spine is our main cable (the spinal cord) branching between the vertebra are our floor branches (spinal nerves) which rebranch and lead to all organs and cells. Now in our building these cables carry as you know electricity, but in the human body they carry nerve force which is just as necessary to our organs in order that they do their work as the electricity is to the lights.

Now suppose that we go to the tenth floor of our building and pull the switch. What happens? The lights go out. They are dead. Now considering the vertebra as the switches, let us suppose that one of these little bones slips a little out of place and presses on one of the spinal nerves. What happens? We are again interfering with the transmission of life force from our brain to our organ or cell and we have lack of proper function, or sickness. We readjust this misplaced vertebra, reestablish our full supply of nerve force and the organ functions again.

God made you a perfect machine. What man dares say 'God you are a pretty good mechanic, but in my wisdom know better. There is no use for the appendix the tonsils, etc.' God put those organs there my friends. Do you believe that He did not know what He was doing when He did so. Do you want to ride home tonight on a mule or would you rather use your car? Have you no use for any of the modern inventions such as the telephone, the wireless, or the auto or electric light? If so, my friends, then go on taking your medicine, go on riding home on your mule as did your forefathers, while the other fellow who takes the trouble to look into a thing that is doing good, the fellow who gets out of the rut he has been in, gets well.

This science being misunderstood by many, because of not having availed themselves of receiving proper and reliable information from those who have perfected its merits, was clearly explained by Dr. Hinrichs. At the conclusion of his helpful and instructive address, he was heartily applauded by his audience.

COLUMBIA

A meeting of the district school teachers in town with the supervisor, E. S. Russell, was held at the Center school on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Russell made an address, impressing upon the children the desirability, of working for definite ideals in their lives.

A letter has been received from E. S. Russell, school supervisor, in which he refers to the remarks made by him at the Christmas entertainment given by the Center school. He states that he did not have sufficient time to amplify his statements at the meeting. The statement which he made that the country schools are one year behind the city schools he says has been made by the federal bureau of education, and may be true of the schools in Columbia. But it is all the more gratifying that the children in the Columbia schools have attained such high honors at the Windham High school when it is taken into consideration that they have studied under teachers overwhelmed with too many grades.

He states that the new inventions by which the progress of the children in their studies is measured are in use in some of the Columbia schools and have shown their value in additional interest taken by the scholars in attaining satisfactory standards of speed and value. He also states that the materials are inexpensive and that the schools should have them to overcome the handicap of having one teacher in charge of eight grades. Mr. Russell is in hopes that this explanation will remove any misunderstanding which his brief remarks may have caused.

Representative and Mrs. Edward P. Lyman were Hartford visitors last week, attending the inauguration of Charles A. Templeton as governor, the inaugural ball and the opening session of the legislature.

Former Representative and Mrs. Henry B. Hutchins were in Hartford on Wednesday and attended the inauguration ceremonies of Gov. Charles A. Templeton.

Miss Florence Jones, teacher of the school at Old Hop River, has been highly commended by Dr. Keating for the efficient manner in which she combatted and overcame the epidemic of impetigo affecting the pupils of her school.

The snow storm during the past week has made traveling for vehicles or pedestrians very difficult. The snowfall was about 14 inches in depth, with drifts in many places of two or three feet. While the main state roads were cleared of snow by Thursday morning, the day after the storm, the road to Columbia was not cleared until Thursday evening, as the snow plow became disabled. The roads running north and south from the Green, also westerly to Hebron, were not cleared until Saturday afternoon. Very few vehicles of any kind were seen on the roads.

The annual meeting of the Columbia Congregational church was held in the chapel on Friday and was fairly well attended. A. A. Latham, the clerk, stated that at present there are 123 members of the church and that during the year two have died, one removed from the town and one admitted to membership. The trustees reported the receipt of $517.84 interest on trust funds in their hands, which has been paid over to the church and Sunday school treasurers.

The treasurer reported: Collections and subscriptions, $722.07; interest on trust funds, including $144 on fund of $3,000 donated by Mrs. Yeomans for the pastor's salary, $662.96; missionary subscriptions, $185.05. Payments—Pastor's salary, $1,000; missionary subscriptions, $185.05; organist, sexton, fire insurance and sundry expenses, $396.72; balance on hand Jan. 1, 1922, $9.31; total $1,591.08.

The accrued interest on funds exceeds the amount of unpaid bills. There are 41 regular contributors towards the expenses of the church.

The Woman's Board of Missions reported receipts of $137.46 during the year, of which $50 was given as a memorial for the late Mrs. Owen, wife of the pastor.

The Ladies' Aid reported receipts of $95.06 and expenses of $27.25, leaving a balance for the year of $67.81, besides cash in bank and Liberty bonds of $525.91.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor received during the year from contributions and entertainments $104.65 and paid out $46.90, leaving a balance on hand of $57.75. They now have 38 members and hold a social each month.

The election of church officers resulted as follows: A. A. Latham, clerk; L. E. Winter, secretary; Edward P. Lyman treasurer; H. W. Porter, trustee for three years; C. E. Hunt, standing committee for three years.

Norfolk—At the well attended meeting of the Whatsoever Circle of the Congregational church held with Mrs. Leopold J. Curtiss, the following officers were re-elected: President, Miss Ella M. Snow; vice president, Miss Elain Holt; secretary, Miss Maud Cash; treasurer, Mrs. Frederick E. Spaulding.

THE FIRST BIG EVENT OF THE YEAR AND THE GREATEST OF THE SEASON

STARTS THURSDAY MORNING, JANUARY 11th, 1923

Twice a year the unusual and sensational happens here in the way of price slashing to "clean house" effectively. Twice a year the clean-up must be as complete as the reductions are drastic. Nothing is left to chance. Every department is thoroughly combed and original prices are reduced to a sensational point.

It is no different in its purpose this season, other than you have a better opportunity for favorite choice and lower prices because of the larger amount of goods that must be cleared due to a backward season, and the extent of the savings is clearly emphasized by the prices on this page.

MARKET WAS DULL.

New York, Jan. 9.—Trading in today's stock market continued relatively dull under the restraining influence of the unsettled foreign situation, news of the actual invasion of the Ruhr by French troops causing heavy speculative selling in the late dealings, which depressed most of the active issues below last night's closing levels.

Bullish operations in special stocks had a stimulating effect on the rest of the list in the early dealings and some excellent gains were recorded, particularly in the independent steels, oils, gas and motors, but these were materially reduced or wiped out in the final reaction. Large traders are still disposed to await further developments abroad before extending their commitments.

Baldwin was one of the early leaders, touching 135 1-4, dropping 4 points and rallying feebly to 133 at the close, where it was off nearly 2 points on the day. Studebaker, which got as high as 116 3-8, closed at 114 for a net loss of 1 1-2. U. S. Steel closed at 106 for a slight fractional loss.

Chile Copper made a new high on the movement at 29 1-2 on speculative expectation of an early announcement of its merger with the Anaconda Company. Cosden also touched a new top, strength of this issue being attributed to rumors that the preferred stock is about to be retired leaving the entire earnings and assets of the company for the common. Steel & Tube preferred continued its rise to higher ground on announcement that its stockholders soon would be called upon to ratify its sale to the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company, today's closing price of 102 representing a net gain of more than 2 points.

One of the most spectacular features of the day was the movement of Atlantic Refining, which registered an extreme gain of 141 points at 160 and a net gain of 10 at 155 at closing price. Special weakness in Allied Chemical was predicated on the belief that the recent disappointing turn in the company's earnings would interfere with the passage of dividends upon which the recent advance has been built. The stock closed low at a net loss of 2 3-8 points. Rumors of new financing which would include a long term loan of the Pierce Arrow Company were reflected in an advance of nearly a point in the common and 2 3-4 in the preferred.

Other active shares to register net gains of a point or more were American Can, American Locomotive, American Tobacco, Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock and certificates, California Petroleum, St. Paul Preferred, Chesapeake & Ohio, Eastman Kodak, Fisher Body, Pan American A and B, North American and Bethlehem Steel B.

Call money opened at 4 3-4 per cent but eased off to 4 1-2 at the close. Time money was unchanged at 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 per cent for all maturities. Out of town banks are the principal takers of commercial paper most of which is moving at 4 1-2 per cent.

Sterling exchange opened firm, eased off and then strengthened again at the close. Demand sterling was quoted around $4.63 1-2 or nearly a cent above last night's close. Most French francs were virtually unchanged at 6.73 1-4 cents. German marks dropped to 99-100ths of a cent a hundred, another new low record.

Oil shares were the feature of the industrial group, gaining 2 1-4 points. Mexican Petroleum 8s, American Sugar 6s and Consolidation Coal of Maryland 5s also were strong but Cerro De Pasco 8's, Atlantic Fruit 7 per cent certificates and Remington Arms 6's were reactionary.

Except for a gain of 2 cents on $100 in the Liberty 3 1-2's all the active U. S. government securities declined, the losses ranging from 2 to 14 cents.

Total sales (par value) were $12,862,000.

Official announcement was made by the Italian government today that it had no intention of floating a loan in this market. Public offering was made here today of $3,000,000 issue of Chicago joint stock land bank 10 to 30 year 4 1-2 per cent farm loan bonds. Subscriptions books on the $2,000,000 Ohio Power Company first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent bonds were closed today, all the bonds having been sold. The Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company is reported to be arranging for the permanent financing of approximately $8,000,000 in bank loans.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Wheat tended upward in price today with buyers outnumbering sellers and with some disposition shown to regard as a bullish factor the chance of war in Europe. The market closed unsettled, 3-8 to 3-4c net higher, May 1.13 3-8 to 1.18 1-2 and July 1.11 1-8 to 1.11 1-4. Corn gained 5-8c to 7-8 and oats 1-8@1-4 to 1-2c. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to 12c higher.

Although because of probable financial and industrial disturbance the reparations crisis has heretofore of late been construed in the main as a depressing influence in the wheat market, the traditional view was to some extent reasserted today—namely, that war-like developments are generally price-lifting in effect on grain. Unlooked-for absence of selling was quickly apparent after the market opened, and soon a buying splurge ensued that was partly due to strength of streling exchange but in various quarters was also ascribed more or less to war talk. Drought conditions southwest were a further incentive to buy wheat.

Estimates from a leading expert that the world's probable carry-over of wheat at the end of the season would total as much as 175,000,000 bushels led to something of a sag in values after mid-day, and so, too, did reports of the failure of a grain firm in Italy. Nevertheless, sellers found difficulty in repurchasing, and the market took a new upturn in the final dealings, with strong interests apparently operating on the bull side.

Predictions that primary receipts of corn this week would fall short of the corresponding figures last year gave independent strength to corn and oats.

Better export demand helped to offset in the provision market the bearish effect of lower quotations on hogs.

NUMBER FOUR

duced to a minimum and the men are fairly closely confined to barracks. Mayence no longer presents the appearance of an occupied city. Business goes on as usual.

Bundles of marks change hands for the smallest purchases; a railroad porter frowns on a thousand mark tip, then adjourns to the nearest saloon and pays 300 marks for a small beer. Everyone seems prosperous, if judged by the amount of money he carries, but there are many threadbare suits and rundown heels.

The French have ruled this for four years with firmness, although complaints of undue severity have been rare, and the four years of French occupation has trained the population to conceal their emotions, or worn away their patriotism.

COLOGNE DOUBTS ACTUAL ENTRY BEFORE JANUARY 15

London, Jan. 9.—(By the A. P.)—Reports from Germany and elsewhere show a tendency to get in advance the facts regarding France's proposed occupation of the Ruhr. Within the bounds of its determination to act, with or without the acquiescence of England, the French government continues to observe diplomatic etiquette and usage.

The French ambassador tonight communicated confidentially to the British government as a matter of courtesy the measures which France intends to take in the Ruhr district consequent upon Germany's default in timber and coal deliveries. These plans will naturally not be disclosed in London unless the French government should authorize disclosure.

The British government is proceeding quietly to discuss and be prepared for all eventualities. A meeting of the cabinet has been summoned for Thursday, indicating that the government takes the situation quite seriously. Lord Derby, secretary for war, is leaving Cannes tonight to attend the council, while the Earl of Cavan, chief of staff, on the occasion of a dinner speech this evening announced that the prime minister had requested him to postponed his honeymoon trip, he having just been married.

The French are moving large bodies of troops into positions in readiness for their advance, but the belief is held in Cologne, according to advices from that city, that actual entry of the Ruhr is not likely before January 15.

The date on which the German reparations payment of 500,000,000 gold marks is due.

There will be many difficult points arising with regard to the movement of troops through the British and Belgian zones, and these will require careful local adjustment. So far as they concern British interest they will be considered by the cabinet on Thursday in a confidential discussion of the French plans. There is likely to be a waiting attitude on the part of both Germany and England until it is seen how the French plans develop.

AMERICA NOT IN FAVOR OF FORCIBLE MEASURES

Washington, Jan. 9.—A formal announcement by the state department today set at rest any doubt as to the manner in which Secretary Hughes' proposal that financial authorities be called into the reparations controversy was laid before the French government. It said that the secretary had taken the matter up, "directly with Ambassador Jusserand," who was understood to have "transmitted to his government" and later "presented to the secretary the observations of M. Poincare in reply."

"The views of the two governments were in this way," the statement continued, adding that a copy of Mr. Hughes' subsequent New Haven speech had been delivered formally to the French embassy.

The department's statement was prompted by press reports from Paris stating the French foreign office had denied receipt of the American plan. The full text of the statement follows:

"The department of state said that it could not credit such a report and believed that there was some inaccuracy in its transmission. It was further said that the suggestion that financial experts should be called in in order to advise the governments with respect to what Germany could pay and what financial plan would be advisable, was taken up by Secretary Hughes directly with Ambassador Jusserand some time prior to the secretary's address at New Haven; that the matter was discussed with the French ambassador, who, it is understood, transmitted it to his government. The French ambassador presented to the secretary the observations of M. Poincare in reply. The views of the two governments were exchanged in this way. Subsequently, when Secretary Hughes made his speech at New Haven, he delivered a copy of it to the French embassy for their information.

"With regard to the taking of forcible measures for the purpose of obtaining reparations, it is not doubted that the attitude of the American government is well understood."

It was pointed out that French officials might have had in mind in making whatever statement they did a formal protest from the United States against occupation of the Ruhr, yet in the light of the conversations between Secretary Hughes and Ambassador Jusserand and also in view of the flat expressions on the point by Secretary Hughes in his New Haven address, it was added, the French authorities could not have the least misapprehension on the score of the American attitude as to the reparations course they proposed to follow.

A formal protest involves the question of the direct interest of the government protesting in the matters dealt with. There is no reason to believe that administration officials have ever considered the possibility of making any such representations to France as the question involved is one relating to a treaty to which the United States is not a party.

It was stated authoritatively that the Washington government has not as yet been advised in detail of French plans. If Ambassador Herrick at Paris obtained a confidential outline of those plans today, as despatches indicate, they had not reached the department tonight. Any suggestion that the ambassador's failure to see Premier Poincare involve a discourtesy to him or to the United States was waved aside by the state department.

Beyond the state department's prompt action to make it certain that the French authorities had been continuously fully advised both as to the views of the American government and its proposals for a reparations solution, there was no development in administration circles during the day with relation to the world crisis. It was evident that no further action had been decided upon at least in advance of the actual carrying out of the French programme.

In the senate, however, there was another debate on the reparations crisis and the proposition of American troops on the Rhine in which Senator Capper republican, Kansas, approved proposed steps for solving the problem, and Senators Johnson republican, California, and Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, emphasized their views on the questions at issue.

In view of what is in prospect there was some speculation of an unofficial nature today as to what part the forthcoming allied and American conference on costs of the Rhine armies of occupation might ultimately play in the reparations situation. That conference was suggested by the allies and accepted by Secretary Hughes after the American protest against allotment of reparations payments received from Germany to meet the cost of armies on the Rhine, other than the American force.

The date of this conference has not been set Assistant Secretary Elliot Wadsworth of the treasury department, who will represent the United States, is now in Washington. Since German repayment of the costs of the armies of occupation are, under the treaty, a first lien on German capacity to pay, however, the whole question of Germany's economic condition and the effect of the French programme for forcible collections in Germany might logically come before the costs conference where the United States is formally participating.

"We are indeed asking for the reimbursement of the costs of our army of occupation and with good reason," he said, "for we have maintained our army in Europe at the request of the allies and of Germany and under an agreement that its cost with like army costs should be a first charge upon the amounts paid by Germany. Others have been paid and we have not been paid."

The point around which speculation revolved was whether, in view of the failure of the allies to reach settlement of the reparations question, and French insistence upon independent action in Germany along lines which the United States disapproves, American action with respect to army costs might not undergo a change.

There is nothing available to show that officials here have even considered the point, but outside official circles, there has been some suggestion that if French operations were viewed as imperiling reimbursement payments from Germany, there might arise a basis for some formal action by the United States. In that event, it was said, there would be both ample direct interest and also official participation by the United States as a basis for action.

WHY CHILDREN ARE SICK IN WINTER

If your children are the least bit run down, thin in flesh and subject to colds, build them up with Gude's Pepto-Mangan. It will give them a new supply of rich, red blood, give them strength and vigor, and help them to resist disease.

Your druggist has Gude's in both liquid and tablet form.

TWENTY MORE WITNESSES TESTIFY IN ARSON CHARGE AGAINST GROTON MAN

Twenty more new witnesses were presented by the state in the criminal superior court here Tuesday before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury in the trial of Domenico Marinelli on the charge of having set fire to the building in Groton where he was running a grocery store on the night of December 1st.

The court had an all day session from 10 in the morning till after 5 in the afternoon and will continue the trial today (Wednesday).

Foreman James A. Stitt of the Pioneer Hose Co., Groton, who was on the stand when court adjourned Friday, concluded his testimony Tuesday morning. He was followed by Joseph Arsenault of the engine company, who was one of the first men to arrive at the fire and play a stream of chemical on the blaze. He corroborated previous testimony as to finding the burlap bag containing a candle under a wooden bushel basket.

On cross-examination by Attorney Arthur M. Brown of counsel for the accused man, it was brought out that Arsenault had owed Marinelli $115.50 for a bill of groceries and that Marinelli had served an attachment on him and had been given a mortgage by Arsenault.

Marinelli Paid His Bills.

A number of witnesses were introduced by the state, who had been doing business with Marinelli. They testified that Marinelli paid his bills promptly and had good credit with them. These witnesses included Dr. Charles G. Barnum of Groton, George Devinev, chief clerk and bookkeeper for the Cudahy Packing Co., at Bridgeport, Ivory W. Wentworth, Cornelius P. Donohue and Joseph R. Schwartz of New London, Harry Elion, Ludwig Mann, Daniel Poisky, Jacob Rosin, Gus Kelles, F. R. Wright, Alfred Rogers.

Attorney John H. Walker, who has been appointed temporary clerk of the superior court, was at the desk during the session, putting in his first day in swearing the witnesses and handling the details of a court session.

At the opening of the afternoon session Mrs. Louis Cohen was recalled to the stand by Major Hull. She testified that after she saw the fireman kicking at the basement window on the south side of the store, some men hollered that this would make a draft and her husband got a canvass from an automobile cab and put it against the window with a blanket where the window was broken. He put a two-inch plank against the canvass. The canvass is there yet, said Mrs. Cohen.

Civil Engineer George E. Pitcher, who was recalled to the stand, testified that he saw the canvass against the window a week ago Monday afternoon and it was still there when he took a picture of the winow last Friday. The pictures of the window with the canvass over it went in as an exhibit in the case. A piece of the wire screen over the window, which had been cut out by Mr. Pitcher and a piece of the canvass were put in as exhibits, making fifteen exhibits put in by the state so far.

Took the Inventory.

Lambert Williams of Groton, a painter, testified that on Dec. 6 and the next day he assisted Marinelli in taking an inventory of the stock. Marinelli counted the articles and Williams wrote them down with the prices given by Marinelli.

Mr. Williams identified the written sheets which he had made for the inventory. On the second day they were taking the inventory, Mr. Williams said an insurance adjuster came there and told him how he wanted the inventory set down. There was no total shown on the inventory.

The inventory lists were put in as an exhibit.

On cross-examination by Attorney A. M. Brown it was disclosed that Mr. Williams had first been subpoened as a witness by the defense and later by the state. There was a sharp verbal clash over this between Attorney Brown and State Attorney Hull, which Judge Brown put an end to by advising the lawyers to confine themselves to the trial of the case.

It developed in the cross-examination that Mr. Williams had taken two inventories, which were the same in items, but differently arranged. Both had been delivered to Marinelli.

Mr. Williams was excused from the stand while he took the inventory papers into an ante-room to total up the figures, while the trial proceeded with Mrs. Daisy Doyle of New London as a witness.

Insurance Book Excluded.

Mrs. Doyle is a sister-in-law of Miss Jennie Doyle, agent for the Phenix Fire Ins. Co., who at present is sick in bed and unable to leave the house.

Mrs. Doyle testified she has been familiar with the Phenix Ins. Co. book since her sister-in-law had been sick last Thursday and that the handwriting in it was Miss Doyle's.

Major Hull offered the book in evidence, but Judge Brown sustained Attorney Brown's objection that Mrs. Doyle had not qualified to identify the book. Major Hull may get the book in as an exhibit later.

Cornelius P. Donohue, a grocery salesman of New London, who had previously been on the stand, was recalled by Major Hull. The witness gave his valuations on several articles in the inventory as follows: Stove and pipe, inventory price, $22, his valuation $10; cigar counter, inventory price $35; his valuation $20; candy case, inventory price $25; his valuation $15; ice cabinet, inventory price $500; his valuation $75.

Groton Fire Chief Testifies.

Herbert P. White of Groton, chief of the fire department, testified he saw the fire in front of the ice box at the rear when he arrived at the Marinelli store, and later saw the fire in the middle of the store after he had been around the building with Foreman Stitt. Later he heard some one say, "Chief, come here, look what we've found." He went to the rear of the store where Arsenault showed him the burlap bag with the candle in it and the charred woolen bushel basket. He ordered them put on the truck and taken to the fire house. There was the scent of kerosene about the burlap bag.

Testimony On Basket and Bag.

Louis A. Mackenzie, driver of the fire truck on the night of the fire, testified that Arsenault brought the backet to the truck and that the basket remained at the rear of the firehouse for several days before it was put into the cellar. Mackenzie said he was the one who later turned the basket over to Chief White, who took it away in his automobile.

Officer Andrew Francis McCarthy of the Groton police testified the basket and bag were delivered to him by Chief White of the fire department in the Groton police headquarters on the night before the town court hearing. The officer said he locked them up in Captain Vincent's room. The witness identified the bag and basket as those he received from Fire Chief White.

Capt. George O. Vincent of the Groton police force also identified the bag and basket as the same which had been in his office and which he had turned over to the state police.

State Policeman's Investigation.

State Policeman Frederick W. Brandt, who lives in Hartford, and was assigned to the special duty of investigating this fire, testified he was assigned to this case with Officer Payne, who is now sick in the hospital in Hartford. After the town court hearing, they received the basket and bag which have been at state police headquarters ever since until brought here for this trial.

When he first saw the bag and candle, he noticed the candle had been lighted as it was black on the end.

The state policeman said they began their investigation on December 14, taking statements and visiting the scene of the fire. They found that the fire had been burning underneath the floor and not on top. No electric wires or anything to account for a fire were found under the floor.

The witness identified a piece of the floor board, charred on the under surface which he had cut out of the floor. The state attorney put this in as an exhibit.

Fragments of Another Charred Basket.

In the left rear corner of the store, the witness said, they found under some rubbish, near the ice box, remnants of a burlap bag and the charred bottom of a wooden bushel basket similar to previous exhibits in the case. The burlap remnants were under the remnants of the bottom of the basket.

The remnants were produced in court as exhibits and were identified by State Policeman Brandt. A charred piece of wood from the door of the building ice box also put in, making state's exhibit No. 20.

The state policeman also stated that they found a basket of excelsior under a box near the kerosene tank, paper cartons on top of the kerosene tank, and in another corner there were about a dozen rolls of toilet paper packed in behind canned goods on the shelves. Fruit in the store was blackened, canned goods had their labels burned off, many tops had opened up and the store ceiling was blistered.

With Officer Payne, the witness said he arrested Marinelli on Thames street, Groton and brought him to the state attorney's office. Marinelli was warned that he needn't answer questions unless he wanted to and that any statement he might make could be used against him. At this time, in answer to a question, Marinelli said he locked up the store himself between 7.15 and 7.30 and no one with him at that time, as he didn't employ anybody.

State Policeman Brandt was under cross-examination for ten minutes by Attorney Brown before court adjourned at 5.10 for the day.

Radiator Noon Meeting.

Under Y. M. C. A. auspices, the largest attendance of the season was registered at the noon meeting at the Richmond Radiator plant Tuesday. The regular speaker, Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, delivered an address that held the closest attention of his audience. He said in part: I want to continue along the line of the address a short time since; the topic of "our democracy." Unable to find contentment on the other side of the water, the men of Mayflower fame came to our shores and they laid the only sure foundations for a democracy. They were, first of all, men of religion; they believed something, and it made them men in the highest sense of the word. The first esential to a real democracy is Character; the second is intelligence and the third is efficiency, and upon these three essentials these men built strongly and well. I have said that character was the first essential; what is character? It is conformity to moral ideals that become habitual, and they with great sacrifice built their little meeting house that in it they might worship God and thereby develop character. Character is necessary, but it is not enough simply to be good; there must be intelligence as the second essential, and so they built close to the church, the school house. Then they, realizing that they must have an opportunity to develop efficiency in government, they erected the town hall. These were the foundations for our democracy. Our forefathers carried their religion into politics, and they also applied their intelligence to the matter of government; what a contrast to some of the politicians of our day. I am speaking for no party today; I believe that it is far better to be governed by our voting by the character and efficiency of the man rather than by the fact that he belongs to our particular party. These men made their politics, their religion. By nature, they craved for democracy; they could not be satisfied with a monarchy. In a monarchy, the king can dole out as little or as much as he pleases and it is usually little enough, while in a democracy, every man has his rights. We are living in the greatest democracy in the world, and America is destined to lead in all that makes for uplift and blessing.

SERVICE CERTIFICATES FOR CONNECTICUT TEACHERS

At a meeting of the state board of education held on January 3, 1923, provision was made for a state elementary service certificate. It is proposed to grant this certificate to those teachers who may present evidence of eights years of successful elementary school service in the public schools prior to July 1, 1923, provided that three of these years have been in Connecticut public schools, and who further present evidence to the board that during the years of service they have continued their professional reading and study. The rule provides that the certificate may be renewed for periods of one year, as has been the case with the old forms of state certificates, on the condition that evidence of continued professional study and reading, and of continued successful experience in teaching in the Connecticut elementary public schools have been presented as covering that period.

By the adoption of the above rule many teachers now teaching in the elementary schools who have not had high school education or normal school training but who have taught successfully eight years, of which three have been in Connecticut, will be granted certificates valid in all parts of the state unless local authorities desire to make further requirements While the number of professionally trained teachers, and while it is probably true that these teachers now hold local certificates, so that their present status is not in doubt, nevertheless teachers of this group will now, under the new rule, be free to teach in other towns if desirable openings occur.

A WINTER DAY.

Dawn blossomed in a land laid deep in snow,
The sun arose and all the world seemed bright,
The river in the valley far below
Gleamed in the morning light.

The trees were flashing as with diadems
Of rose and amber, and the vibrant air
Was cold and clear, earth blazed with myriad gems;
Beauty shone everywhere.

The little valley lay the morning long
Beneath the sunlight of God's smile, and soon
The hours sped by as swiftly as a song
And ushered in the noon.

The afternoon passed quickly, like a dream,
The shadows deepened and the twilight fell.
A wind blew down the ever winding stream
Whispering "All is well!"

The evening lights glowed from the vale below,
The evening lights gleamed from the heaven above,
Lamps of the sky, the stars shine steadfast, so
Shines out the Father's love.

Darkness descended, all the world was still,
Softly and slow night dropped her mantle down,
Enveloping the stream, the vale, the hill,
The little sleeping town.

But, think you, darkness, really, was there?
Nay, it was not, it but appeared to be;
Night only reigns for those who do not care,
For those who will not see.

Where God is, night is not, so have no fear,
The little valley and the hills above
Are always in the light, for He is near
And earth reflects His love.

—Elisabeth Scollard, in New York Herald.

DESERT SAGE.

My feet are treading the city streets,
But my heart is far astray,
Over the distant desert hills
Where the sage grows cool and gray.
Where the scene of the sage is keen and sweet
That flies on the wind away.

I hear the noise of the busy town
And the crowds that pass me by;
But my thoughts are away to the distant hills
As wild birds homeward fly.
I am one with the hills and fragrant sage,
The wind, and the autumn sky.

And ever the western winds do blow,
From the Land of Yesterday
Where the silvery plumes of desert sage
Fragrantly bend and sway;
(Oh, my feet are treading the city streets
But my heart is far away!)

—Edith Osborne, in the Lyric West.

FRENCH TROOPS OCCUPIED ESSEN AT 2 A.M.
GERMANY HAS RECALLED AMBASSADORS

Supported by Belgium and Italy, France Has Begun Her "Separate Action" to Enforce Reparations Payments From Germany — Monster Parades Are Being Planned Throughout Germany for Sunday—All Nations Regret the Withdrawal of American Troops From the Rhine—German Ambassadors Were Recalled From France and Belgium Upon Receipt of Identical Notes Outlining Occupation.

Essens, Jan. 11 (By the A. P.)—French troops will occupy Essen at 2 o'clock this (Thursday) morning.

By striking first at Essen, France is hitting at the heart of German industry. Essen, a city of 300,000 souls, long before the war had been known as the "Steel City" of the German empire, principally because it was the seat of the great Krupp works, which manufactured most everything from a needle to the heaviest kind of armor plate for use on battleships which the Germans hoped would make their nation preeminent on the seas.

With railways stretching like tentacles into all parts of the Ruhr region and its rich coal, zinc and copper deposits, all kinds of industries flourished prior to the World war, and since the war ended the city again had taken on somewhat of its old appearance as a great manufacturing center. The Krupp works, however, adopted as their principal output not huge guns for destruction, but instead locomotives, bridgework, agricultural machinery and other things which go to make for progress.

Before the war the Krupps employed about 100,000 workmen. During the peace period only about 54,000 persons had been given work there.

The American trades commissioner in Berlin last October reported that, among other finished goods of varied descriptions, the Krupp Essen plant was turning out a locomotive and a train of eight steel freight cars for each working day of the year.

AMBASSADORS RECALLED FROM FRANCE AND BELGIUM

Berlin, Jan. 10.—(By The A. P.)—Germany today recalled her ambassador at Paris, The ambassador, Dr. William Mayer, was instructed to leave the embassy in charge of its counselor.

The German minister to Belgium was also recalled, with similar instructions.

POINCARE TO TELL DEPUTIES THE METHODS OF OCCUPATION

Paris, Jan. 10.—(By the A. P.)—France will go into the Ruhr tomorrow morning; tanks, troops, airplanes and engineers are ready. Essen will bow to the French in the early morning hours, and Premier Poincare when he appears in parliament tomorrow will tell not what he plant to do, but what he has done.

France, with Belgium at her side and supported by Italy, will begin her long talked of "separate action." The decision of President Harding to withdraw the American troops from the Rhineland immediately came as a blow to the people of France and to the French press, although there is no word of official criticism—only regret. The French people, however, are standing behind their government at what is frequently described as the most critical moment since the end of the war. Germany was notified today in identical notes from France and Belgium that, effective tomorrow, control of the Ruhr coal distribution would be under a commission which will go in with a small army as a guard. Italian hesitation has been giving some concern but Italian engineers will go with the French and Belgians, and M. Poincare's note to Germany took pains to mention that fact.

General Simon, commanding the Duesseldorf area, is ready to move at a half hours notice, marching rations have been issued and German automobiles requisitioned. General Degoutte, in supreme command of the French, has already returned to Duesseldorf and will direct the advance. The time is still secret, but has been definitely settled upon.

The vigor of the newly-launched French policy is shown at home, as well as abroad. Leading communists, headed by Deputy Marcel Cachin, who went to Essen in an attempt to organize a general strike in the Ruhr, have been charged by the government with a plot against the safety of the state, and six of them already are in jail; four are being sought, and parliament has been asked to cancel M. Cachin's parliamentary immunity, so that he, as the leader, may be prosecuted.

M. Poincare anticipated not the slightest difficulty in getting parliament's approval tomorrow; it has repeatedly endorsed his plan for seizing "productive guarantees," although there was no chance for immediate action. The deputies and senators in their group talks today voiced the sentiment that it is every Frenchman's duty to support the government, and only the customary opposition from the extreme left is expected.

The premier, after his announcement, will ask that there be no discussion and that eight pending interpellations on the Ruhr plan be deferred. The chamber leaders have promised that this would be done. The chamber leaders have promised that this would be done. M. Poincare will make it a question of confidence in the government on his demand for delay in the discussion of the interpellations.

The calm firmness of the French note to Germany is indicative of the feeling of the government and people as revealed by the newspapers and individual expressions. The French feel they are going into the Ruhr to make the Germans do what they agreed to do, and although great disappointments, such as England's refusal to join with them, and America's order for the withdrawal of troops, reaching them the night before they play their last card, may amaze, or grieve, or anger them, they nevertheless are going into the Ruhr tomorrow.

FRANCE REGRETS THE RECALL OF AMERICAN TROOPS

Paris, Jan. 10.—(By the A. P.)—The army and people of France felt deep regret and depression tonight over the order for the American forces to leave the Rhine. The fear was openly expressed that President Harding's decision would be construed by Germany and other nations as a rebuke to France upon the eve of her independent action in the Ruhr.

Although Premier Poincare had not up to a late hour tonight, received official confirmation of the decision, he accepted the news despatches on the subject as authentic. M. Poincare was in the senate when the first despatches from Washington reached Paris. The messages were hurried to him and he immediately conveyed the information to a group of senators who discussed the matter among themselves.

The senators expressed considerable surprise at the news, professing refusal at first to believe that the United States would take such a step at this time in view of its possible effect on the opinion in Germany and other countries.

It is pointed out that Germany will be only too eager to seize upon President Harding's decision as justification of her contention that the French action is illegal and in direct violation of the treaty of Versailles.

There was also some speculation here tonight as to the possible reaction the decision might have on tomorrow's meeting of the British cabinet, which is expected to consider the position of the British troops on the Rhine.

The French are further depressed by th efact, that the order is for the immediate departure of the American troops. As they would have wished it might be delayed for a few weeks so there would be no apparent connection between it and the French occupation of the Ruhr.

There is no intention, however, on the part of the French government to ask Washington to delay the withdrawal, since it is believed President Harding and the senate have firmly made up their minds in the matter.

It is regarded as quite possible that Premier Poincare in his addresses before the chamber and senate tomorrow may refer to the decision, since it brings to an end the last tangible evidence in Europe of America's co-operation with France in the war.

The French war department is expected to confer immediately with the American commander, Major-General Henry T. Allen, on plans for taking over the sector of the Rhineland now occupied by the Americans.

TEXT OF THE FRENCH NOTE TO THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT

Paris, Jan. 10.—(By the A. P.)—The full text of the French note to the German government follows:

"Because of the defaults registered by the reparations commission and committed by Germany in execution of the programs of the reparations commission concerning the deliveries of wood and coal to France, and in conformity with the stipulations in paragraphs 17 and 18 of annex two of party eight of the treaty of Versailles, the French government has decided to send into the Ruhr a mission of control, composed of engineers and empowered with the necessary authority to watch over the action of the Kohlen syndicate and to assure, by means of orders given by its president either to this syndicate or to the German transportation service, the strict application of the programs fixed by the reparations commission and to take all measures necessary for the payment of reparations.

"The Italian government also has decided to have Italian engineers participate.

"This mission will have powers defined by the two attached documents, which the German governmnet is asked to bring to the attention of the authorities concerned, at the same time giving them the necessary instructions to conform exactly with the provisions they contain.

No Military Operation

"The French government declares it has no thought of proceeding at this moment with an operation of a military nature nor occupation of a political character. It simply sends into the Ruhr a mission of engineers and functionaries whose object in clearly defined. Its duty is to assure the respect by Germany of the obligations contained in the treaty of Versailles.

"It sends into the Ruhr only those troops necessary to safeguard the mission and guarantee the execution of its mandate. No disarrangement and no change therefore will be caused in the normal life of the population, which continue at work in order and calm. The German government has the greatest interest to facilitate the work of the mission and the installation of troops intended to protect it.

Coercive Measures If Necessary

"The French government counts upon the good will of the German government and upon that of all authorities, whoever they may be. In case, by any sort of maeuver, the operations of the missions of functionaries and the troops accompanying them should be interfered with or compromised, or the local authorities, by their action or by their failure to act, should cause disturbance in the material and economic life of the region, any coercive measures or penalties judged necessary will be taken immediately.

"Because of the defaults of Germany registered by the reparations commission in the deliveries of wood and coal according to the programs established by said commission, and with a view to assuring in the future strict execution of the clauses of the treaty of Versailles relative to reparations, a mission of control of the mines and factories of the occupied territories, composed of engineers and functionaries, is created beginning with this day.

"The engineers and functionaries of this mission will have full powers to compel the administrative organs, chambers of commerce and employer, workmens', industrial and commercial bodies to communicate to them all statistical or other information they think is useful to demand.

"They will have the right to circulate throughout the occupied territories, to enter offices, mines, factories, railroad stations etc., and to consult there all bookkeeping and statistical documents.

"The personnel of the German administration, and the representatives of industrial and commercial bodies must, under pain of severe punishment, put themselves at their entire disposition for the accomplishment of their work and later conform with the orders they receive from the chief of the mission.

GERMANS ARE CREATING DIFFICULTIES FOR FRENCH

Duesseldorf, Jan. 10 (By the A. P.)—The decision to transfer the headquarters of the coal syndicate to Hamburg was reached at a meeting last night at which Hugo Stinnes, August Thyssen and Herr Kirdorf were present. In consequence of this, coal will be sold directly by the mines. Apparently the object of the measure was to create difficulties for the French by obliging them to negotiate separately with each mine. This, however, had been foreseen and provided for.

It was announced that the German high officials and chief engineers will leave their posts immediately occupation is effected. This also had been anticipated and arranged for.

There appears to be little likelihood of any trouble; direct contact between the troops and the population will be avoided as much as possible. The socialist newspapers oppose any idea of a strike and insinuate that the French advance was provoked by the attitude of the big manufacturers.

The work of organizing central headquarters is proceeding rapidly. Offices are being installed in the vast building where usually the German industrial magnates of the region meet. Hurriedly erected wooden partitions alone separate the French from the German offices.

According to the present understanding, the first advance will be limited in character; it is not likely that the whole basin will be occupied at the beginning. The extent of the operation, however, will be dependent largely on the attitude of the German government. A break in diplomatic relations by Germany, for instance, might entail certain modifications of the original plans.

The state of mind of the residents of Duesseldorf recalls that during the first days of the occupation of the region last year. The streets are filled with people who discuss with animation the latest news and watch with greatest interest the French troops and armored motors.

The principal topic, however, is the latest drop in the mark. The dollar today reached 11 000, which is considered here the beginning of the end.

The Essen newspapers emphasize the futility of any resistance, and exhort the people to remain calm and bear passively all measures applied when the French troops arrive.

MEETING OF PROTEST WAS HELD IN ESSEN

TROOPS RECALLED BECAUSE OF AMERICAN DISAPPROVAL

Washington, Jan. 10.—American troops were ordered home from the Rhine today with every indication that the administration's purpose was to emphasize its disapproval of the French reparations program. They are expected to be back in the United States by Feb. 5.

Official explanation of the withdrawal order, issued immediately after a morning conference between President Harding and Secretaries Hughes and Weeks, was confined to the statement that the president deemed it expedient at this time. There were intimations which appeared authoritative, however, that France had been informed that perseverance in her plans for forcible measures in Germany would result in American withdrawal from the Rhine, but no inkling was given as to when or how diplomatic exchanges of such a nature had been transmitted.

Ambassadors of the allied countries here, and also the French and American ambassadors in Europe, were promptly informed by the state department of the order. A cable message from the war department to Major General Allen, commanding the American army of occupation, gave him preliminary instructions to prepare for withdrawal, while orders also were issued for the transport St. Mihiel to sail from New York Friday. She will pick up about 40 officers and more than 1,000 men, comprising the American force on the Rhine, either at Hamburg or Bremen, as General Allen elects.

Actual movement of the troops from Coblenz, it was said, would begin just in time for them to embark directly from trains.

In the face of official reticence, it was difficult to say just when the decision to withdraw was reached. Since mail instructions to General Allen were sent last night, however, and interested embassies appeared to have received some hint in advance of what was to come, it was evident that administration officials had at least prepared for the movement within the last day or two and that today's announcement represented probably only the determination to issue the order immediately.

There was no other phase of the reparations crisis upon which state department officials had anything to say today.

Veterans' Bureau Mess of Intrigue

Col. Charles B. Forbes Has Made Many Changes at the New England Headquarters.

Boston, Jan. 10.—Colonel Charles B. Forbes, national director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, returned to Washington tonight after cleaning up what he had characterized as the "mess of intrigue and petty politics" at the New England headquarters. The effect of his inquiry of the past week into charges of intoxication, disloyalty and graft was to declare no one guilty, but to leave the following changes:

Rr. Arthur R. Brides, widely known as a football player and coach at Yale, declared not guilty of multiple charges. Then voluntarily resigned as New England director to enter private practice; his resignation accepted, and Colonel John F. J. Herbert of Worcester, appointed temporarily in his place.

Captain William J. Blake, assistant director, charged by Dr. Brides with lack of co-operation and inefficiency, relieved from duty here and ordered to report to Washington for reassignment; Malcolm Stoddard, chief of the sub-division at Portland, Maine, ordered here in his stead.

Dr. David S. Flanagan, chief medical officer, under charges of inefficiency and lack of co-operation, which were not heard, reliever from further duty here and ordered to report to headquarters at Washington; Dr. Winthrop Adams, assistant, advanced to succeed him.

Haywood C. R. Mott, an employe discharged by Dr. Brides as disloyal, who preferred the charges against the director, ordered reinstated.

Fred T. A. McLeod, chief of rehabilitation at the bureau relieved and ordered to Washington for reassignment; S. C. Leary named to succeed him temporarily.

Guy Doherty, chief of co-ordination, relieved and ordered to report to Washington for reassignment.

L. H. Shaughnessy, a clerk, declared surplus and dropped from the bureau.

The bureau under temporary organization put placed on probation for a month, with word that it must pass inspection by Colonel Forbes at the end of that time.

Colonel Forbes said he had found intrigue and false ambitions throughout the local office, affecting alike employes and chiefs of departments. Unless he found conditions remedied, his broom would sweep clean on his return, he said. The offices themselves he directed, should be removed from the business district where they are maintained at a rental of $156,000 a year to the army base where they could be kept for $9,000.

ARRESTS IN BRIDGEPORT IN AUTO THEFT SCANDAL

Bridgeport, Jan. 10.—A million dollar international automobile theft scandal, under untiring investigation for over a year, came to a head tonight in the arrest of four men who, held in default of $15,000 bonds each, are alleged by state police to be members of a gang of thieves that has result in Connecticut [illegible] a thousand stolen automo-

[illegible] held on technical charges of breach of the peace to be changed on arraignment tomorrow morning before U. S. Commissioner Hugh J. Lavery are: Harold Goldy, Nathan Goldy, Sam Lefsitz and Frank Cleary.

Early tonight the American Body Works was raided and state police say, the Goldy brothers and Lefsitz were found in the act of changing numbers on motors of cars they describe as stolen. Fourteen complete sets of different size discs used to restamp mutilated motors and five automobiles, three of which were still wet with numeral defacing acids, were seized.

State police say over 1,200 persons in Connecticut have in their possession automobiles that were stolen by the gang of which, they claim, the four accused were members. The present holders of the stolen cars face the possibility of having them taken from them.

It has been alleged that automobiles stolen from New York streets were brought to Bridgeport and mutilated to thwart tracing, then resold throughout the state. Engine numbers on automobiles shipped to foreign countries, it is said, were duplicated on the stolen cars.

LAUSANNE AGREEMENT WILL WORK HARDSHIP ON GREEKS

Greek Christians Who Dwell in Turkey Must Return to Greece and Live Their Lives There—In Return the Turks Who Are Living in Greece Must Henceforth Reside in Turkey—Conference Justifies Decision by Declaring Such Action is Necessary for Maintenance of Peace in the Near East—One Million Human Lives Are Vitally Affected.

Lausanne, Jan. 10.—(By the A. P.)—One million human lives are vitally affected by the decision reached by the Near Eastern conference today. One million Moslems and Christians who live either in Greece or Turkey must give up their farms in the country and their homes and business places in the villages, towns and cities and move on to find farms, homes and occupations elsewhere.

In the interest of future peace between Turkey and Greece, the Mohammedans who dwell in the Hellenic peninsula must henceforth reside in Turkey, and Greek Christians who dwell in Turkey must emigrate to Greece and live their lives there.

The statesmen have no illusions about the hardships this compulsory exchange of populations will entail on the individuals affected. They justify their action by pointing out the beneficent influence it will have on the maintenance of peace in the Near East, which the conference was summoned to proclaim.

That peace in some form will be signed at Lausanne seems more probable in consequence of today's developments. It is reported that the Mosul oil dispute will be settled outside the conference, and earnest efforts are being made to find some satisfactory formula concerning judicial guarantees for foreign residents in Turkey which will be acceptable to the Turks.

Today's events were of a nature to propitiate the Greeks, for the Turks announced that the Greek patriarch who is primate of the Orthodox church, can remain in Constantinople, provided he abandon all political and administrative activities and devote himself exclusively to spiritual matters.

Also, as an exception to the general arrangements for the compulsory exchange of populations, the Greek colony will be allowed to remain there. The compulsory exchange will be carried out as humanely and justly under the direction of a special commission, which will appraise the values of all individual properties and endeavor to effect a reasonable exchange of families and communities.

About 400,000 Mohammedans, who settled in Grecian Macedonia and the Plains of Thessaly, famed as the scene of wars of antiquity, will be asked to emigrate to Turkey. So many Greeks have already fled from Asiatic Turkey that it is difficult to estimate the number at present there, but it is believed about 600,000 will be affected.

The stupendous nature of the problem of readjustment of populations is realized by everybody, and it will be especially difficult for Greece, whose national life has been disorganized by the presence of almost a million Greek and Armenian refugees.

The allies have asked the Turks to exempt all religious institutions from taxation, and the Ottoman delegates have taken this question under advisement.

RELIEF WORK FOR GREEK REFUGEES MUST CONTINUE

New York, Jan. 10—America's expenditure of millions in charity for the relief of Greek refugees must continue indefinitely unless the Lausanne conference changes its program, Allen T. Burns, director of the national information bureau, declared in a statement issued here today.

Mr. Burns, who recently returned from a tour of Greece, where he studied relief work needs for the American Red Cross, said he had made a similar statement to Secretary Hughes yesterday.

"Secretary Hughes told me that American had done all that it could," Mr. Burns said. "He gave no reply to my question as to whether we could be more than 'observers' at the Lausanne conference."

"America's relation to the question of minorities at the Lausanne conference," Mr. Burns said he told Secretary Hughes, "is summed up in the phrase: 'officials hold aloof, philanthropists foot the bills.'"

He reported that there are in Greece "500,000 homeless, half-naked, underfed women, children and old men from Asia Minor." Their men breadwinners, he said, have been held in Anatolia as Turk hostages. Mr. Burns contended that the reuniting of these families is the most imperative feature of the minorities at Lausanne.

WITHDRAWAL OF U. S. TROOPS PUZZLES LAUSANNE

Lausanne, Jan. 10 (By the A. P.)—The allied diplomats in Lausanne are deeply interested in the announcement of the withdrawal of the American troops from the Rhine, but refrain from comment. The impression is that the American government sooner or later will make some move in Europe to relieve the economic situation growing out of the unsolved problem of reparations.

The withdrawal of the American forces is regarded as an act of prudence, bending the outcome of the French measures in Germany. Developments here indicate no change in the French attitude towards England in the common task of obtaining peace in the Orient. The divergence between the British and French views as to the best means of handling the reparations problem seemingly will not be permitted to influence France's attitude in other matters of common interest for the welfare of Europe and the restoration of peace in the Balkans and Turkey.

ST. MIHIEL SAILS FRIDAY TO BRING BACK U. S. TROOPS

New York, Jan. 10.—The transport St. Mihiel will sail for Europe at noon Friday to bring back the American troops on the Rhine whose recall was ordered today by President Harding, it was announced late this afternoon.

Colonel Louis H. Bash, at the army transport base in Brooklyn, said the vessel had been ordered to sail for a German port but that the port had not yet been designated.

Work of provisioning the St. Mihiel, which has been at a Brooklyn dock since Monday, immediately was begun.

The St. Mihiel, it was said, probably is destined for Hamburg, since that port was established as a base for the American army of occupation last year. Captain Oliver, her commander, said it would take 13 or 14 days to make the voyage.

The St. Mihiel, built at Hog Island and commissioned three years ago, is one of the best of the army transports. She is equipped to carry about 1,109 officers and men comfortably.

Army transport service officers said the vessel could be fully provisioned and coaled in 24 hours.

GENERAL OF IRISH REBELS TO BE COURTMARTIALLED

Dublin, Jan. 10 (By the A. P.)—Ernest O'Malle, or O'Malley, a commandant general in the irregular forces, who was wounded and captured in a raid on Nov. 4, is to be courtmartialled tomorrow, it was learned today.

O'Malle was taken by a raiding party searching for Eamon De Valera. It was he who officially surrendered the Four Courts on behalf of the republican garrison after the memorable siege which ended on June 30 last. He later escaped from Mountjoy prison, resuming his activities with the irregulars.

STATE TAXES CAPABLE OF PRODUCING $32,977,100

Hartford, Jan. 10.—Existing taxes are capable of producing $32,977,100 in state revenue during the coming two fiscal years, according to estimates gprpared today for the legislature. If appropriations made in the present session exceed that figure, it was said, new taxes will have to be created, as present indications are that there will not be a considerable surplus in the civil list funds to draw from.

A drop of $1,151,000 is expected in the corporation tax alone during the current fiscal year, and the inheritance tax, it is figured, will show a decrease of at least a half million dollars.

It was revealed that 2,768 corporations in Connecticut showed a total net loss in the last fiscal year of $52,531,035.77 while 2,343 corporations in the state showed a net gain of $35,009,546.27. These facts will have an important bearing on the state's revenue for the first of the new fiscal term for which legislative appropriations are to be made this year.

SHORTAGE OF ACCOUNTS IN SOUTH KENT POST OFFICE

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 10.—A shortage of $1,400 in the accounts of the South Kemp post office was reported tonight by Post Office Inspector Ralph S. Edmunds in charge of the inspection district composed of Fairfield and Litchfield. At the same time Inspector Edmunds asked the Bridgeport police to aid him in finding Adrian Nortier, postmaster of South Kemp, who has not been seen since December 31 last.

The South Kemp post office is located in the railroad station at Woodrow and was in charge of Nortier who was also the station and express agent. Nortier was last seen leaving his home in an automobile though bound for a walk. His wife told Inspector Edmunds that she knew nothing of her husband's whereabouts. COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS ARE MADE IN STATE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

Hartford, Conn., January 11—Members attending the General Assembly from New London and Windham Counties with the exception of those from the vicinity of New London were delayed in reaching the capital this morning on account of the poor train service. In fact there were not much more than half of the membership present when Speaker Nickerson called the house to order at 11:15. The early morning Hartford-New London automobile bus now brings some of the members to the very steps of the capitol.

This morning Senator Rogers and Representative Cronin of New London, Edgecomb of Groton, Manning of Mystic and Rogers of Salem were passengers and Representative Payne expects to join the group in future trips. The bus left New London at 7:30 a. m. and the legislators were let out at the doors of the capitol at 10 o'clock.

When the Norwich-Colchester branch, now under construction is completed it will afford the same opportunity to the members from this section.

The lobbies were all agog this morning over the probable committee appointments as president pro-tem, Trumbull of the senate and Speaker Nickerson of the house had declined to give any intimation in advance of their selections for the different committees.

The house was called to order promptly at 11:15 and prayer was offered by Chaplain Campbell of the senate.

Representative Darbie of Killingly presented a petition for an amendment of the charter of Danielson. He also introduced resolutions appointing William Fenner Woodard, judge of the town court of Killingly and Charles F. Francis, associate judge.

A bill was introduced by Majority Leader John Buckley asking for repeal of a section of chapter 397 of the public acts of 1921, which opened the door for employes of state departments getting their salaries raised by the state board of finance. Mr. Buckley argued that all salary increases should be controlled by the legislature and come before the appropriations committee. The bill was tabled for printing.

Mr. Buckley also introduced a bill providing that no member of the state board of finance shall be a director or trustee of a state institution other than a state institution within his own town. Mr. Buckley said he should not ask for passage of the bill today but wanted it tabled and printed in the calendar so that the house members could become familiar with it. Mr. Buckley presented an argument for the bill and gave a history of a similar bill in the 1921 session, which finally found its way into the waste basket. The bill was tabled for printing. It was claimed two years ago that such a bill was aimed at E. Kent Hubbard of the board of finance, who is a member of the board of trustees of Connecticut Agricultural college as well as of the hospital for the insane in his home town of Middletown.

Committee Appointments

The committee appointments as made by the speaker were read by the clerk. It was plainly seen that there were many disappointed ones.

On the whole, the eastern counties have fared very well. With Senator Rogers of New London and Representative Keith as chairmen of the appropriations committee this section of the state will have friends at court. Allyn of Waterford is also on this committee.

Immediately after the opening of the day's session President Pro Tem Trumbull read his list of senate appointments to committees of the general assembly.

The senate concurred with the house in passing under suspension of rules a resolution relating to the delivery of bills to the state librarian.

Senator Wilder, of Bridgeport, introduced a bill to increase the salaries of the messengers of the superior court in Hartford and Fairfield counties from $1,600 to $2,000. It was referred to the committee on the judiciary.

The senate adjourned to next Tuesday at 11:15 a. m.

NOTES

Highway Commissioner Charles J. Bennett, who will retire from the service of the state July 1, 1923, having declined a reappointment will become general manager for the Edward Balf Company of Hartford soon after concluding his term as head of the state highway department.

The prevalent opinion about the capital is that if a three-man commission is appointed, James H. MacDonald will be one of the commission.

Senator MacDonald has a national reputation as a road builder and is often spoken of as the "father of good roads" in Connecticut.

Concerning the appointment of Senator Rogers of New London and Representative Keith of Putnam as the two chairmen of the appropriations committee, Senator Rogers remarked that he considered it a compliment to Eastern Connecticut that after the lean years of the past these appointments should come this year.

Senator MacDonald of New Haven was appointed chairman of the roads, rivers and bridges committee.

This is a popular appointment as the senator with his many years experience as commissioner and as a member of this committee in 1921, has a thorough knowledge of road conditions in the state.

The house adjourned till Tuesday next at 11:15 when the seats will be drawn and committees will organize.

117 WOMEN AND SIX MEN SHOPLIFTERS ON TRIAL

New York, Jan. 10 (By the A. P.)—Father Knickerbocker today wrote the sequel to his familiar tale of Christmastide.

It was not the conventional Yuletide story of holly, mistletoe and good will to all. It dealt with presents heaped round Christmas trees, but the usual cries of delight, the joyous clapping of hands, were lacking. There were tears where there had been smiles.

Father Knickerbocker thumbed the pages of the last few weeks. He read of the throngs of women, young and old, bejeweled and threadbare, who had eddied around the counters in busy department stores.

Then he took up his pen again. "Shoplifters' day in the court of special session" was one heading he wrote.

Exactly 117 women and six men stood in line. They were the "shoppers," but they thought not of Christmas bells but of the clang of prison gates.

The line which passed before Justice Freschi was like no other line of lawbreakers. There were women from miserable slums and women from homes of wealth; girls of 17 and faltering women of 60—Gotham and jetsam from the city's surging millions.

Nervous shock and amnesia was the explanation the lawyer offered for the next case, that of a woman of fifty. Some months ago her youngest child died; the shock temporarily deprived the mother of her memory. She refused to part with the child's body, crooning over it until it was taken away.

The lawyer paused in his recital as the woman, her grief recalled, tottered and nearly fell. Then the lawyer continued, stating that his client had been struck by an automobile on the day of the theft and that amnesia had returned.

Marie and Martha Washington, colored, were the next culprits. Contrition was their weapon and they escaped with fines.

A foreign woman, with blank peasant's face, caused a flurry of amusement by forgetting the name she had given the detective who arrested her.

The unrepentant face of an Italian girl irritated the judge and he was shocked to learn that she was less than 16 years old.

And so on. Names were called and almost inaudible voices answered guilty or not guilty, until 70 who had admitted their guilt had been herded into one corner.

And the motives which had caused them to drop into their handbags now a trifling object, now a bauble of real value? Well, varied were the excuses offered—extreme poverty and the need for money with which to purchase food; the desire that baby should not lose faith in Santa; an uncontrollable impulse.

The last was the most often voiced. Woman after woman said she did not know what had caused her to err, until finally Judge Freschi exclaimed:

"This is terrible. If women in cases like this used the principles of Coue, or did something else to master themselves they would not bring disgrace upon themselves and their families."

The first case called with that of a little Greek woman, mother of a year old child, and wife of a sailor now running himself in some far corner of the Mediterranean.

She listened attentively to the charge. Yes, she had taken the dress, but she was unable to say why. Her lawyer told of her waiting baby and she was dismissed with a fine.

An elderly woman, dressed in black silk, tears streaming down her cheks, next was led to the bar by a lawyer.

"Your Honor," said the lawyer," the defendant is my mother. She is accused of having stolen two pairs of cotton stockings. She did not know what she was doing. My father and my sister died recently. My mother was nearly crazed by grief."

A middle-aged negress was next in line.

"I'se sorry, sur. Ah'll never do it agin. Ah never did nuthin bad befo'. Please lemme go."

A pretty young woman, well dressed in expensive furs, obviously of good family told the judge she was an art student. She could not explain why an expensive bit of lace was found in her coat. She was dismissed with a $50 fine.

Proceedings were interrupted when a woman, smothering a scream, became hysterical. Led to a chair, she sat sobbing and mumbling:

"Oh, I don't know why I did it. I did not know what I was doing. Don't let my children know."

She was carried to the matron's room.

A woman of sixty, dressed in the elegance of the mid-Victorian period, was followed by a childish person, whose lawyer announced that today was her seventeenth birthday.

PREHISTORIC COUSIN OF THE WHITE RHINOCEROS

New York, Jan. 10.—A monster, ossold, eleven to twelve feet high, and twenty-three or twenty-four feet long, will shortly join the snobbish group of specimnes that look down—with the cold stares significant of the superiority complex—upon troops of museum visitors, five or six feet high, it was announced today.

Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History, disclosed today that reconstruction of the fossil remains of the prehistoric cousin of the white rhinoceros has progressed far enough to show the animal was the "largest land mammal ever found, with the exception of some elephants now extinct." And they call him 'baluchitherium."

Baluchitherium's return engagement is to be played after a lay-off of 2,000,000 years. It is estimated that the giant creature lived that long ago. His remains were found "at a place 450 miles southeast of the ruins of Karakorum, the center of the great mongol empire of Ghengis' Khan." That is in Mongolia, now a region of deserts and barren plains.

Baluchitherium, however, was herbivorous, scientists believe, indicating that the land was once one of lush vegetation, a feeding ground for the roming baluchitherium and his playmates.

Visitors' glances, however, according to Professor Osborn's description of the monster as he was, will not perturb baluchitherium. He was thick skinned. So much so that even the sabre-toothed tiger, who lived in the same period, was unable to pierce the tough, deep coat that served as the giant's chief protection.

Baluchitherium had either one horn or no horn at all. Professor Osborn believes. Compared to his cousin, the white rhinoceros, he was as Jess Willard to Tom Thumb. He weighed, perhaps, ten times as much, and the white rhinoceros weighs about two tons.

The discovery of the fossil remains in Mongolia by an expedition sent out by the American museum and the Magazine Asia, was somewhat startling, for scientists long believed the district to be barren of fossils. The find, Professor Osborn said, lends strength to the belief that there was once a great "land bridge" connecting Asia and North America.

Baluchitherium's skull, as found, was in 663 pieces, but these are already assembled into a mass four feet, four inches long. His jaws are lined with teeth as large as apples. In crushing power they equalled the machines of steel used in the excavating work that frequently can be seen through the windows of baluchitherium's new home, The American Museum of Natural History, New York city.

WOULD GIVE THIEVES PANTS TO MATCH COAT

New York, Jan. 10.—When thieves robbed the Rockwell Clothing company store in Broadway for the fifth time a few weeks ago, the manager posted a notice in the window advising them that if they would come back they could have the pants to match a coat they had carried off.

The robbers returned today and smashed a $500 plate glass window. Failing to find the pants, they carried off $200 worth of clothing that was on display.

The management plans no more jokes.

His satanic majesty doesn't expect to be invited into the parlor the first time he calls.

PROBING REIGN OF TERROR IN MOREHOUSE PARISH

Bastrop, La., Jan. 10.—(By The A. P.)—State attorneys today began sounding the depths in the open court inquiry to fix responsibility for the kidnapping and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richard, hooded band victims and to establish the basis for charges that a "supplementary government" had set itself up in Morehouse parish with a resultant reign of terror.

At the end of the day the names of 13 men had been brought into the record through the testimony of six witnesses as having been recognised by the sound of their voices and by other means as having participated in kidnapping expeditions, raids and marching parties attributed to the Ku Klux Klan.

It was a day of several climaxes, first, with the declaration of Addie May Hamilton, 17 year old girl, that she was driven from Morehouse by a delegation of "Klan" members; again with the appearance on the witness stand of Mrs. Thomas Richard, widow of one of the slain men, and the next with the testimony of Harry Neelis, youthful automobile salesman and garage proprietor, star witness of the day, whose testimony brought before the inquiry the names of six men—Jeff Burnett, now being held on a charge of murder, J. K. Skipwith, recognized klan leader in Moresouse parish, Jim Tisdale of Monroe, A. B. Campbell of Jones, Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of the village of Mer Rouge and a "man named Rogers," as members of a hood "kidnapping" party which operated on the highways near Bastrop August 18 last, when Richard was taken into the woods for questioning.

Neelis also brought forward the name of Fred Carpenter, sheriff of Morehouse parish.

"Carpenter was within 100 feet of the garage in Bastrop from which Richard was kidnaped at the time he was taken prisoner August 18," Neelis said.

On another occasion during the examination Neelis declared, Carpenter, overhearing a conversation in which he was engaged with another man with reference to klan activity, called him aside and "advised him to quit talking about our affairs."

Mrs. Richards' testimony was devoted almost entirely to the kidnapping of Richards on August 18, when she said, Richard told her of being taken into the woods by a black hooded band and questioned as to an attempt that had been made some time previous to assassinate Dr. McKoin.

"My husband told be he had been exonerated," Mrs. Richard said, "and laughed about being kidnapped."

Mrs. Richard said she first learned that her husband had been kidnapped on that occasion when their 3-year-old child who was with Richard at the time, met her with an exclamation that "the Ku Klux has daddy."

Richard returned to his home in Mer Rouge later in the day after he had been released, Mrs. Richard said.

She then told of the second kidnapping a week later when he failed to return. Neelis was on his way to Mer Rouge when he said he was stopped by a party of black hooded men near Bastrop, questioned and allowed to proceed but was stopped again a short distance further by two masked men who he named as Burnett and "Rogers."

"When I was stopped by the two men, it was decided that I be returned to the point where the masked men were" Neelis testified.

"When Burnett and Rogers held me up, I talked with them long enough to know what they were after. It was Richard. Burnett did not say but intimated that Richard was the man wanted. I told him then if he wanted him he need not resort to any of these measures.

"Burnett and Rogers then took black masks from their pockets and put them on. Fred Higginbotham, a Bastrop restaurant man, next came up. He was unmasked. He consulted with Burnett and Rogers and then I was told I could go."

Neelis described hiw he was picked up by another automobile and reached Bastrop ahead of the hooded band.

"The first thing I did was to get Richard and told him the Ku Klux Klan were after him and for us to go over to the sheriff's office where he might have protection," Neelis continued. "Richard had his little girl with him and he suggested that we wait until his wife came back.

"About that time the automobiles came up to the garage. I went to them and told them to leave Richard alone. They went into the garage and led Richard out and to an automobile.

"I was mad and warned them again to let Richard alone. About that time Rogers pointed a long shotgun at me and told me to step aside. They left with Richard."

"What were the conditions in Bastrop at that time? Wasn't the klan very active?" Neelis was asked.

"Yes, the klan was active and the court house was being guarded by citizens They said the people in Mer Rouge were coming over to attack and the people at Mer Rouge told me the people of Bastrop were coming over to attack them. They did not ask me to take part in the guarding of the court house."

"What else do you know about the klan—did you ever see Captain Skipwith in klan regalia?" George Seth Guin, an assistant attorney general, who examined Neelis, asked.

The witness then told of having followed a band of klansmen from Mer Rouge on a previous occasion. Watt Daniel and W. C. Andrews were with him at that time.

"They were dressed in white robes and dunce-like caps," said Neelis. "with hoods reaching to their shoulders. When they saw us following them they came up and held us up. They told us if we would change our conduct they would ask us to join. One advised me to quit running around with Daniel and Andrews because they were a pretty tough bunch. They searched us and took our pistols."

Neelis said he, Daniel and Andrews returned to Mer Rouge and compared notes as to who of the klansmen they recognised.

"We agreed on Captain Skipwith, Laurey Calhoun, Dr. McKoin, a fellow by the name of Harp, Gus Calhoun, Bob Dade, Pink Kirkpatrick and J. D. Higginbothem," Neelis said.

Laurey Calhoun recently was named a special deputy sheriff. Dade is mayor of Mer Rouge. The others are residents of either Mer Rouge or Bastrop.

"Did not you ask who was responsible for all this?" was asked. "And didn't you say Captain Skipwith was responsible?"

"Yes," Neelis answered, "and Fred agreed with me."

He added that Higginbothem told him he was hired to make the trip to go to the point where Burnett was.

"Didn't he say he also carried Skipwith out to the hooded men" was another question.

"He did not deny it," retorted the witness.

Addie May Hamilton, at times in tears and again in a spirit of levity, told of the visit of what she described as a "klan" delegation to the Hamolton home on a plantation near Mer Rouge with orders for her deportation.

"I was taken out dressed in gingham and without a hat," the girl said after describing a scene within the house during which she said her mother fell on her knees and pleaded that she be allowed to remain.

"With Dr. McKoin and 'Ponk' Kirkpatrick, who appeared to be the leaders of the part of black hooded men, I was taken to the railroad station."

"They told my mother that she would be tarred and feathered if I did not go," the young woman said. "They also told me I would be given like treatment. My mother jumped to her feet and attempted to push Dr. McKoin out of the door and he struck her."

She then told of being taken to a railroad station and of boarding a train for Little Rock, Ark., under orders of the masked men.

Questions as to the domestic relations between Mrs. Richard and her husband were asked.

"Our marriage was indeed a happy one," Mrs. Richard said.

"She denied she was receiving funds for her support now from "unknown sources."

The attendance at the morning session of the hearing did not fill the court room but during the afternoon there were no vacant seats. Dr. McKoin, as on previous days, had a seat in a gallery.

No intimation has yet been given by State Attorney General Coco, who is directing the inquiry, as to the number of witnesses yet to be heard before the investigation will be passed to a grand jury. The next procedure in advance of prosecution.

Nor has there been any word from the attorney general or his forces as to when arrests will be made.

Except for the presentation of testimony at the open hearing the day virtually was without developments, so far as was apparent. Department of justice agents continued their task of assembling testimony, while the military, two companies of state troops, remained in camp here and at Mer Rouge, maintaining the role of bystanders but held in readiness at any moment to come to the aid of the civil authorities should they be needed.

Jeff Burnett, the only man held in custody, still is in a hospital at Shreveport, under guard.

AMPLIFIER IS ENABLING DEAF PERSONS TO HEAR

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 10.—The use of an amplifier as a means of enabling deaf persons to hear, proved a decided success today, according to R. J. Condon, superintendent of Cincinnati public schools.

The amplifier which was installed in the room of a school where deaf persons are taught was pronounced a success after three boys, two of them who could hear slightly, were subjected to the test.

The climax came when Miss Florence Timmer, a 17-year-old girl, who has been deaf since birth, startled her examiners by a cry of astonishment as superintendent Condon spoke to her through the medium of an amplifier. It was the first sound she had ever heard, the superintendent said.

The experiments will be continued.

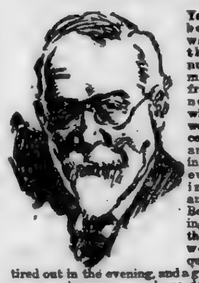
You Can Now Try Nuxated Iron At My Expense

I First Compounded This Remarkable Remedy For My Own Neighbors And Their Praise Of It Has Spread So Rapidly That Now Over Four Million People Use It Annually—Read My Unusual Offer Below.



Years ago I began to wonder at the great number of my own friends and neighbors who were always ailing, complaining and doctoring, without ever seeming to get any better. Both working men and their wives were frequently all tired out in the evening, and a great many were weak, nervous and run-down. One had pains in the back and thought he had kidney trouble. Another had pains around the heart, palpitations and dizziness, and was sure he was suffering from heart disease. Still others had severe headaches, floating spots before the eyes, tender spots along the spine and a great variety of alarming symptoms.

For years I made a special study of this condition, consulting a great number of physicians and chemists. An immense number of investigations by physicians all over the country showed that three people out of every four you meet lack 100% iron in their blood. Lack of iron in the blood is the greatest of all devitalizing weaknesses. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron, nothing you eat does you any good. Your heart, lungs and kidneys and all your vital organs get their nourishment from the blood stream, and when the blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery, you may suffer from the symptoms of a great number of diseases when the real and true cause of all your trouble is a lack of iron in the blood.

In the old days people often took metallic iron, which some physicians claim is not absorbed at all. In compounding this newer form of iron which I call Nuxated Iron, I employed a special form of iron, which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Unlike the older forms of iron, it will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach, and it is ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood. It is the people whose blood is rich in iron who possess great strength, force and energy. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test:

Cut out trial coupon and go to any druggist and get your first trial package of Nuxated Iron; then see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two 5-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. An astonishing number of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, have greatly improved their health and increased their strength, energy and endurance simply by taking this newer form of iron.

Trial Coupon

Fill in this coupon with your name and address and take it to any druggist in your city. Deposit with him the price of one regular full-size bottle of Nuxated Iron. This is not a paper coupon, but a deposit only. If you are not more than delighted with the results obtained by two weeks' use of Nuxated Iron, simply return the outside wrapper to your own druggist who will promptly refund your money. We will repay the druggist the full amount he refunds upon receipt of the coupon and wrapper.

Commercial fishermen of the state of Connecticut are to effect a state organization at a meeting to be held next Saturday afternoon at 1.0 at the chamber of commerce rooms in New London. It is believed that much can be done through united effort to improve the fish industry in this state.

Several excellent speakers will be present at the meeting to bring out what is the need and what will be the benefits from a state organization.

Breed Theatre.

William Farnum's admirers have a feast in store for them at the Breed theatre today, Friday and Saturday, where Without Compromise, the latest William Fox production starring the husky and handsome he-man of the screen, is being shown.

Without Compromise is a characteristic William Farnum play, which is tantamount to saying that it is replete with action, atmosphere and color, and has a plot that sustains interest to the end without flagging.

Farnum, of course, dominates the action throughout, and as sheriff of a rough lugging town on the frontier who disdained the use of shooting irons in governing the lawless element, the popular leading star has many opportunities for that compelling style of histrionic ability that has won him a unique place in the affections of photoplay lovers.

Announces Clothing Sale.

The family welfare department of the United Workers announces a sale of clothing on Saturday, the 13th, at 2 o'clock, in the basement of the United Workers' house.

In many cities welfare societies have a clothing store in connection with their work, where people who are unable to pay for new clothing can secure some that is partly worn, but still usable, at a very low price. They need the clothing but often would not ask for it, preferring the feeling of independence that paying for the necessary gives.

The money received in this way will be used for buying shoes, rubbers and underwear. We never have enough of these things, but certain other articles accumulate faster than we can dispose of them.

During the year we have given away hundreds of garments but some things remain that should be used during the cold weather. Therefore, a "January clearance sale" will be "killing two birds with one stone." While we are not able to have a store, we hope to be able to manage an occasional sale.

The Vaudeville Bill at Broadway Today, Friday and Saturday.

The five R. F. Keith acts scheduled for the Broadway for the last half of this week are as follows:

Gladeo Correll, Harry Weston and Dave Gardner make a wonderful combination in their comedy offering called Nautical Nonsense. Joe De Lea is an accordionist and will furnish the musical part of the program. Murray and Clara Ferguson are called The Comedy Maniacs and rightly so. They work for fun and give abundance of this. Mack and Stanton in Home, Sweet Home, are immense. The King brothers close the bill with a sensational novelty offering.

Neva Gerber, captivating little star of the Berwilla Film corporation, who has made several appearances here recently in some of her own photoplays, is scheduled for another presentation to her local admirers and patrons of the Broadway theatre. She comes to that theatre for three days beginning today in a thrilling new society drama entitled Dangerous Paths.

It has been asserted that love is a disease, and you might think so to see how it affected Geoffrey Sherwood in Outcast, Elsie Ferguson's new Paramount picture, which is to begin its three days' showing at the Strand theatre today. Moreover, Sherwood evidently thought it was incurable, for he attempted to drown himself, choosing alcohol as the medium. He would have succeeded, too, but for Miriam, played by Miss Ferguson, though she was not the object of his affections or the cause of his trouble. Mary MacLaren, in her important role of Valentine, is the girl.

An admirable cast supports the star. David Powell, one of the screen's best known leading men, plays opposite her. Mary MacLaren, who was the leading woman for Wallie Reid, and who recently supported Lionel Barrymore in The Face in the Fog, is another notable member. Other players include William E. Powell Charles Wellesly and William Boyd.

A very fine Educational Christie comedy entitled Chop Suey will furnish laughs galore. A Sennick News furnishes the rest of the entertainment.

Many a man would enjoy being cast away on a desert island. Then he wouldn't have to call on his wife's relations.

BATTERY B FIVE TAKES CLOSE GAME FROM CONNECTICUT MILLS QUINTET

The eighty fans that fought their way up Franklin street to the armory last night to see the Battery B-Connecticut Mills basketball game witnessed as fast a game as seen on any court in the country. The other 29,920 persons in Norwich who either did not make the attempt or fell by the wayside missed a real basketball treat. Danielson brought down a real basketball team that had worlds of speed, unlimited endurance and knew the game from A to Z.

Although the Battery team won there was no doubt in the minds of the fans but they had been up against a team equally as fast as the 16 to 14 score indicates. Real basketball was played during the game and as pretty defensive work as ever seen was displayed by both teams. The pass work was good with little to choose from as outstanding features.

The first five minutes of play was simply a struggle for possession of the ball and it was not until Reddy broke [illegible] own basket that the fans at the counter was caged. Belair a few seconds later took a long shot from mid-floor and the ball dropped cleanly through the hoop, completing a real spectacular shot. Reddy dropped in two [illegible] baskets in short order sending [illegible] out in the lead. The Battery [illegible] wonderful five-man defensive [illegible] and Danielson countered with [illegible] the same defense. Hutson, Worcester flash, on a clean floor [illegible] the sixth point of the first [illegible] The Battery team played hard [illegible] the last part of the first half and [illegible] dropped in one from under the [illegible] and Mills tied the score with a [illegible] basket from the floor. The first [illegible] with the score at 6 all.

In the second half Jim Murphy went [illegible] forward in place of Davis. Murphy [illegible] in smashing form, literally [illegible] "Red" Kenny with his [illegible] Murphy dropped in the first [illegible] after two minutes of play and [illegible] followed up with a second bas[illegible] few seconds. Danielson started [illegible] warm up and in the hard playing [illegible] followed repeated fouls were [illegible] and Reddy caged four out of five [illegible] Mills scored his second basket [illegible] the evening, again putting the Battery [illegible] the lead, while Denny Murphy [illegible] two fouls. Allison, who played a hard game during the evening, got his [illegible] when he shot from mid[illegible] floor followed with a pretty [illegible] that brought the Danielson boys close on the heels of the [illegible] D. Murphy scored the last basket of the evening about four minutes [illegible] the final whistle.

Every man that played on the two teams was a star and each one proved equal to the man playing against him with the possible exception of "Red" Kenny who was a trifle out of condition. The Murphy brothers put up a fast game against their opponents and [illegible] was with difficulty that either Reddy or Allison broke away. Belair played [illegible] classily flashy game but Hutson's [illegible] kept the local boy from becoming too dangerous. Mills played a good game at center although Armington [illegible] to him like a leech.

The line-up:

Goals for the Battery, Belair 3, Reddy 1, Jim Murphy 1, Allison, Reddy 2, Allison 1. Foul goals, D. Murphy 3.

Referee, S.

The preliminary game the Battery [illegible] seconds ran away with the "Y" Emps [illegible] by a score of 32 to 8. Oscar Mosserman, captain of the "Y" team, was the star of the Emps, scoring five of the 8 points.

The playing was a pleasure to watch and was the feature of the game.

BRISTOL MANAGER RESENTS TREATMENT AT DANIELSON

Harold S. Shippee, manager of the Bristol Town Team A. A. Basketball club, writes of the treatment received [illegible] at the hands of Manager [illegible] Danielson, Manager Shippee's letter follows:

Editor: We are taking the liberty [illegible] this article, being in favor [illegible] of clean sport, to inform [illegible] fans of your neighborhood [illegible] off on us Saturday night [illegible] conditioning town, Danielson, by [illegible] Delbert Pellerin and Norman [illegible] of that town.

It is our understanding that there has been internal friction brewing between the Danielson players and the management and in view of that fact, [illegible] above named gentlemen imported [illegible] the game scheduled Saturday, the St. Louis A. A. team of Woonsocket, R. I., to represent them in place of the [illegible] team which has represented Danielson many times past. The time of the game was changed at the town hall was [illegible] preliminary game to start at 8 p. m. and the main game, between this [illegible] and the Danielson five, to follow. The St. Louis A. A. five arrived at Danielson at 7:45 p. m. owing to the poor [illegible] of the roads we started from [illegible] at 4:30 p. m. which we believed would give us ample time to reach their [illegible] after reaching Providence we had [illegible] telephone operator at the Union station [illegible] call the management of the Danielson team, advising that we were on the way. This call was received at Danielson at 6:50 p. m. and the St. Louis players were informed of the above upon their arrival. On account of [illegible] trouble we did not reach Danielson until about 8:30 p. m. and as we drove up to the town hall, Mr. Pellerin seeing us, beat a hasty retreat. Upon entering the hall we were informed that the game had been called off, with the excuse that we had not arrived on time. Knowing that we were on the way and that the five representing Danielson had arrived, why was not the preliminary game put on? The only reason that can be arrived at is the fact that the management of the home team, believing that the crowd would be exceedingly small on account of the fact that they had been continuously bamboozled since the opening night, thought that a hasty retreat would be in order.

As near as could be learned no tickets were sold for the game and neither this club nor the St. Louis club, representing Danielson, received a cent. It is high time that such people as the men who are running the Danielson team were put under cover for their unsportsmanlike conduct.

We are writing this in order that other managers running teams in Connecticut will not run the risk of being put in debt, as we have been, by booking games at Danielson as long as the two above gentlemen are connected with the team. As both this club and the St. Louis A. A. stand high in the regards of basketball team throughout Rhode Island and Massachusettes, we don't believe that the present men running the Danielson team will book any other teams from our vicinity for a long time to come.

Yours for clean sport,
BRISTOL TOWN TEM A. A.,
Harold Shippee, Manager.

ATHLETIC FEDERATION UNITS ARE BEING ORGANIZED

New York, Jan. 10.—Organization of new national amateur athletic federation units is under way in many sections of the country for the purpose of carrying out a programme of athletics and mass recreational activity, it was announced today by Elwood S. Brown, executive officer of the N. A. A. F.

The federation, launched less than a year ago and formally organized but a few weeks back, when nearly a score of national organizations concerned with athletics placed their stamp of approval on its programme, has not as yet undertaken a national organization campaign, Mr. Brown declared, pointing out that the development work so far has been due to initiative taken by interested groups in various localities.

This organization work, he said, eventually will lead to establishment of state and regional federations throughout the country. The army and navy, National Collegiate Athletic association, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., and Y. M. H. A., all of which have membership in the federation, are important factors in this development, Mr. Brown said.

The Northern California Amateur Athletic federation, one of the first branches formed, has been granted constituent membership in the national body Mr. Brown said until the entire state is organized. Southern California groups, centered in Los Angeles, also are prepared to organize.

The Cook County, Ill., federation, which includes Chicago, has been in existence for some time, and will take the leadership in forming an Illinois federation, according to Mr. Brown.

Organization preliminaries also are under way, he said, in the state of Washington, centering around Tacoma; in Louisiana, with headquarters at New Orleans; in North and South Carolina; in Northern New York, with Buffalo as the hub, and in Omaha, Neb.

"The federation is not an experiment," Mr. Brown declared. "It is based on fundamental principles. It was launched at the request of the war department in order to carry out a definite programme of physical preparedness work and numerous organizations of nation-wide importance have definitely pledged their co-operation by becoming constituent members.

"We have had requests for information from all parts of the country and are giving any aid possible in formation of federation units. Standard physical tests, adopted at the annual meeting, are being sent broadcast as a basis for initial work."

BOTH JOHNSON AND BRENNAN ARE CONFIDENT

Floyd Johnson, who is after the heavyweight title, is still going through the traces of his training period at Yonkers, confident that he will be able to win over Bill Brennan, his nearest rival, Friday night at the Garden. He has gone on record as stating that he will knock out in six or seven rounds.

Brennan Also Confident.

There is just as much confidence in the Brennan camp. According to "Kid" Norfolk, who has been mitt-pushing with Brennan since he has been conditioning for the fight, Brennan is going to give Johnson a nifty lacing. Jess Willard, who seeks a return scrap with Dempsey, and Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, will occupy ringside during the fifteen round battle.

Willard Is Goal.

There is a chance that Willard will be matched with the winner of the bout if the former champ should survive a battle with either of these two men, who are among the top-notchers in the heavyweight class, he might then be treading on firmer ground in demanding another chance from Dempsey. In fact, much hinges on the Friday night fight.

The eyes of the fight fans have been directed towards Johnson of late, and his career is believed to have more opportunities for the championship than Brennan's who while he can stand the gaff isn't regarded as the likely successor to the heavyweight crown. Johnson's future seems full of promise.

NOMINATIONS FOR FUTURITY OF 1925 ARE INCREASED TO 1,499

Entries received through the mails recently by the Westchester Racing Associaiton increased the total for the Futurity, the two-year-old turf classic to be run in 1925 at Belmont Park, to 1,499. Among the late arrivals of nominations were those of Adolph Spreckels of California. He named ten mares, bred mostly to Runnymede, the sire of Morvich. Further entries from Rudolph Spreckels and others on the Coast are expected. These additional ones will probably swell the grand total well beyond the 1,500 mark. The present entry of 1,499 is 109 more than was received for the juvenile classic when it closed a year ago for its running in 1924 and 100 more than the highest record in any other year. Nominations by the Nursery Stud were forty-seven instead of twenty-seven, the latter number having been announced as official through an error in transcription. This total lifts the well-known Kentucky establishment well up on the list of patrons for the greatest of two-year-old prizes. These forty-seven dams have been mated with Fair Play, Hourless, Man-o'War and other sires which Major August Belmont deemed worthy of patronage.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE, DEMPSEY-LEWIS BOUT

It's a wonder that Jack Dempsey and Ed (Strangler) Lewis can stand the gaff. Their proposed free-for-all match in cave man style with an alleged $300,000 purse as the bait has set half the sporting world to snickering and the other half to shaking their heads in doubt.

There might be some fight and wrestling fans who would attend the melee, but more from curiosity than from a desire to see a real scrap. Two flyweights with plenty of pep, each with inclination to maul the other guy, ought to provide more thrills than watching a couple of modern Roman gladiators trying to make his opponent a subject for a chiropractor.

The whole business of arranging the match causes doubts that it will ever take place. Somebody makes a statement and then comes a hot-foot denial. For instance, a yarn from 'Frisco quotes Lewis as saying he had articles signed by Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, for the bout. Dempsey says it's news to him. The Wichita, Kan., promoter, who was rumored as willing to put up the purse of $300,000, when asked about it remarked on the nice weather and said he didn't know anything about the articles.

It looks as if a couple of press agents have been working overtime.

COAST LEAGUE MAY ACT INDEPENDENTLY

Chicago, Jan. 10—An assertion that the Coast league may act independently, an appeal for action by President A. R. Tearney of the Three I league, and a statement by baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, affirming the right of the majors to act, were developments today in the row brewing in organized baseball because the majors forced a modified draft on the anti-draft leagues and raised the optional player limit from eight to fifteen.

William H. McCarthy, of the Pacific Coast league said his organization will assert its right to act independently if the majors violate the major-minor league agreement in regard to drafting players.

Commissioner Landis in reply to a telegraphic request from McCarthy for information regarding the points at issue, replied that the majors were justified in their move. Defending the draft feature, Commissioner Landis said he believed the majors had the right to "protect the player in his right of advancement".

In a message to practically every minor league head, President Tearney of the Three I league urged them to call Mike Sexton, president of the minor associations to take steps in defense of the minors. President Tearney said he knowledge that Commissioner Landis' defense of the majors was based on the fact that the national association convention adopted a resolution denying the majors the right to amend that part of the agreement which had to do with optional players during the present year, the national association having thus violated the major-minor agreement at this meeting.

WILLARD WILLING TO FIGHT HIS WAY TO RETURN MATCH WITH JACK DEMPSEY

New York, Jan. 10.—(By The A. P.)—Jess Willard declared today he was willing to fight his way to a return match with Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight boxing title if it is necessary to do that in order to convince the public he can get into condition for a battle with the champion.

Willard made this declaration after he and his manager, Ray Archer, had conferred for several hours with Promotor Tex Rickard in regard to a possible match with Dempsey.

No definite announcement was forthcoming after the conference but it was understood Rickard assumed Willard that he was ready to stage a return bout with Dempsey, possibly in July, if the former titleholder can demonstrate his fitness, to the satisfaction of the public.

Negotiations, it was said, would remain practically at a standstill until Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, arrives from the Pacific Coast. Dan McKetrick, Dempsey's eastern representative, said tonight that Kearns would not be here this week, as had been expected, and might not return until the latter part of next week. Right now, he added, the champion is contemplating a reappearance in the movies and negotiations with London promoters who have offered a purse of $250,000 for him to box Joe Beckett, English heavyweight during Derby week, in May.

Willard, in the meantime, plans to remain indefinitely in New York and keep himself in condition with daily gymnasium workouts. He has expressed a willingness to box two or three heavyweights before newspapermen and critics in order to prove his claim that he can get into fighting trim again.

"If I can't convince newspapermen that I'm in good shape now and able to train down from my present weight of 260 pounds to about 240, my best fighting poundage, I'll quit and go back to the farm," Willard asserted.

"I want to fight Dempsey first and I think I've proved my right to another chance at the title, but if necessary, I'll go out and fight any other contenders," he added, mentioning Bill Brennan, Floyd Johnson and Luis Firpo as possibilities. The former titleholder, however, has drawn the color line so that Harry Wills is not included in his list.

In this connection Tom O'Rourke, Polo Grounds matchmaker, announced today he had secured Bill Brennan's signature to articles for a fight with Willard about May 1 at the Giants' ball park and was negotiating with Willard's manager.

"I'll fight myself back into shape if I get a match with Dempsey," Willard continued, "I want four or five months of hard training in the mountains and a staff of the hardest-hitting, toughest sparring partners I can get. I won't make the mistake again that I did at Toledo, before I lost the title, in not training properly."

Willard expressed little concern over the edict of William Muldoon, chairman of the New York State Athletic commission, barring the former champion from fighting in this state, whether he is over or under the age limit of 38, and branding his attempted come-back as "ridiculous." He insisted that he is only 36, despite records to the contrary and declared a fight with Dempsey could be staged easily outside of this state if the commission maintains its barrier.

JESS WILLARD NEARING THE 40 YEAR MARK

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 10—(By the A. P.)—The age of Jess Willard, former world's champion boxer, was quite definitely determined here today both by relatives and by records in the office of the probate judge at West Moreland, Kansas, county seat of Pottawatomie county. These authorities agree that Jess is forty or almost forty. Jess' brother, Myron L. Willard, who operates the big boxer's 40-acre farm east of Topeka, evidently had not heard anything about the controvery over Jess' age, in which the New York State boxing commission is an interested party.

"Jess will be forty right soon now," said the brother. According to news despatches, Jess' promoters are modestly claiming but 36 summers, or that he will register a couple of years under the maximum of 38 years set by the New York boxing commission for men who are eligible to enter boxing bouts in that state.

Judge W. E. Grutzmacher, of Pottawatomie county, probate court today dug into the records of his office and found a petition for guardianship, taken out in 1901, specifying that Jess M. Willard then was 19 years old.

"That was 21 years ago, so Jess must be 40 now," said the judge.

HEYDLER PREDICTS MAJORS WILL WIN AGAINST MINORS

New York, Jan. 10.—President John A. Heydler of the National League and John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, predicted today that the major leagues would win in their attempt to force the minor leagues to accept players sent them by the majors with a clause permitting the majors to redraft the men.

"The minor leagues violated the major-minor agreement when they passed the resolution at Louisville providing that no vote or amendments to the compact be made for a year," said Mr. Heydler. "By passing our resolution for an increased optional limit and stipulating that players hereafter sent to the non-draft leagues should be subject to the draft we have simply protected ourselves. I see no reason for this hysteria. There won't be any bloodshed."

McGraw announced that he will send no player to a Class A club "unless I get a guarantee that he will be subject to draft at the end of the season."

ARIE TIES WITH WARREN FOR PINEHURST TRAP HONORS

Pinehurst, N. C., Jan. 10—Mark Arie, of Champaign, Ill., and W. G. Warren, of Chicago, tied for first place with a total of 435 breaks out of 450 targets in the annual midwinter trapshooting tournament which ended today. They were tied last night with 293 out of 300 and each broke 142 targets out of the third block of 150 today.

Homer Clark, of Illinois, led the professional field by a margin of four targets and won the professional trophy with a total of 426. Eight amateurs finished ahead of him.

In the sectional contest the west came from behind and defeated the East by a margin of two targets, 2145 to 2143.

GIBBONS AND RICKARD DISCUSS TITLE BOUT

New York, Jan. 10—Tom Gibbons, St. Paul heavyweight, discussed the prospect of a championship bout with Jack Dempsey with Tex Rickard, the promoter, at Madison Square Garden this afternoon, after the departure of Jess Willard, ex-champion, who talked to Rickard on the subject of a bout between himself and the present title-holder.

It is understood that Rickard proposes to stage a Dempsey-Gibbons bout in his arena shortly after the opening of the outdoor season.

The Plainfield Five defeated the Baltic Wanderers for the second time this season at the Baltic gym on Wednesday evening by a close score of 37 to 36. Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation.

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

COMMISSIONER BENNETT'S RESIGNATION.

The resignation of Highway Commissioner C. J. Bennett has been sent to the governor to take place at the completion of his term July first. It is a move which will be regretted throughout the state where the evidences of his work as a road builder are at hand. It is recognized that he has been an efficient official such as the state would be fortunate in keeping. Gratification must be expressed that it has had the benefit of his service for a decade.

Commissioner Bennett is leaving the employ of the state for the superintendency of a contracting firm, where it is probable the remuneration will be greater. He has not, however, given in his resignation without a knowledge of the fact that his retention of the office is desired, or without having been informed that the governor planned to reappoint him. Those who have been trying to make an issue of the highway commissionership will probably continue to claim that Mr. Bennett was not encouraged to stay, but when it is shown that he is slated to be one of the members of a three-headed commission to direct the highway work of the state, and that he is agreeable to accepting such an appointment it becomes quite evident that any such claim would fall through its own weakness.

Commissioner Bennett has simply put into action what he has threatened before. He has been convinced that he could command a larger salary in private employ and that is the basis for his action. Politics have not been displayed in connection with his appointment, reappointments or conduct of the office and there is nothing of the kind apparent in the change which he is making. There will be general satisfaction, however, if the plan for retaining the benefit of his advice goes through.

STATES HAVE FAILED.

While he was in the governor's chair Hugh M. Dorsey was committed to a commendable policy looking to the elimination of lynch law as practiced in his state, which for years has taken a leading position in the number of instances where lives have been taken without the semblance of a trial and without ascertaining whether the accused was actually guilty.

It is not surprising, therefore, that former Governor Dorsey should give expression to his disappointment at the failure of congress to take favorable action on the Dyer anti-lynching bill.

Such a federal law is being sought because states have failed to insist upon a proper enforcement of law and order and also failed to give to their citizens the rights which they are assured under the federal constitution. If there is no federal law the conditions must be dealt with by the states but not only have their neglected their duty in this respect but it appears to be in accord with their wishes that conditions should remain as they are instead of being improved, even though the repeated lynchings make a joke of the laws of those commonwealths.

Good reason is there for the further statement of Ex-Governor Dorsey, when he says "The states have had ample opportunity to pass laws for the suppression of this evil, and have failed to take adequate steps," and while he hopes the states will exercise their rights in view of the failure to get federal legislation he has "little hope that that will be the case."

With the prevailing attitude in southern states new state legislation is no more likely than is its enforcement. It is because of lack of enforcement of existing laws that lynching is so freely resorted to. The willingness to leave it to the states for treatment has failed to get the deserved response. It is a situation that stands as a disgrace to the nation and federal legislation cannot be secured any too soon to hasten its elimination.

THE BRITISH BOXER INDEMNITY.

It has taken some time for our example to sink in deep enough to bring about enforcement through emulation, nevertheless that is what is to be deduced from the action of Great Britain in adopting a plan for devoting the installments from the boxer rebellion indemnity to the education of the Chinese.

After the boxer rebellion in China at the close of the last century there were claims by the various countries for the damages caused. They amounted to no small sum, and included in the list was the United States, whose citizens had been killed and others had been made to suffer greatly because of this uprising. Likewise it cost a pretty penny in the way of expenses. This country was awarded something like a third of a billion dollars, but as a friend of China it immediately refunded the greater part of it or what was found to be in excess of damages sustained and expenses involved in providing protection.

This was an American way of doing. It was quite in opposition to anything that other countries had done, and the United States was the only one that did it. It was natural that it made a lasting impression upon the Chinese. It places us much higher in the estimation of the Chinese than other countries stand. Whether the observance of that after these many years has actuated the British or not, it is nevertheless a commendable, if belated, decision that has been rendered by the British to refund the future installments on the Chinese indemnity. They appreciate the excellence of the American way. Even though they do not release all claim to it, and seek to improve their own position there is a service of undeniable value that is being rendered to the Chinese when it is provided that these payments should be devoted for the next 25 years to the education of Chinese students in British universities. Great Britain sees the importance of being drawn closer to China and to do that it sees the necessity of showing a different attitude and getting the future Chinese statesmen to understand the British viewpoints.

REFUNDING THE WAR DEBT.

When action was taken in the senate at the time the debt refunding commission was created attention was called to the fact that the restrictions placed on the commission before they had the opportunity to ascertain what the facts were surrounding the debtor nations was unfortunate. The administration was not in favor of it and it is thus not surprising that President Harding now calls attention to the handicap that exists.

In creating the commission the senate fixed the date beyond which the bonds should not be issued and let it be understood that the rate of interest was not to be less than four and a quarter per cent. The senate was acting for the purpose of preventing the possibility of an arrangement whereby the payments would be extended over an unusually long period or whereby lower interest would be fixed than was justified.

The trouble is, however, that it ties the hands of the commission before they start, and overlooks the fact that whatever the commission does, whether it could accomplish a refunding agreement that would be entirely within the senate's restrictions, or whether the negotiations made it apparent that such could be done, ratification of the committee's work rests entirely with the senate.

In naming the commission to negotiate, it is to be expected that whatever decision is arrived at will be based upon the facts that exist concerning conditions and the ability of the respective countries to pay. The senate has acted in such a way that this freedom is denied the commission and it bids fair to hamper the work.

There is no reason to suppose that those named on the commission will do anything but look after the best interests of this country, and inasmuch as the senate must pass on the report no harm is going to be done if the commission makes the best arrangements possible, having in mind of course the instructions of the senate, and let the senate be the final judge as to whether the "best arrangements possible" ought to be approved or not. Such a move will undoubtedly bring the quickest understanding concerning the foreign war debts.

CARING FOR THE ARMENIANS.

Turkey has indicated that it was unwilling to listen to the Armenians in regard to the establishment of a national home for them in Turkey. Likewise it has demonstrated that it is unwilling to consider any such proposition, even if advanced by the delegates assembled at Lausanne. When the attempt was made the Turks walked out, giving the impression that when it came to the Armenians they would insist upon doing as they please, or as they have done in the past. They have not been moved by the pleas in behalf of those much misused people, or softened in their attitude toward them.

The Turkish view seems to be summed up in the statement by the leader of the Turkish delegation, when he declared that the Armenians had revolted at the suggestion of the allies and inasmuch as they had lost it was up to the allies to take care of them. Thus the Turks do not intend to shoulder any responsibility for the situation surrounding the Armenians. They look back no farther than the revolt. What precipitated the revolt or the ill feeling of the Armenians toward the Turks they do not want to talk about. Neither do they wish to discuss the horrible manner in which the Armenians have been treated, the way in which their number has been reduced by two-thirds and the probability that they will continue to be used like wild beasts indefinitely, or as long as they refuse to yield to the Turkish demands.

Armenia is one of the problems that the allies have delayed handling in the proper manner for years. The delays haven't made it any easier for them to secure proper protection for these people. On the contrary they have made it more difficult, and yet that would be the weakest reason in the world for them to abandon them entirely. Nothing would please the Turks better than to have the Armenians left to their merciless treatment, and there is no wonder that civilization cries out against it. It is time for the allies to accept that challenge of the Turks to the effect that it rests with them to look after the Armenians, and to see that Turkey keeps hands off.

HOME MILLINERY

"My goodness," exclaimed the girl with the blue iridescent hat, "if you haven't another new hat!"

The girl with the tangerine toque smiled commiseratingly. "You are a nice one to talk, Charlotte, dear. I've never before seen you wear that iridescent blue thing that you have on your head right now. I admit that I buy too many of them, but you have even more than I."

"Yes, but see how much of my millinery work I do," countered the girl with the blue iridescent headgear. "Hats cost hardly anything when you make them at home. Why, I took a course in millinery, you know, just so that I could have all of the new ones I wanted. I even know how to make the wire shapes if I care to. Of course, as a rule, I buy the shape all ready to cover, for one can get such good-looking shapes for 50 or 75 cents that it hardly pays to bother. But if I happen to think of some different kind I want I know how to make it.

"Then I take something around the house and cover the wire or buckram shape—it is seldom that I need to buy new material. Hats are so small now that they take only the smallest quantities of material.

"Generally I buy the trimming, for it is essential—they told us in the millinery course—that the trimming be new and snappy. Old trimming either dingy in color or old style as to type will ruin a hat and will inevitably give a home-made appearance."

"You talk just like a book, like a regular correspondence course," said the girl who wore the tangerine toque admiringly.

"Of course," agreed the other girl. "I studied the books in the millinery course well enough to write one myself. I thought that it was all well worth my time, because hats are frightfully expensive when you come to total up your dress expenses for the year. Now, that hat you are wearing this minute never cost you a cent less than $27 plus the tax."

"There you are!" triumphed the other girl. "If you wanted to take the trouble to learn millinery you could make that selfsame hat for less than $10—oh, much less. Probably $7. Think of the saving."

"I know it."

"You can have things when they are new, too. You don't have to wait until they are put on the bargain tables before you feel that you want to spend the money for a hat."

"Yes——" began the girl with the tangerine toque.

"And if you do happen to pay $2 or $3 for a bit of velvet or satin you can always use the piece over again on some other hat, you know, so that it is not a dead loss in any way."

"Yes," again said the girl with the tangerine toque.

"And you can always make your hats individualistic. You don't have to stumble cringingly down the boulevard with the fear that you may meet your hat a half dozen times within the hour."

"I believe that I'll take a course," said the girl with the tangerine toque.

"You ought to," cordially urged the other girl. "It's well worth the time and money."

"That hat you're wearing," said the girl with the tangerine toque, "was that hard to make?"

"Oh, this little thing?" said the girl with the blue iridescent hat, carelessly. "I didn't make this hat. I picked this up at a great bargain—$25, and they're the latest thing out."

"Oh!" gasped the girl with the tangerine toque. "Oh!"—Chicago News.

Wives of Famous Men

Louise, Wife of Frederick William of Prussia

The married lief of Louise and Frederick William of Prussia was one of the few real romances in the history of royalty. Love at first sight it was on the part of Frederick William, when as a prince he saw this beautiful young girl. And his love was immediately returned.

Louise was 17 when she first met the future emperor, and she had already begun to blossom into that rare beauty so celebrated in picture and story. Typical of her race, she was fair-haired, blue-eyed and possessor of dazzling skin. And she was without the usual stolidity of expression that mars so many Teutonic beauties.

They were married on a Christmas Eve and the crown of the Hohenzollerns was placed upon her head. But the old adage, "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown," did not apply to this young princess. In fact, so felicitous was her life as the wife of Frederick William that we find her story in a volume entitled "Happy Women."

Louise and her husband disliked court life and spent most of their time alone with each other. Even after he was crowned emperor they lived as simply as possible. All the spare money that she had, every gift she received, Louise used to alleviate the sufferings of the poor. In addition, she spent not only her gold but her time with them, and she was deeply beloved. She trained her children in the same manner and by her own beautiful deeds set them daily examples of goodness.

When she died all Germany went into genuine mourning. Her husband and children were inconsolable, but grateful for one thing—that her death was as beautiful and peaceful as her life had been.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

James Campbell Cantrill, who has announced himself as a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Kentucky, is the representative in congress of the Seventh Kentucky district. Mr. Cantrill bears a name prominent in the history of Kentucky and the south, and has won more than local fame by his organization of the agriculturists of the state to fight the trusts that formerly had the producers at their mercy. He is a farmer by vocation, with a degree from Georgetown college, at Georgetown, Ky. In state politics he has been influential, as a manager of the partisan machine, as a member of the lower and upper houses of the legislature, and as delegate to national conventions of the democratic party. He entered congress in 1909, and, once at Washington, he gave to his constituents such satisfaction that he has been kept there without a break. Mr. Cantrill is prominent in fraternal orders. His home is at Georgetown.

Stories That Recall Others

Willing to Go to Any Length.

The proprietor of a shoe shining parlor sat in his place of business on a snowy and slushy day waiting for trade. He saw nothing to be done that might make the place more attractive. But somehow no one seemed to want a shine. The chairs remained empty and the shining cloths had grown decidedly cold.

Presently a friend of the proprietor entered.

Had Heard About Goldsmith.

Among her Christmas presents was a large bowl of goldfish. Now it happened that while she had read widely in the fields of literature and science goldfish were out of her line, and in order to familiarize herself with the life, characteristics, habits, appetites, prejudices and idiosyncracies of goldfish she went to a book store.

"I desire a goldfish book," she told the clerk who waited on her.

A puzzled look overspread her countenance as she asked: "A what?"

"A goldfish book, a goldfish book," she replied.

Suddenly her face brightened as with a lordly air of condescending superiority she said: "Oh, yes, I know what you want. You mean Goldsmith's works."

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

GREECE HAS SURVIVED MANY REVERSES

"If anyone feels inclined to fear that Greece is in a way to pass wholly from the world stage because of the tremendous reverses which she has suffered recently," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society, "he has only to glance back into history to change his mind.

"There are few parallels," continues the bulletin quoting a communication to The Society, "to the striking racial phenomenon of Hellenic continuity throughout the vicissitudes of 2,000 years. Modern research has penetrated the dark byways of medieval Greek story, and we now know that the Greeks, whatever their temporary fate, have preserved unbroken the thread of their national existence.

"The firmest bond which unites the Greek of today with his illustrious forebears of the golden age is the Greek language, the essential elements of which remain as they were in the days when the tongue served as the medium of the noblest poetry and the sublimest philosophy which the race has yet produced. This tongue traces its unbroken lineage back through medieval and New Testament Greek to the classic speech of Plato and of his contemporaries.

"And yet, with all this continuity of language, there has existed in Greece for some years a linguistic condition of affairs around which centers a controversy at once comic or tragic; for there are in Greece two languages, or, rather, the one language in two forms—one written by the newspapers, spoken by the educated classes, and used in parliamentary debates and in public documents, including the Scriptures, the circulation of which is regulated by law; and the other a vernacular used by the masses of the people, containing many words of foreign origin, especially Turkish and Italian, arising from those periods of foreign occupation, with a much simplified grammar and rarely reduced to writing, except for private communications. The former is the cultured tongue; the latter the popular idiom; and between the two there rages a merciless warfare, in which fanatical students of the university have lost their lives, ministers their portfolios, and a Metropolitan of Athens his miter.

"The controversy is too intricate to be briefly summarized, and like most questions which divide the Levantine mind, it is probably not to be settled wholly in favor of either extreme party.

"The use of these two tongues is a source of much confusion to the visitor in Greece, especially if he has reckoned upon his knowledge of classic Greek to assist his in his travels. He will be able indeed to read the newspapers without much difficulty, but he will be utterly lost in conversation, not only because of the pronunciation, which is vastly different from the Erasmian method in which Westerners are schooled, but because the spoken tongue, being demotic, will have a vastly different vocabulary from that which he has taken from the dictionary.

"Greece of today looks back only three generations, if one places its origin in the War for Independence, which was concluded by the Protocol of London in 1830; and, witnessing the progress which in that brief span has been made in a land of such sparse resources, one cannot see how praise can be withheld from a people who have accomplished so much.

"It is only in the islands or deep in the country, where the Albanian flood which swept across the Attic plain has never reached, that one finds the facial lineaments and the bodily grace which the ancient sculptor has taught the modern world as being common to all Greeks of classic time. And this survival persists chiefly among the children, because incessant toil and scanty nourishment soon deprive both boys and girls of their native grace and stamp them with the ineradicable marks of a life of labor.

"Greece is essentially a land of agriculture, preeminently intended to be such; but, owing to the tremendous drain by emigration from the rural districts, the progress of agriculture has been painfully deficent. In many places the land is tilled only by women and girls. Many of the men have gone off to America.

"Throughout Greece — and indeed throughout the entire Balkan region—English is much heard, because of the great numbers of Greeks who have returned home from America; and few travelers in the Peloponnesus will fail to recall at almost every railroad station the eager face thrust in at the carriage window and quivering with the demand, 'You fellers from America?'

"The ancient Athenian democracy may be said to have projected itself well-nigh intact into the life of Greece as it is today. Class distinction are unknown. Titles of nobility are forbidden by the constitution, even though every native of Corfu claims to be a Venetian count, and the Crown Prince is known only as the Diadochos, or Successor. Neither wealth nor education hinders the association of all upon terms of the most absolute equality.

"One unfortunate result of this extreme democracy, so firmly fixed as a Hellenic characteristic, is the disinclination to obey a leader, which has had a strikingly disastrous effect upon both the politics and the commerce of the nation.

"Long years of Turkish oppression have, however, left their mark on the Greeks; not in externals but in certain customs and attitudes of mind. Thus the position of women in modern Greek life is semi-oriental, to say the least."

HELP FOR GIRLS WHO WORK

Mrs. Lodic Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Tyrone, Pa.—"A friend told my husband how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped his wife, so my husband bought me a bottle because I was so run-down, had a nervous weakness, no strength in my body and pains in my left side so bad that I could hardly do my work. Before I was married I used to work in the factory, and I had pains just the same then as I have had since I have done my housework. I would not be without a bottle in the house now. It has stopped the pains all right and I have found out that it is a wonderful body builder, as it has made me well and strong. It is going to be the 'old reliable' with me hereafter, and I am always willing to tell other women how it has helped me. You can use this letter as you wish as I can honestly say that my words are true."—Mrs. M. LODIC, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 40, Tyrone, Pa.

COSTS STATE THOUSANDS TO CLEAR OFF SNOW

Expenditures by the state highway department for removing snow from the trunkline and state aid highways of Connecticut to date this winter have reached a total of between $35,000 and $40,000, according to figures made public by W. L. Ulrick, superintendent of repairs. The trunklines of the state in those sections where Monday's storm was snow were opened Tuesday by 90 trucks equipped with scrapers, which were pressed into action early in the morning.

In some cases the drifting of the snow made traveling difficult on the highways before night. This condition was particularly true in the northern, western and eastern sections of the state and prompted the suggestion by the highway department that long trips in these sections by automobile be made only when necessary. It was also strongly advised that a shovel be carried along in preparation for such drifts as might be encountered.

Traveling conditions in the southern part of the state were reported to be more satisfactory and no cases of impassable roads were reported from below Meriden and Middletown.

More than 100 telephone inquiries a day are received at the highway department during the period when snow is apt to hamper traffic. The department is prepared to furnish at all time information relative to road conditions in the state and many, particularly the larger users of trucks for transportation purposes, avail themselves of the department's reports.

Tuesday night the entire fleet of trucks of the highway department was kept at work, re-opening roads where drifting had occurred during the day. About 250 men were given work on account of the storm. The shortage of labor is especially felt by the department during such emergencies. In one case in a recent storm it was necessary to go to Winsted to secure 25 men to open a section of highway on the Winsted road at Avon mountain.

Thieves in Lunch Cart

George C. Driscoll notified the police Wednesday afternoon that his lunch cart had been entered by some unknown persons, who had evidently been looking for money, as they had broken open the cash register but not taken any articles from the cart. No money was secured.

It is not known whether they got into the cart while it was standing in Shetucket street after it had been locked up at the close of business Wednesday or after it had been moved to the yard where it is stored during the day.

WEDDINGS.

Thompson—Swan

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock when Dr. Clarence G. Thompson and Miss Marion Tift Swan were united in marriage before a company of about 50 guests in the doctor's handsome new bungalow at 120 West Thames street. Palms, potted plants and garlands of southern smilax, used in profusion for the house decorations, made an unusually attractive setting and the ceremony was performed in the soft light of many rose-colored candles arranged among the green. Rev. Robert A. Day, rector of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, was the officiating clergyman, performing the ceremony before a bower of of palms arranged in one corner of the parlor.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin, her vail held with pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and lillies of the valley. Her bridesmaid, Miss Alice Jenkins was charming in orchid silk and carried Ophelia roses. Frederick Limpert of New York was the best man.

The bridal party entered the parlor to the music of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, rendered by Miss Elizabeth Lane, violin, and Henry La Fontaine, piano. They also played during the reception that followed the ceremony and several solos were rendered by Mr. Limpert. A buffet lunch was served and Dr. Thompson and his bride left during the latter part of the evening for their honeymoon to New York.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful pin and he presented the best man a Masonic charm. The bride's gift to the groom was a sterling silver cigarette case and she presented her attendant a brooch. The bride received a large number of beautiful gifts, including silver, cut glass, opalized crystal, china, linen, pictures and sums of gold.

Dr. Thompson, who is the son of Mrs. Ellen Thompson of New York, has been a successful practicing physician in this city for the past two years. He is a graduate of Fordham college medical school and had been attached to the Flower hospital, New York, and an interne at the Backus hospital in this city before beginning private practice.

His bride is the daughter of Mrs. Abbie B. and the late Isaac C. Swan and has resided at 274 West Main street. Her home has always been in this city, where for a number of years past she has been stenographer in the insurance office of B. P. Learned & Co. Both the doctor and his bride are popular among their wide circle of friends to whom they will be at home informally at their new bungalow after return from their honeymoon.

Sevin-Saxton

Edwin Higgins Sevin, youngest son of Mrs. Clarence D. Sevin of 28 Bliss place, and Miss Olive Maude Saxton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Henry Saxton, 327 Broadway, were united in marriage Wednesday at noon by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott in the study of the United Congregational church. The marriage was a quiet one with only relatives of the bride and groom attending.

The bride and groom have always made their homes in this city, where Mr. Sevin has learned the trade of woolen dyeing and is employed at the Yantic mill of the American Woolen Co. The bride is a graduate of the Howe-Marot school at Thompson. Mr. and Mrs. Sevin are to reside at 28 Bliss place. They have a wide circle of friends who will extend them best wishes for the future.

SPEAKS TO INTERCITY MEETING ON ROTARY ETHICS IN EVERY DAY LIFE

DONALD A. ADAMS
District Governor

One hundred and twenty-five Rotarians from New London, Willimantic and Norwich, with their guests, heard a most inspiring talk on "Applying the Rotary Code of Ethics in Everyday Life," delivered Wednesday evening by Donald A. Adams of New Haven, governor of the 30th district, at the intercity Rotary meeting held at the Wauregan hotel.

Governor "Don" said: "I wish there were more clubs in the 30th district like the Norwich club, full of pep, attaining 100 per cent. meetings without trying for them. That's the spirit we need in Rotary if we are to carry the movement throughout the world. Here in New England there are many cities capable of supporting a Rotary club, where as yet none have been started. Let's all get behind President "Val" Murphy of the Willimantic club and boost the movement to start a club in Putnam, then get out and start clubs in other cities.

"I came here this evening to give you only a few points on Rotary as I have seen it through contact with its wonderful program while I have been serving only half my term as district governor. Only a few days ago I was talking to Cook Harris, brother of Paul Harris, who founded Rotary, and he is sacrificing daily to send Rotary throughout the world. He showed me where there was an opportunity to extend Rotary in New England and I need your backing to attain the mark he has set.

"Let me give you a few of the fundamentals of Rotary. We hear a lot about the work of the international methods committee through the local committees, and let me tell you the work of this committee is the heart and soul of Rotary.

"This committee asks you to apply the Rotary code of ethics in your everyday life. It goes without saying that Rotary can only exist by its members, and unless the members themselves add value to Rotary, the movement cannot survive.

"What are all these meetings and gatherings we hold, such as this gathering tonight? I tell you it's the machinery of Rotary. The profit that comes from this machinery is the things in Rotary that become a part of you. Unless you live Rotary seven days a week, these gatherings are all froth, they do not produce results. We have the ethics of Rotary to follow the same as an architect follows the blue print or the mariner follows the compass, and unless we apply the code we can only wander.

"You can't apply the Rotary code of ethics unless you know them. I have seen cases where men in business, Rotarians, have run out of selfishness deliberately schemed with other men in business propositions, planning to split the handsome profit. Rotary can only succeed when such men as these, the cancers of Rotary, are cut out of the organization.

"You may think that the Rotary code of ethics is too idealistic. I tell you it is idealistic, but even though we cannot live up to them in their entirety, let us steer toward the goal, we can make life better by the trying. It is practical idealism, and it is gaining more and more every day. Ray Havens has put the Rotary code of ethics into his business with wonderful success, and Rotary has seen this and made him a leader.

"I can only quote a famous Rotarian who said: 'The biggest game on earth is played by the Golden Rule; two or more can play the game, but it is up to you to move first. You don't have to win to gain, you win by playing fair. When you play the game the other way it ceases to be a game and becomes a gamble.' This is what many big houses in the country know to be true, and they are applying the Golden Rule in business with success.

"What is the thing that keeps men from applying the Golden Rule of Rotary? It is selfishness. Only the other day Roger Babson, speaking before the New Haven Rotary club, said: 'We have been hearing much of apple weeks, bread weeks, milk weeks, etc., but what I would like to see most is a week when every employe would think of the employer and the employer of the employe, the manufacturer of the retailer and the retailer of the manufacturer, the merchant of the farmer and the farmer of the merchant, and, most of all, the people of America of the starving thousands across the seas.'

"If we are to drive selfishness from our lives, we must have youth and courage, the courage of our convictions, not being afraid to stand the gaff if our hopes and aims are not met with favor by our associates. Until a Rotarian can have the courage of his convictions he hasn't learned the Rotary code of ethics.

"Let me suggest a way to gain this courage. Come from your meetings, to your home or office, and sit down, and read slowly the code of ethics, then ask yourself: 'Am I applying this seven days a week with my family, my business associates, my employes, my employers, my customers, and my fellow citizens?' If you do this you will begin to think, the code will become a part of you, and you will begin to live it.

"Rotary is not a club, a place to have good times together: it's a movement, a crusade, going on slowly, with no noise, no trumpets or bands to herald its approach. In Chicago at that meeting of representative men of Rotary from all over the world I realized as never before how much more seriously this Rotary movement was taken by the men from other countries than by the Rotarians of the United States. We must get into the game, play it with them, for this Rotary crusade must not be found wanting by an ever inquiring world.

"In closing, let me draw a picture for you, one that was drawn for me by a Rotarian. I am a man, one who has reached the middle point of life. I have lived half the time allotted me and have reached a vantage point on the highway of life. Before me stretches a pathway leading down the road of life. Ahead I see people older than me. Afar off are old people bent down with heavy burdens. There in the distrance, about to pass from view, I see a couple, my father and mother, still passing on across life's highway. I wonder what it is that has kept them going ahead, and I realize it is not fame for they had no fame nor money, they had no money. As I think of the opportunities I have had that they did not have the realization comes to me that they are steadily traveling on because of me. Now look the other way. Coming up the hill of life are younger people than I. Just coming into view on life's hill I see two children trudging along hand in hand. I recognize them as my little daughter and son. Then do I realize that in the years left to me my duty is to smooth out the rough spots in life for my children, to make this world a better one for them to live in than it was in my younger day. This I owe to my children as a father, but whatever I owe my children as a father I as a Rotarian consider it my duty to work for the other children trudging up that same long road, and here is our opportunity in Rotary, the Golden Rule, unselfish, an opportunity to have the courage of our convictions and make this world better for our having lived in it."

At the close of Governor "Don's" wonderful talk he was given a rising vote of thanks by the Rotarians assembled.

Social Part of Meeting.

The regular Rotary good time meeting which preceded the speaking began shortly after 7.45 o'clock with the singing of America. President "Bill" Park, who acted as toastmaster, then asked Rev. Roderick MacLeod of Hanover to say grace. Things then started with a bang, President Park taking a crack at several members and friends, others joining in to make it even all around. The "Manicure" quartet, composed of eight local Rotarians, sang "Say It While Dancing," following which "Bill" Park and "Joe" Worth, alias Mr. Shean and Mr. Gallagher, entertained with the famous songs of these two characters.

The Willimantic club then was called upon for a song and contributed "I Want a Girl," evidently thinking of the manicuried.

"Jim" Hammond of New London, the man with the "ever ready" tongue, then entertained with several stories and jokes, winding up his monologue with "The Revolving Rug."

The New London boys gathered about the lveries and sang "Crooning," after which "Philup Graves" Gager was asked to sing, and, to fit the occasion, also the road conditions, "Bert" sang "Jingle Bells."

"Connie" Costello of New London cracked several of his chestnuts, and complimented the Norwich club on the wonderful time, also on owning such a president as "Bill" Park.

"Val" Murphy, a former Norwich boy, now president of the Willimantic club, told of the accomplishments of the Willimantic club during the two years of its existence and asked for aid by Norwich and New London to put over Rotary in Putnam. "Jim" Sullivan, president of the New London club, also spoke and stated that New London as the grandad club would be right there in backing Willimantic in the Putnam project.

At this moment the "Wedding Bells" trio strolled in and was made to sing a song. "Eb" Learned, "Doc" Campbell and Henry LaFontaine, still in the spirit of the occasion, rendered "Just a Love Nest." Henry LaFontaine also sang "Smilin' Through," and the Norwich club sang "Rotary Forever," the club song written and composed by Henry LaFontaine.

The banquet hall was attractively decorated, bouquets of flowers being placed at each table. Favors of various kinds were received by every Rotarian and guest, the gift of "Chet" Saxton. The menu was as follows:

Oyster Cocktail.
Celery. Olives.
Saltine Crackers.
Tenderloin Steak.
French Fried Potatoes.
Buttered Rolls.
Rotary Ice Cream Special.
Macaroons. Coffee Cakes.
Coffee.
Cigars. Cigarettes.

SUSTAINS JUDGE BROWN ON PLANT EXECUTORS' FEES

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 10.—The supreme court of errors today handed down a decision sustaining the finding of Judge Allyn L. Brown in the New London county superior court that the five executors of the estate of Morton F. Plant were entitled to $425,000 for settling the estate of approximately $26,000,000. The compensation was "just, reasonable and proper," the court said.

The court also decided that the trustees of the estate of Edmund C. Converse of Greenwich had discretionary powers in distribution of the trust funds created for the benefit of the seven grandchildren of the testator. The guardian of five of the grandchildren opposed a demand by the mother of the remaining two as guardian, for payment of the trust fund to her to be expended in their interests, 6 to 5 decisions, in all, were handed down by the court.

Judge Brown awarded the executors of the Plant estate the following amounts: Francis deC. Sullivan $125,000; George L. Shearer and the United States Trust Co. of New York, $120,000 each. Mrs. Sarah Mae Hayward and Henry B. Plant $30,000 each, which reversed the Groton probate court which had awarded $256,092.25 each to Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Shearer, and the Trust Co., and $128,046.12 each to Mrs. Hayward and Henry Plant.

The appeal to the supreme court was taken by Mrs. Hayward, Henry Plant and William H. Blodgett, tax commissioner of the state of Connecticut.

SECURING NEW SHAREHOLDERS IN BUILDING LOAN ASSCN.

The workers for the new series of the Building and Loan Association held a meeting in the chamber of commerce offices to make a mid-week report.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather the past few days there exists a lively interest in this association. New shareholders, totalling about 300 new shares, were obtained. In addition to this there is a large increase in new shares being taken by old members of the association.

The fact that for the past three years, this association has paid interest on savings at the rate of 1-2 per cent., and has not paid less than 5 per cent., encourages the person wishing to save some of his earnings, regularly, to become shareholders.

The knowledge that the savings of the shareholders are managed by local men of integrity, under the direct supervision of the state bank department fasters a feeling of security. The shareholders savings are invested right here in Norwich, chiefly to enable families to buy or build their own homes. This the Building and Loan association becomes truly a cooperative bank, helping the depositor, helping those who need assistance in financing the ownership of their homes, and helping the city and town of Norwich.

Will Prepare For Ice Cutting.

Preparations for ice cutting on Ford's pond at East Great Plain are to be begun today. The ice is nine inches thick and of good quality so that it is expected a good crop can be gathered if the weather holds right. Cuttings will probably begin Friday, but a large force of men will be busy.

The man who boasts his ignorance has reached the limit.

AUTHORITY ON WATERWAYS TO SPEAK IN NORWICH

The monthly meeting of the Norwich chamber of commerce for the members and their friends which will be held in the Wauregan hotel, promises to be most successful. The meeting will consider the advantages of water transportation. This is an opportune subject to bring before the people of Norwich at this time inasmuch as an effort is being made to deepen the present channel of the Thames river from Allyn's Point to Norwich.

A greater volume of water-borne transportation will result if the channel of the river is deepened so that larger vessels can come to Norwich. A stronger competition with railroad rates which will be beneficial not only to the manufacturer and the merchant, but to every householder in Norwich will be affected. Healthy competition is always beneficial, not only as to rates but also as to service.

Secretary S. A. Thompson of the National River and Harbors Congress in Washington, D. C., has accepted the invitation to speak at this meeting. He states that, "I am very glad of this opportunity to speak to your business men and will do my best to give them some facts and figures which are worthy of their consideration."

The Troy (New York) Record makes the following comment on an address recently delivered by Mr. Thompson in that city:

"Those who attended last night's waterways meeting at the Central school were well repaid. The address of Secretary S. A. Thompson of the National Rivers and Harbors congress was worthy of an audience as large as the whole population of Troy. It was easy for all listeners to understand why he is called "Deep-water Thompson," for he made it clear that he knows all about his subject, and that he has studied it at home and abroad for practically a generation. He is familiar with every move which has been made in the United States and in Europe, and has in mind every detail as to results and prospects. Water transportation is his life work, and he is master of its intricacies.

"But it takes something more than mere knowledge to equip a man for such an address as Mr. Thompson delivered last night. With it must go capacity for imparting transformation in such a way that it will be remembered, and this capacity the secretary has developed to an unusual degree. He can recite facts and figures as fluently as a debutante can describe her first ball, and at the same time he can invest them with an interest rarely found in mere statistics. He has a fund of humor, quick appreciation of the tendencies of his hearers, and exactly the right illustration for the right spot. In consequence his really instructive and in fact invaluable fund of information is imparted in a way which never fails to make it effective, for he holds the attention and interest of all from the first word to the last. If Mr. Thompson's argument could be heard the country over, it would not be long before aroused public sentiment would demand extensive waterways development as one of the wisest economic moves the nation could make, and one without which this country can not rise to its full measure of activity and prosperity."

HEALTH DEPARTMENT REPORTS PNEUMONIA CASES MORE

Since September the number of pneumonia cases reported each week by physicians to health officers has exceeded the cases reported in 1920 or 1921 for the same period, says the state board of health. The influenza cases reported began to show a distinct increase during the second week in December. There is no sign however, that influenza is to become epidemic.

The increase in influenza and pneumonia cases serves, however, to center our attention on the fact that we should avoid over-exposure, undue exertion or other over-exertion that will tend to diminish our natural resistance (in a certain percentage of persons this is slight) to disease.

People who have colds should avoid coughing or sneezing when near other persons. When unavoidable, form the good habit of covering the mouth and nose with a handkerchief. Spitting on floors of public places should not be done. Coughing, sneezing and spitting spread disease. Lobar pneumonia is a communicable disease, and over 30 per cent. of the cases end fatally.

It is only within a few years that the germs of lobar pneumonia have been defin

WESTERLY

Representative Samuel H. Davis of Westerly introduced a bill in the house of representatives to permit the Pleasant View Improvement society to borrow the sum of $25,000 for the installation of the sidewalks on Atlantic avenue in Pleasant View. It is probable that the bill will be passed.

The Board of Trade of Westerly have recommended a city planning system in Westerly. They consider that some of the streets in Westerly should be widened, suitable parking places be made and other improvements made in the compact part of the town. They recommend that the town appropriate the sum of $2500 to be included in the town budget for making plans, maps and surveys for such public works, and that thi sappropriation be spent under the supervision of a committee chosen by the Westerly town council. The report of the committee is as follows:

"The committee appointed by the president of the Westerly Board of Trade to consider the subject of city planning has held two meetings, at which all members were present. Local problems and needs have been discussed. Charles F. Fisher, a membef of the firm of engineers now in charge of the city planning worked for the city of Providence, was present at the second meeting and gave helpful information. It is the unanimous opinion of the committee that one of the greatest obstacles to the proper growth and planning of the outlying district of the town and a cause for much future town expense, is the privilege now allowed land owners to file a plat of their land, plotted into building lots or streets as desired, without restrictions as to the width or grade of streets, regard for existing highways or considerations of adjoining property. An example of such unrestricting of filing of plats is the Central Park district in the north part of the town, where two or three out of town land companies bought land, platted it and sold it without any consultation with each other or with the town authorities.

The natural result is dead end streets, narrow rights of way, prohibitive grades and no adequate direct connection with the nearby highways. The purchasers of lots in this district, most of them innocent of the conditions, must now go without proper water service, sewers and other public improvements of the town must soon spend thousands of dollars in widening, regrading or relocating the streets to make them workable or acceptable to the town. To obviate such future conditions, the committee strongly recommends that the board or trade have prepared an act closely following, Chapter 98° of the Public Laws of Rhode Island, passed by the legislature at the city of Providence in 1913 and known as an act to regulate the dedication of private lands by the owners thereof as for streets or other ways for public travel in the city of Providence.

That such proposed act be submitted to the Westerly town council for approval and recommendation to the Westerly representatives in the legislature for its passage at the present legislative session. Such an act would provide in substance that any map, plat, plan or chart of private land situated in Westerly showing thereon any one or more streets, or roads is opened to public travel should not be accepted for record or filing with the town clerk until first approved by the town council. In Providence the approving body is the board of alderman. The committee is informed by the Providence officials that the act has worked admirably there with much benefit to the city, and without any objection on the part of landowners. The committee has also considered the need of widening certain streets in the compact part of the town, of locating new streets providing automobile parking spaces and the making of other public improvements. The committee recommends that the board of trade ask the town council to include in its budget a recommendation to the financial town meeting to be held in February, an appropriation of $2500 to be available for the making of plans, maps and surveys for such public work, said appropriation to be expended under the advice and control of the committee of not less than five and not more than nine members who shall be appointed by the town council.

Respectfully submitted,

Arthur L. Perry, Clifford W. Campbell, Thomas McKenzie, Charles J. Butler, Harvey C. Perry, Everett E. Whipple, George B. Utter, Wells R. Fowler.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Rheuma—The One Safe and Quick-Acting Remedy for Rheumatism, Gout and Sciatica. Money Back If It Doesn't Satisfy.

Thousands of sufferers have freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatism; rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; thrown away canes and crutches, and from helpless beings became able to work and be of use to themselves and their families.

They took Rheuma; the modern enemy of rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, arthritis, gout and chronic neuralgia.

Don't be skeptical about Rheuma. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous uric acid is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are going to be helped in less than a week.

Don't think because Rheuma is not expensive that it won't bring you back to health. There is no guess work about it. That's why Lee & Osgood Co. and good druggists everywhere sell it with guarantee of money back if it does not give quick and blessed relief almost at once.

JEWETT CITY

A display of the splendid architecture of another age, to be seen in the artistic front door-way of the one time "Button tavern" in Jewett City, is bespeaking for itself wide spread notice and admiration. The last Sunday in the year 1922, President Benjamin T. Marshall of the Connecticut college in New London, occupied the pulpit at the Second Congregational church in Jewett City. During the course of his remarks, and as a coincident illustration, the speaker took occasion to call attention to "the beautiful doorway which Jewett City possessed." The president pointed out its antique detail to some extent, and gave it as his belief, that no equal of its architectural beauty could be found in New England. David Hale Fanning of Worcester, a native of Jewett City, being impressed with its wonderful design, had photographs taken, a number of which he gave to G. A. Haskell, the then owner of the property.

John Prior of Moosup, is an ardent admirer, and a competent judge of unusual beauty as displayed in architecture. Mr. Prior has travelled much and has been to see old carving in places far removed from the local site of the "Button tavern," he took photographs of this doorway, and, is free to say that nowhere has he come upon its peer. The Button tavern was built in the early '30's, on the site which it now occupies, by Colonel Samuel Button, a carpenter and builder by trade. The construction was begun and completed with only the idea of a tavern, and if records and reminiscences passed on by those who lived at that time are authentic, then, it served its purpose well. It does not appear where Col. Button met with the architectural design of its front approach, nor do records prove that it was because he was possessed of an artistic turn of mind, which must always demand such display in his buildings.

Col. Button built the Welcome Browning home, now owned by Charles Armstrong, a fine type of the commodious farm house of the time, also the Bethel church, in them no hint is noted of any thing as fine as is to be seen in the Button tavern.

This doorway with its accompanying window on the second story, and the large bow above that, displays a knowledge by the draftsman, of all the five orders of architecture. The columns below favor the Doric, while those above, give suggestions originating in both the Ionic and the simpler Tuscan, yet not being distinctly composite.

Joseph Brown, well remembered by Jewett City people, was the master hand that executed the delicate carvings, yet whence came his designs, no one can say.

Built in 1825 the Button tavern passed from the ownership of its builder to the Ashland Cotton Co., and from them to G. A. Haskell, he having recently sold to Edward Blanchard. The one time famous hostelry, when owned by the Ashland company, did service for more than fifty years as "the company boarding house." Less than five years ago, a Boston man offered $1,000 for the doorway and its surmounting windows.

12,357,376 AUTOS AND MOTOR TRUCKS IN UNITED STATES

New York, Jan. 10—The year 1922 ended with 12,357,376 automobiles and motor trucks plying the roads of the United States—a gain of 1,851,716 or 17.6 per cent. over registration figures for 1921—said a report made public tonight by automotive industries. The figures mean a car of some sort for every 8.7 persons in the country.

New York was the first tate to pass the 1,000,000 mark, it leads with 1,000,733 and also has the largest numerical gain over last year with 188,701. The percentage gain over 1921 was largest in the District of Columbia and Washington, the increases being 38.4 per cent. and 31.1 per cent. respectively. Fees collected by the various states from motor taxes totaled more than $150,000,000 exceeding the 1921 figure by some $30,000,000.

Every state had more cars and trucks in use on December 31, 1922 than on the same date in 1921.

EMPLOYMENT SITUATION CONTINUES TO IMPROVE

Washington, Jan. 10—Continued improvement in the employment situation throughout the country was indicated by the department of labor's report on conditions during December, made public today. In practically all states the situation in virtually every occupation was reported improved.

New England reported overtime employment in the textile industries, the lumber industry as quiet, and conditions in the mechanical industries better than fair.

QUESTIONED WITNESSES ABOUT PETTIT MURDER

Mineola, N. Y., Jan. 10—Assistant District Attorney Edwards today questioned two witnesses alleged to have overheard threats voiced against James W. Pettit, skin proprietor of the Massapequa Inn, Massapequa, by Mrs. Billie Wells, the inn housekeeper now held on a charge of murder.

Detectives sought two men formerly employed at the inn, who were reported to have told of having seen Mrs. Wells fire at Pettit on one occasion before last Sunday, when he was slain by a charge from a shotgun.

Mrs. Wells stoutly maintains her innocence, declaring she fled the inn after Pettit had beaten her, and that he then committed suicide.

IS DE VALERA COMING TO THE UNITED STATES?

Dublin, Jan. 10—Inquiries here today failed to elicit any confirmation of the report from Boston that Eamon de Valera would be in the United States shortly, if not already there. The general belief among those who are in a position to know, is that he is neither in the United States nor on the way to that country.

NO PEACE PROPOSALS FROM IRISH IRREGULARS

Dublin, Jan. 10—Michael Cosgrave, president of the Dail Eireann, addressing that body today said the Free State government had not received the peace proposals recently made public in the newspapers and that it did not intend to take any steps regarding them.

NO CONCRETE PROPOSALS FOR WAR-DEBT REFUNDING

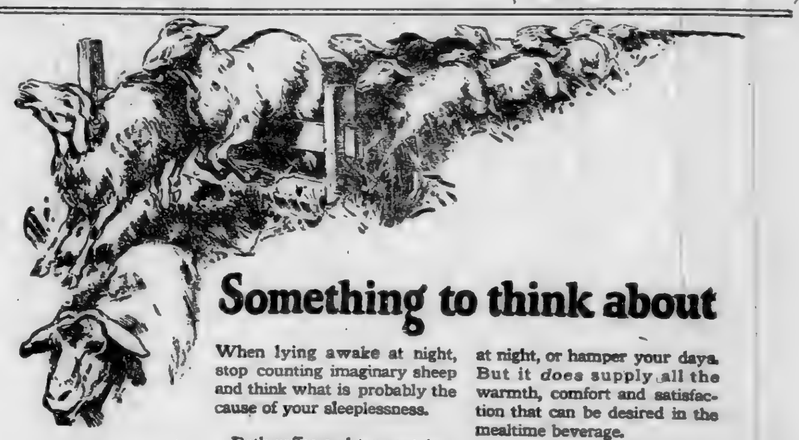
Washington, Jan. 10.—Great Britain's financial mission laid its cards on the table today before the American debt commission at an executive session at the treasury. Details were withheld, but there were renewed expressions of hope that out of the negotiations would come at least a tentative agreement for the refunding of the British debt of more than four billions of dollars, perhaps within a week.

While the official spokesman for the negotiations reiterated that there had been no concrete proposals as a basis of settlement, it was apparent that the American commission had before it information upon which to base the conclusion that the London government could not consent to terms within the limitations laid down by congress as to the time of payment and the rate of interest to be charged.

Before the commissions assembled for their second formal session, Senator Smoot, a member of the American delegation, informed the senate finance committee at an executive session that congress would be asked to broaden the powers of the American commission in dealing not only with the British debt but with those of the other allied countries. He did not suggest just what additional authority would be asked and it was said later that the commission itself had not yet determined that question. There was a suggestion in some quarters, however, that congress might be requested to amend the existing law so as to authorize the commission to make the best possible terms with each debtor nation subject to final approval by congress.

Meantime the American and British commissions will undertake to reach an agreement, irrespective of the limitations in the existing statute. Should they be successful, and President Harding approve the plan of settlement, the next step would be to request ratification by the house and senate. It would then be expected that a move would be made to amend the law so that the commission might follow the same course in dealing with the other debtor countries.

The commissions will hold another session tomorrow.



Something to think about

When lying awake at night, stop counting imaginary sheep and think what is probably the cause of your sleeplessness.

Both coffee and tea contain a drug element that irritates a sensitive nervous system, often causing restless nights and drowsy, irritable days.

A delicious, hot cup of Postum contains nothing that can deprive you of restful sleep at night, or hamper your days. But it does supply all the warmth, comfort and satisfaction that can be desired in the mealtime beverage.

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared; made by boiling fully 20 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS IN TRIAL FOR THE HERRIN RIOTS

Marion, Ill., Jan. 10.—(By the A. P.)—The defense at the Herrin riots trial directed all of its efforts today toward an attempt to prove that Otis Clark, alleged leader of the mob and one of the five defendants, pleaded in vain to save the lives of the twenty non-union workers slain June 22.

"If this is god to be murder, I'll quit right now," eight eye witnesses testified they heard Clark declare to a crowd of men who escorted 48 captives from the mine where the trouble started to Crenshaw crossing, three quarters of a mile from the pit the morning of the tragedy.

"The miners do not approve of murder and if these men are killed it will be the worst thing that ever happened to the United Mine Workers and to Williamson County. John Miller, secretary of the miners' local at Royalton, testified that Clark told the crowd after several persons had cried, "Hang them," and "kill them."

The eight eye witnesses and another, Harry Wilson, a Johnson City miner, testified it would have been impossible for Clark to have taken any part in the slayings which took place between 6.40 and 9.15 a. m.

The defense also recalled three of the states witnesses for further cross examination in an effort to impeach testimony they had previously given. Two of these witnesses, William Goodman and George Nelson, are farmers. Nelson previously testified that they saw Clark and another man, lead C. . McDowell, superintendent of the mine, away from the crowd when it was a mile past Crenshaw's crossing and later found McDowell's body. K. Lawrence Beare, a Herrin truck driver, the third state's witness recalled, had testified that he saw Joe Carnaghi, a defendant for whom an effort was made yesterday to prove an alibi, carrying a gun among a crowd that escorted six prisoners through Herrin the same morning.

"Did you not tell Fred Martin in the presence of Louis Parking that when the mob was at Crenshaw's crossing you passed on a street car and did not stop?" Goodman was asked.

"I did not say that," he replied.

"Did you not tell Tom Cox that it was a pretty rough looking crowd and that you did not know a single one of them, and was glad of it?"

"I do not remember saying anything like that."

The witness emphatically denied that he had testified for the state in the hope of getting a $1,000 reward upon the conviction of any of the defendants.

Goodman, R. O. Greer, former mayor of Herrin, and Bernard Jones, one of the survivors of the riots, previously testified for the state that they had seen Otis Clark with a gun at Crenshaw crossing and had heard him make a speech in which he said:

"We ought to kill them all and wipe out the breed. I'll kill them myself."

Nelson, William Cairns, a survivor, and Bernard Jones, another survivor, testified that Clark was one of the two men who led McDowell away toward the spot where the mine superintendent's body was later found.

Directly contradicting the testimony, the eight defense witnesses today declared that an unidentified man had made the statement that "we ought to wipe out the breed and kill them all," which had been attributed to Clark. Among these witnesses was J. H. Hicks, a former union miner who said he had held every local office from secretary to president but that he was now selling powder.

On cross examination several of the witnesses said they had come from other counties to the mine on hearing of the trouble.

New Haven.—The 18th annual meeting of New Haven council, Boy Scouts of America, was held in the Hotel Duncan as a part of a well attended dinner meeting.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

FLURRY IN STOCK MARKET.

New York, Jan. 10.—President Harding's order for the withdrawal of American troops from Germany caused a flurry of speculative selling which carried a number of issues down 1 to 2 points in today's stock market. But these offerings were well absorbed and the market eventually turned upward under the stimulus of higher foreign exchanges. Lower call money rates and aggressive buying of special stocks.

While the unsettled foreign situation continues to exert a restraining effect on the volume of business, large traders, taking their cue from the strength and steadiness of foreign exchanges, seem inclined to take a hopeful view of the European conditions. Demand sterling was quoted today at $4.66, an advance of more than 1 cent over yesterday's ruling rate, while French francs moved up nearly 20 points to 6.91 cents. The Italian lira got back to the 5 cent mark and Belgian francs advanced 32 points to 6.35. Even the German mark rallied to 86-100ths of a cent a hundred from its extreme low of 82-100th of a cent.

Baldwin and Studebaker, each of which reacted sharply on selling pressure, rallied briskly and closed the day at net gains of 1 and 5-8 of a point, respectively. Buying of Baldwin was influenced by the receipt of an order for 100 locomotives from the Pennsylvania railroad. U. S. Steel common and most of the independent issues closed at slight fractional gains, despite a decrease of 94,539 tons in unfilled orders for December. Weekly trade reviews continue optimistic, stressing steadily increasing production and a hardening price tendency.

California Petroleum was one of the day's features, successfully resisting the early selling pressure by climbing to 76 5-8, the highest price in its ten year history. It closed at 76, a net gain of 3 3-8 points. Buying on the part of new interests is held responsible for the recent strength of this stock. Some good gains also were recorded among other oils, Associated jumping 6 3-8 points and Pan American B, Pacific, Houston, Royal Dutch and Cosden rising 1 to 3 1-2 points, the last named touching 55 1-2. Another new high on the present bull movement. General Asphalt common and preferred were weak.

Specialties took a prominent part in the late advance, Postum Cereal advancing 7 3-8 points on the day, Beechnut moving up 5 3-4 on speculative expectations of a further increase in dividends and Nash Motors rising 6 points on the announcement that dividends at the rate of $10 had been declared on the new stock. Among the other conspicuous strong spots were All American Cables, U. S. Realty, Owens Bottle and Tidewater Oil, all up 3 to 4 points.

Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Delaware & Hudson and General Electric were among the active issues to show acute weakness, the losses being about 2 points each. Lake Erie and Western preferred broke nearly 7 points on a small turnover.

Call money opened at 4 3-4 per cent., eased off to 4 1-2 within an hour and thence to 4, where it closed. Time money was quoted at 4 1-2 per cent. bid and 4 3-4 per cent. asked with loans arranged at both rates. Comercial paper rates continued easy, the bulk of the business being done on a 4 1-2 per cent. basis.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Jan. 10.—Further recovery of French bonds and renewed weakness of the St. Paul railroad liens were the outstanding developments in today's irregular bond dealings. Strength of the foreign exchanges undoubtedly stimulated the buying of European securities, United Kingdom of Great Britain 5 1-2's duplicating their high record of the established last December and gains of 1 to 1 1-4 points being registered by French 7 1-2's and 8's, Seine 7's, Lyons 6's, Holland-American 6's, Cuba government 5's of 1949 and Cuba railroad 5's. Serbian 8's dropped 2 points to a new low at 65 1-2.

There was no apparent reason for the further decline of St. Paul liens although weakness of the general list was ascribed in some quarters to the competition provided by the flood of new securities that have been put on the market since the first of the year. St. Paul refunding 4 1-2's suffered an extreme decline of 2 5-8 points while the 4's of 1925, the debenture 4's and the convertible 4 1-2's lost 1 to 1 1-4. Other weak spots in the railroad list were Frisco 5's, Norfolk & Western 4's, Atlantic Coast Line 4's and Seaboard Air Line stamped 4s. International & Great Northern adjustment 6's dropped 1 5-8 but made up their loss while Seaboard Consolidated 6's made up about half of an extreme loss of 2 points. The few bright spots were New York, Westchester & Boston 4 1-2's, Toledo, St. Louis & Western 4's, Rio Grande refunding 5's and Erie convertible 4's, upp up 1 to 1 1-2 points.

Merger talk continues to have a favorable effect on Chile Copper 7's, which added another point today, being followed into higher ground by Cerro De Pasco, Mis, Steel & Tube 7's, Pan American 7's, International Cement 5's, Detroit Edison 5's of 1933 and some of the local tractions. Cuba Cane convertible 7's dropped 1 3-4 and American Writing Paper 6's, 1.

U. S. Government First 4 1-4 per cent. bonds gained 2 cents on $100 and the new 4 1-4's were unchanged. The other active issues showing losses of 2 to 6 cents.

Total sales (par value) were $13,093,000.

Public offering will be made tomorrow of a $35,000,000 issue of Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania 25 year 5 per cent. first and refunding mortgage bonds, callable at par and interest after July 1, 1943. The price is 98 1-2 to yield slightly more than 5.10 per cent.

Banking and financial problems involved in the desire of the Anaconda Copper company to refund its outstanding mortgages, not all of which are callable, in order to provide for a large bond issue, estimated as high as $180,000,000 to finance the purchase of the Guggenheim interests in Chile at $35 a share is holding up the proposed merger of those companies. The financial community expects that the new bonds will be offered under par with a 6 per cent. coupon.

There were several new offerings today, the largest of which was the $22,000,000 issue of first mortgage 30 year 5 per cent. gold bonds of the Spring Valley Water Company of San Francisco, which were put out to yield 5.15 per cent. The next largest was a $10,053,000 issue of 5 per cent. serial gold bonds of the city of Toronto, Canada all prices to yield 5.20 to 5.10 per cent. according to maturity.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Buying on the part of traders who had been disappointed in looking for a decided setback in prices turned the wheat market briskly upward today at the last. Closing quotations were firm, 3-4 cent to 1 3-8 cents net higher with May 1.19 5-8 to 1.19 3-4 and July 1.12 to 1.12 1-8. Corn gained 7-8 cent to 1 1-4 cents and oats 5

MARINELLI ON STAND IN OWN DEFENSE IN GROTON ARSON CASE

Domenico Marinelli of Groton, on trial on the charge of arson, went on the stand in his own defense in the superior court here late Wednesday afternoon before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury. Marinelli was running a grocery store at 218 Thames street, Groton, in which a fire broke out on the night of Dec. 1.

Marinelli had not concluded his direct testimony when court adjourned at 5 o'clock and he will go on the stand again this (Thursday) morning, when his testimony will reach what he did on the night of the fire. What was brought out by his testimony so far concerned his life since coming from Italy to America, in the course of which it was disclosed that he is a World war veteran, having seen service with the 76th division in France.

State Concludes Its Testimony.

When court opened Wednesday morning, Attorney Arthur M. Brown, counsel for Marinelli, concluded his cross-examination of State Policeman Frederick V. Brandt.

State Policeman William E. Jarmon was put on the stand by State Attorney Hadlai A. Hull. He testified to the warning given Marinelli when he was questioned in the state attorney's office immediately after his arrest last September.

Capt. George O. Vincent of the Groton police force said Marinelli told him he had $2,000 insurance on his store and Abraham Bruckner of Norwich gave testimony of valuations on the stock in the store. William T. O'Brien, a Groton fireman, was the final witness for the state, after which Major Hull rested his case.

Testimony For Defense.

Attorneys Arthur M. Brown and Percy Hollandersky began the case for Marinelli by putting on the stand Mary and Daniel McArtnur, who said they came to Marinelli's store at 7 o'clock on the night of the fire to make some purchases, stayed about ten minutes, and that Marinelli and Nick De Noyer were there when they left.

Ralph M. Weeks said he was at the store, leaving about 7:20, and that Marinelli and De Noyer were there when he left.

Edward M. Beebe, who was formerly in the grocery business, testified to values he had placed upon the articles shown by the inventory of the Marinelli store. According to his valuations, the inventory totalled $2,190.21.

Wife of Accused Man Testifies.

Mrs. Anina Mastarillo, wife of the accused man, was the next witness. Her testimony was given through an interpreter, Anthony Marseilles, of New London. She has been in this country nine months and was married to Marinelli last September in New York. Later they were married in the church at Groton. About 7 o'clock on the night of the fire she went to her husband's store. Her husband came home about 8 o'clock. She was not in the store between 7 o'clock and the time he closed the store. Her husband got home at 20 minutes before eight and had supper with her and Marinelli's father and mother. After washing the dishes they all went to bed about 11 o'clock. The first she knew of the fire was when the young man upstairs waked them up, saying, "Domenico wake up the store is on fire." Her husband put on his shoes and a coat on Mrs. Marinelli said, which was about 11 o'clock. Her husband had not left the house at any time between 7:40 and the time when they were waked up by the report of the fire.

Mrs. Carina Tagone, mother of the accused man, was the next witness. She said she lives with him in Groton and had the same home for supper at 7:40 on the night of the fire. She said she was awakened when the boy from upstairs knocked on her door about the time the fire started. She said Marinelli was in the house all the time after supper until they got the alarm about the fire.

Joseph Saserio, 12, of Groton, who lives upstairs over the Marinelli tenement, testified that on the night of the fire he was the one who wakened the Marinelli family after his father had awakened him and he heard two men running by and asking where Marinelli lived. He ran to the fire with Marinelli.

Joseph Cancy of Groton testified he followed the engine on the night of the fire, and after staying there about five minutes went away and were going past Marinelli's house when they saw the Saserio boy with his head out of the window. They asked him where Dominick lived and the boy told them "downstairs." The witness said Dominick came out in his raincoat and went to the fire. Cancy concluded his testimony by telling what he did around the fire.

Marinelli, the accused man was put on the stand by his attorneys and testified under questions from Attorney Arthur M. Brown.

He testified that his lease on the store has about two years to run. He is 27 years old, born in Italy and came to this country in 1912, his sister having preceded him. He located in Hartford with his sister, going to work with a pick and shovel for two years with the telephone company. Then he sent money in 1914 to bring a brother to this country. That year Marinelli went to Boston and had a store to sell ice and coal and wood. He left in 1917, going to Groton, where he worked for a New London contractor, and then for three or four weeks for the Ship and Engine Co. until he was drafted into the army. He was at Camp Devens for 9 months and was then in France for 5 months.

In 1918 he came back from France and was discharged from the army. Marinelli produced his honorable discharge paper, showing that he had been a private in the headquarters troop of the 76th division, U. S. A., with a good record.

Attorney Brown laid the discharge paper in as an exhibit.

After coming out of the army Marinelli said he worked about 4 months with the Groton Iron Works and then started the grocery and bakery store at 218 Thames street, three years ago. Frank Rotondo was in business with him at first, but only stayed 5 or 6 months. Both had keys to the store, but Frank didn't give his up when he left because he said he had lost it.

Marinelli has run the business since along. After he opened his Groton business he sent money for another sister to come over from Italy and two years ago sent the money for his parents and small brother.

He married his wife, he said, Sept. 1, 1922, as soon as she got off the ship. He had sent the money for her and they were married in New York, coming at once to Groton, where they were married in church about a month later.

Marinelli told of the firms from which he bought his goods, stating that he always paid his bills by cash, not checks, paying by the week, two weeks or 30 days.

He said he never let any of his bills become past due. He paid the salesmen who came to the store. On Dec. 1, 1922, he said he thought he owed from $300 to $350 and none of it was past due.

PLOT THAT FAILED WAS TOPIC OF BIBLE CLASS

The largest number thus far this season attended the Y. M. C. A. Bible class Wednesday evening at 6:15 o'clock. After a substantial supper, each man paying his share the study was taken up. The scripture used was Acts 23rd chapter first to twenty-fourth verses.

The topic was "The Plot That Failed, the experience of St. Paul when his enemies, pledged themselves to neither eat or drink till they had killed Paul. The following points were developed in the study:- Paul was a man of unusual courage, because he had absolute confidence in his God, and knew that He would stand by him no matter what the crisis was. He defied his enemies when he knew he was in the right, and if he did or said things that he ought not to have done or said, he was big enough to admit it and it takes a big man to admit his mistakes. When Paul announced that he was a Pharisee, he caused trouble between the Pharisees and Sadusees, for his enemies included both of these. When they would have torn Paul in pieces, the chief captain who was evidently a fair minded man assisted Paul to a place of safety. Over forty men made a solemn vow that they would neither eat nor drink until they had killed the Apostle. Paul's nephew heard the plot and as soon as possible told his uncle who was under charge of a Centurian that his life was in great danger, and Paul has so impressed the Centurian that he willingly accompanied Paul's nephew to the chief captain, to whom the young man told the plot on Paul's life. The young man did this favor for Paul because he loved him, and the suggestion was made that Satan plots continually for the downfall of young men, and if we as Christians love men as we should, we will certainly warn them of their danger. Paul's nephew was not a prominent young man; we do not hear of him again; we do not have to be prominent in order to be useful. It is simply a matter of being willing to be used for the good of others and if we have this spirit, God will use us. The chief captain listened to the young man's story, and at once gave orders that thwarted the plot to kill Paul. God sees to it that his faithful servants are looked after, and even when he permits them to suffer, he bestows abundant grace.

AMERICAN PARTY SYSTEM NEEDS LIVE PRINCIPLES

The American party system is in grave peril unless the parties again stand for live principles. There is some hope, however, in the direct primary, which during the past 26 years has shown itself to be very much less than a panacea but very much more than a fad, and points in the right direction. This assertion was made Wednesday by Prof. Henry W. Lawrence, Jr., professor of history and political science at Connecticut College, New London, speaking before the School of Citizenship held by the Connecticut League of Women Voters in cooperation with the State Normal school in Willimantic.

"Party systems are older than democracy", said Prof. Lawrence. "They have existed under autocracies and oligarchies, but they function most advantageously in representative democracies. Their proper aims are two: (1) to promote principles; and (2) to win elections. There is grave doubt as to whether present day political parties in the United States really seek both these objects. Like democracy itself, they have not yet failed utterly; like democracy they must mend their ways or be replaced. Not only existing political parties, but even party government as such, is today being eyed with growing suspicion. Nobody knows how we could got along without parties but an increasing number seem ready to risk the experiment unless some other method is devised for improving on 'normalcy'.

"The two old parties have encamped opposite each other so long that they have forgotten what they are supposed to be fighting about. Before the Civil War the Republican party was one of idealism, even of dangerous radicalism; but for 35 years thereafter it lived on the glory of a dead issue, meanwhile practicing conservatism and corruption. The Democratic party, almost killed by the shame of its connection with the same dead issues, was kept alive by the crimes of its rival. Negro rule during the reconstruction period created the 'solid south'; Republican grafting, from Grant to Blaine, made Cleveland president in 1884.

"With Cleveland began the Democratic advocacy of a revenue tariff, against the Republican protective principle; but during the next generation the edge of this issue was blunted by the acceptance, in practice, by the Democrats of moderate protection. In the last years of the 19th century the uprising of the people against plutocracy still further blurred the lines that are supposed to separate Republicans from Democrats. The Democratic party, stampeded by Bryan, ushered in somewhat wildly the Progressivism that Roosevelt soon after made famous; and a Cleveland Democrat came to look very much like a Taft Republican.

"Moreover, the old parties took turns in capitalizing the Progressive sentiment; the Democrats with Bryan again in 1896 and again in 1900, but Roosevelt began to steal their thunder in 1901, and by 1904 he had driven them to nominate against him the conservative Parker; in 1908 the situation was largely reversed with Taft against Bryan; in 1912 most of the Republicans followed Roosevelt again into the Progressive field, but finding that position already occupied by the Democrats they swung back to the more Conservative position during the next two campaigns.

"And now both parties are wondering where they will stand in 1924, certainly the times will both be trying to win the election, but just how or at all they will differ in principles the record does not show us. The late Lord Bryce said, truly enough that the two great parties in the United States have been likened to two bottles containing different labels, but much of the U party government. [illegible] our country these two bottles must be filled or repaired by each [illegible]

"The good [illegible] into the combat, parties of the new or not be democratic. The soul of the American party system will be saved if and when the people are aggrieved hoodlumism and defeated electorate is led back to the job of party management. Nobody knows how, or even whether, this can be done, but experiments attempting it are worthy of unprejudiced consideration. The most promising of these today is the direct primary which during the past 25 years has shown itself to be very much less than a panacea but very much more than a fad. It is in essence the old-fashioned party caucus, plus an registration by districts, and the new powers, taken from the conventions. It represents the slogan 'Back to the People' applied to nomination.

"It arose as a possible cure for the scandalous misrepresentation of the voters' wishes by the old nominating machinery. The so-called good citizens had stayed away from the caucuses, the so-called bad citizens had therefore controlled the nominations. They had chosen unworthy candidates who were willing to accept office, instead of worthy ones who were not; and thus they did their large bit toward promoting the public illfare and bringing party government into disrepute. Because of these evils and because of the perversion of the convention system, the direct primary was devised, by which it was hoped that good citizens might be induced to take part in the nomination of candidates and that the party might be controlled by the people rather than by the bosses.

"Thus far these hopes have been rather largely disappointed. As one friendly writer puts it: 'Some bosses are wondering why they favored the direct primary law; some reformers are wondering why they favored it.' Dissatisfaction with its working is all but universal, and a multitude of enactments for its improvement are being written into the laws of many of the 40 odd states which are trying it; but none has seen fit to discard it altogether. It has found ardent champions in men such as LaFollette, Roosevelt, Hughes, Bryan and Wilson. The bosses and party machines are uniformly opposed to it, though not always actively so, lest they offend the plainer people. These latter seem to believe that eventually this device for democratising the parties will be amended into more workable form, much as the commission plan for cities has at last evolved into the more useful council-manager form. Meanwhile the political scientists are postponing final judgment until they have accumulated more well authenticated facts as to just how the direct primary has worked.

"Can the American party system be saved by a political device so faulty as this? Certainly not by that alone. Yet it points in the most hopeful direction. It merits our unprejudiced consideration.

Dudley J. Lewis of Springfield, who arrived in New York, Dec. 30, from Europe where for the past four months he had been touring Russia, Germany, Belgium and France, was a dinner guest recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron H. Evans of Washington street. Mr. Lewis was en route to Worcester, before going to his home, after spending five years abroad. For some time he was engaged in Near East Relief work, acting as director general in the Caucasus district. His successor is Dr. John H. Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron H. Evans, and it was at the request of Dr. Evans that Mr. Lewis looked up the doctor's parents and passed several hours in interesting conversation concerning the work of the Near East.

IN JAIL WITHOUT BAIL ON CHARGE OF MURDER

John Charles Wilbur, 63, the Salem woodchopper, who last Saturday night shot and killed Frank Early of East Haddam at Wilbur's shack in Salem, pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder at a justice hearing in Salem Wednesday morning and was bound over without bail to the May term of the criminal superior court. He will be confined in the Norwich jail until then.

Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton, accompanied by Coroner J. J. Desmond, took Wilbur from the Norwich jail for the hearing at which V. P. A. Quinn was justice of the peace. Wilbur was presented on the complaint of Grand Juror Ernest L. Spencer of Salem and testimony was given by Coroner Desmond of the conditions found after the murder and of statements made to him by Wilbur as to the shooting.

John H. Barnes, counsel for Wilbur, entered a demurrer, which was overruled, and Wilbur was bound over and committed to the county jail on a mittimus signed by the justice of the peace on the grand juror's complaint.

Coroner Desmond has rendered his finding that Wilbur is criminally liable for the death of Early.

When Wilbur is brought in for the May term a grand jury will be summoned before whom he will appear, and he will be tried on the first degree murder charge if the grand jury finds a true bill against him.

CITY PIGEONS.

A whirr of wings, a rush of air;
I look, and in my window there
A pigeon graceful, unafraid,
Reviews his comrades on parade.
From yonder spire to yonder wire
Came gentle dame and lordly sire
To contemplate their forage-flights
From lofty, barren city heights
To streets and alleys far below,
Where seeds of pigeon-comfort grow.
Crumbs fallen from an urchin's hand
Are manna in a desert-land;
Grains tumbled from a passing cart
Bring flutterings and joy of heart.
A pigeon's day may either be
Of plenty or adversity.

I wonder just what pigeons think,
As perched on wire or cornice [illegible]
They scan the swarming streets below
Where God's creatures go and go.
If there [illegible] they must include
Casual notice of gentleness.
For pigeons [illegible] and chance—
They're in the weather all the time.
No law requires [illegible] village;
Doves only [illegible] their journeyings.
A hue is [illegible] a perch
As monument or lofty church.
They coo a [illegible] cottage door,
Then [illegible] sweet [illegible] roar
And [illegible] their [illegible] night.
I wonder where they go at night.

THE WHITE FLAG.

I sent my love two roses—one
As white as driven snow,
And one a blushing royal red,
A flaming Jacqueminot.

I meant to touch and test my fate;
That night I should divine,
The moment I should see my love,
If her true heart were mine.

For if she holds me dear, I said,
She'll wear my blushing rose;
If not, she'll wear my cold Lamarque
As white as winter's snows.

My heart sank when I met her, sure
I had been overbold,
For on her breast my pale rose lay
In virgin whiteness cold.

Yet with low words she greeted me,
With smiles divinely tender;
Upon her cheek the red rose dawned—
The white rose meant surrender.

FORCIBLE REPARATIONS COLLECTION IS APPROVED BY FRENCH PARLIAMENT

Premier Poincare Has Been Accorded an Overwhelming Vote of Confidence—Disposition in France Seems to be to Show Germany Who Won the War—French and Belgian Troops Are Established at Essen—French Soldiers Have Been Ordered to Remain in Barracks and to Avoid the Streets—As a Protest Against French Occupation of the Ruhr a National Strike of One Hour by All Workers in Germany Has Been Called for Monday.

Paris, Jan. 11.—(By the A. P.)—France is in the Ruhr tonight, and the government and people are ready to "talk to the Germans in Essen."

Premier Poincare won another of his big majorities in a nearly six to one vote of confidence in the chamber of deputies today, and such enthusiastic receptions in both houses were seen before only when the war began and ended.

Fifty months ago today "peace" began with the armistice, and again France is determined to show Germany who won the war. The German ambassador has once more left Paris, as he did a year ago when the French took the Ruhr ports, where they still remain, but this time the ambassador has gone only as an implied protest.

The French, in fact, today began their conversations with the Germans in Essen, when the engineers of the three occupying powers and their protecting military staff met the German industrial representatives to agree on just how allied control could best be exercised.

There is no concealment by the government, the parliament or the public, that France's separate action is a serious thing, but high confidence is expressed in the French method being right.

M. Poincare has again warned the country through the chamber that it must not expect an immediate stream of gold. The premier said it might take several months to get the Ruhr control working properly, for German resistance, passive or otherwise, must be overcome. But he gave his experts' estimate of what this action will yield as a billion gold marks a year, and intimated that if he did not get anything, France would not be any worse off than now.

ONE HOUR NATIONAL STRIKE NEXT MONDAY IN GERMANY

Berlin, Jan. 11.—(By the A. P.)—A national strike of one hour, in which all workers, including those in the government services, will take part has been called for Monday as a protest against the occupation of the Ruhr.

FRANCE'S SEPARATE ACTION APPROVED BY PARLIAMENT

Paris, Jan. 11.—(By the A. P.)—France's separate action in the Ruhr was approved today by parliament, the members of the chamber and senate cheering for several minutes Premier Poincare's declaration. The chamber voted confidence in the government 478 to 88, on the question of the postponement of a group of interpellations on the Ruhr policy.

In his statement before the chamber, explaining the reasons for the action which France had been obliged to take against Germany, M. Poincare declared: "We are now going to get coal for ourselves from Germany at the pithead."

The response of the deputies was such as to leave no doubt that France is strongly behind the premier unless parliament vastly misinterprets public opinion.

Today's session of the chamber rivalled in enthusiasm the famous demonstration on August 4, 1914, when a "sacred union" of parties was proclaimed, and the session after the armistice was signed, when Clemenceau announced the final victory of the allies.

The "sacred union," however, no longer prevails; a small, but aggressive minority, composed mostly of communists with a few extreme socialists interrupted M. Poincare with bitter remarks, provoking a tumultuous protest from the balance of the chamber. Deputy Leon Blum, socialist, sounded the note of opposition when he cried to the premier: "You are following in the Rhuhr policy political and economic extension." The rest of his remarks were lost in a storm of outcries from the benches occupied by the royalists, nationalists and moderates.

The torn and dispersed socialist party made a weak effort to support their spokesman, but the effort was lost in a confused conflict among themselves.

The substance of Premier Poincare's hour and a half speech was that France had submitted to successive amputations of her rights against Germany, had used the patience any nation could be expected to use, and finally, when confronted with the British plan, which he held would practically withdraw from France all means of enforcing execution of the treaty of Versailles, could hold off no longer.

M. Poincare made it clear that France would go as far as necessary to force serious efforts on the part of Germany to pay her reparations. It had been said that the default declared against Germany by the reparations commission on lumber deliveries was an insignificant matter on which to take such a grave decision, but he added, some people seem to forget that many of the residents of the devastated regions were waiting for that lumber to build their homes, which the Germans burned.

"We French," he cried, "cannot forget that. That is the essence of the question. Our presence in the Ruhr is not alone a guarantee of payment of our due; it is also a guarantee of peace, because there can be no peace in Europe without an equitable settlement of the wrongs, evidence of which is still grievously apparent in northern France, in spite of the fact that we have already advanced fifty billion francs for reconstruction, on account of Germany."

FRENCH AND BELGIAN TROOPS ARE ESTABLISHED IN ESSEN

Essen, Jan. 1.—(By the A. P.)—General Rampon, commanding the cavalry in the French Ruhr expedition, made official entry into Essen this afternoon, escorted by a squadron of cavalry, six armored cars and a detachment of cyclists. The French commander was driven directly to the city hall, where he was received by Dr. Hans Luther, the burgo master.

General Rampon informed Dr. Luther that it was his desire that the local authorities should facilitate to the utmost the work of the economic mission that French were installing in Essen to control the work in the Ruhr.

Upon being assured that the mission would have the sincere cooperation of the municipal authorities, the French commander announced the withdrawal of most of his troops. He said he was leaving the smallest number possible in the city to main tain order, as the French were unwilling that Essen should be levied upon to support a military occupation.

The only points in the city militarily occupied tonight were the postoffice and telegraph building, the railroad station, the offices of the coal syndicate and the offices of the general management of the railroads.

The French soldiers received orders to main in barracks or to avoid the streets.

A committee of the most prominent industrialists of Essen tomorrow will meet with M. Coste, French inspector-general

SUICIDE OF REV. DR. P. GORDON, FORMER NEW YORK CLERGYMAN

New York, Jan. 11.—The body of the Rev. Dr. Percy Gordon, formerly of New Bedford, Mass., and for five years assistant rector at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church in the fashionable Park Avenue district, this city, was found today in the bathroom of his suite in the Hotel Wolcott. A bullet had pierced his right temple, and a pistol with an empty cartridge lay beside him.

Dr. Gordon, who was sixty years old, left St. Bartholomew's several months ago and departed, the church authorities said, for a trip to Europe. A son, formerly a captain in the American Expeditionary Forces, lives in Paris.

Dr. Gordon had lived at the Hotel Wolcott since December 23. Attendants there had not noticed anything of an unusual nature in his behavior, they said.

Considerable difficulty attended the identification of Dr. Gordon's body. On the hotel register, he was simply "Percy Gordon, N. Y." A passport, dated May 28, 1922, was similarly inscribed, with no reference to an ecclesiastical title. Baggage, attendants recalled, was brought to the hotel from a steamship whose name they did not remember.

Dr. Gordon had sub-let, on Dec. 1 the apartment in which he formerly lived, announcing that he was to remain in Europe for three years.

TESTIMONY GIVEN BY THE MAYOR OF MER ROUGE

Bastrop, La., Jan. 11.—Robert L. Dade, mayor of Mer Rouge, took the stand today in the inquiry into affairs in Morehouse Parish. He said he had been told his sheriff, clerk and district attorney were klansmen, and that "in a great measure" the klan "had superseded the constituted authorities," in the community.

Fred Higgenbotham testified that one of the last meetings of the Bastrop klan which he attended was held "in this court room."

Hugh Clark, a citizen of Mer Rouge, declared he was a klansman and that he had circulated a petition seeking consent for the return to Bastrop of Miss Addie May Hamilton, who had been ordered out of town. Captain Skipwith, cyclops of the Morehouse klan, told him it would be all right for the young woman to return to her home, Clark said.

The hearing, started as an inquiry into the deaths of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richard, who disappeared on August 24, and whose mutilated bodies were found in Lake La Fourche in December, will be continued Friday.

TELLEGEN-FARRAR DIVORCE HEARING WILL BE PRIVATE

New York, Jan. 11.—While attorneys for her and her actor-husband, Lou Tellegen, were agreeing in another court room on a course of action which would insure secrecy in the trial of their divorce case, Geraldine Farrar, former star of the Metropolitan opera house, today sat "incognito" in another divorce court in the same building, listening to the marital woes of other husbands and wives.

Attired in a trim tailored suit, Miss Farrar sat among a crowd of "matinee attendants" until her lawyer's assistant came to whisper that she would not be needed to testify in her own case today. Then she slipped unobserved from the building.

The disappointment of a gallery of "Gerry Flappers" whose hopes of learning the "inside" of their idol's estrangement from Tellegen was dashed by the non-appearance of either principal, turned to chagrin when they learned she had been there—and gone.

The opposing attorneys requested Justice Cohalan to appoint a referee to hear the evidence, to automatically obtain a court seal of secrecy for the case.

ZONES SYSTEM FAVORED FOR STATE LABORATORIES

New Haven, Jan. 11.—Laboratories supported by the state department of health and which will serve eight zones into which the state might be divided, in place of the central laboratory in this city, were recommended by the Connecticut Public Health Association at its annual meeting held here yesterday. In support of the recommendation it was stated that at present towns and cities are subject to delay in obtaining reports on cultures sent to New Haven for examination, but if a branch laboratory was established cities and towns in a zone could obtain very expeditious service.

Defective Laws are Breeding Disrespect

American Law Institute Formed to Revamp State and National Laws.

New York, Jan. 11—The organization of an American law institute here today was accompanied by the announcement that the leading lawyers and judges of the nation would be invited to a conference at Washington, February 23, to consider revamping state and national laws with a view to elliminating recognized "defects".

A committee was empowered to invite to the Washington meeting the chief justice of the United States and the associates of the United States supreme court, the senior federal judge of each circuit court of appeals, the attorney general and solicitor general of the United states, the president of the American Bar Association and its executive committee, the president of each state bar association, the dean of each law school belonging to the Association of American Law Schools, the presidents of the principal legal societies in the United States, and some hundred other officials and prominent private attorneys.

Organization of the new institute was decided upon at a meeting at the Harvard club of some fifty lawyers of national prominence, presided over by Elihu Root.

This general dissatisfaction, the report states, breeds disrespect for law, "the corner stone for revolution".

"The danger would be real," it continued, "even though the feeling that much is wrong with our law and its administration had no foundation in fact. There are, however, just causes for complaint. As lawyers, we know that parts of our law are uncertain and unnecessarily complex, we know that there are rules of law which are not working well in practice, and that much of our legal procedure and court organization needs revision.

"It is the province of the people and of legislative bodies, through constitutions and statutes, to express the political, economic and social policies of the nation, of its states and of smaller communities. It is the province of lawyers to sugeggt, construct and criticize the instruments by which these policies are effectuated. The American law institute, which the committee seeks to promote, will therefore concern itself with such matters as the form in which public law should be expressed, the details of private law procedure, the administration of law and judicial organization. It should not promote or obstruct political, social or economic changes."

The laws uncertainty and complexity" are the two chief defects, the committee asserted, they cause "useless litigation, prevent resort to the courts to enforce just rights, make it impossible to advise persons of their rights and when litigation is begun, create delay and expense."

The most serious consequences of these defects is that they "create a lack of respect for law, which undermines the moral fibre of the community and become a cause of anti-social conduct."

Lack of agreement among members of the legal profession upon fundamental principles of common law; lack of precision in the use of legal terms; conflicting and badly drawn statutory provisions; attempts to distinguish between two cases where the facts presented no distinction; an excessive volume of recorded decisions as well as novel legal cases.

The remedy advocated was the production of a restatement of the law that will have an authority much greater than that now accorded to any legal work."

Those in attendance at the Harvard club included George W. Wickersham, former attorney general; Henry W. Taft, Federal Judge Learned Hand, Federal Judge Julian W. Mack, J. H. Beale, Harvard Law School; Arthur L. Corbin, Yale Law School; Herbert S. Hadley, former governor of Missouri; William E. Mikell, dean of the University of Pennsylvania law school Edmund M. Morgan, Yale Law School; and James S. Reynolds of North Haven, Conn.

KING CONSTANTINE'S END SUDDEN AND PAINLESS

Palermo, Jan. 11 (By the A. P.)—Former King Constantine had never held up his head since his second abdication. His health had been poor and his spirits at low ebb since his arrival here from Greece after he left the throne. Often he was seen walking with his daughters but he always seemed weak and had an air of depression.

Apparently the end was sudden and painless. It is said there was scarcely time to call his family around the death bed before the former monarch passed away.

Since he left Greece, Constantine appeared to have a premonition that death was approaching, as often he expressed a desire to be buried in Athens, if possible. Otherwise he requested that his body be temporary taken to Denmark to await better days, "when history would do him justice." During his exile here Constantine had lived modestly in a hotel.

The funeral has been arranged for Saturday. The body will be removed to the Orthodox Greek church in Naples pending the Greek government's decision as to whether or not it can be taken to Greece.

SENATE DISCUSSED THE PACKER CONTROL LAW

Washington, Jan. 11.—The senate spent nearly three hours today in controversy over the Packer control law.

The attack on the act was opened by Senator Fernald, republican, Maine, who was joined by Senator Watson, republican, Indiana. Both declared the statute was an interference by the government in private business and Senator Fernald said it resulted in increased costs to consumers.

Senators La Follette, republican, Wisconsin; Simmons, democrat, North Carolina; Kendrick, democrat, Wyoming, and others defended the law, declaring it prevented monopoly practices and protected the public.

Albany, Ga., Jan. 11 (By the A. P.)—Use of the municipal auditorium for a public meeting announced by the Rev. Ray E. Davis, an official spokesman of the Ku Klux Klan for next Friday night, was denied by the mayor and council today. The meeting was to be addressed by Colonel William Joseph Simmons of Atlanta, emperor of the Invisible Empire.

Four Rum-running Vessles Captured

Were of Fleet That Tried to Overwhelm the Prohibition Navy.

New York, Jan. 11 (By the A. P.)—The swarm of rum-running craft which today sought by sheer strength of numbers to overwhelm the prohibition navy with its newly acquired gun-toting flagship Lexington tonight suffered its first "casualty," according to observers at Sandy Hook, who reported that the launch Margaret B., laden to the gunwales with whiskey, was captured by a coast guard crew.

Almost simuRaneously three other vessels of the rum fleet were reported to have been seized by coast guard craft off Ambrose Channel lightship. The quadruple haul totaled 1,000 cases.

Besides the Margaret B., officials said they had confiscated the Evelyn, a 25-foot sea skiff, an unnamed launch and a rum runners' scout boat, one of which were believed to have been owned in Highland, N. J.

The revenue cutter Surveyor plowed into the swarming flotilla shortly after the four boats were seized, sending them scattering like a brood of frightened ducklings.

But she arrived too late. The speediest of the little ones escaped in a shoreward direction, and before the Surveyor could put out after the slower vessels they had attained the safety of the three-mile limit.

Ten members of the seized boats' crews were captured. Three of the crew of the Evelyn leaped into shallow water as the coast guards came upon them and escaped ashore.

The Margaret B. is reported to have carried three hundred cases and seven fifty-gallon barrels of whiskey. Coast guard officials said the total value of tonight's haul would be $100,000.

THOUSANDS OF CASES OF LIQUOR LANDED IN JERSEY

Highlands, N. J., Jan. 11 (By the A. P.)—"Bootleggers' haven," as this little summer resort on the New Jersey coast is known, is seething tonight with rum-running activity.

Thousands upon thousands of cases of liquor taken from a fleet of 22 vessels, three steamers and 19 schooners, that lies off Ambrose Channel lightship, are being landed in a hundred different places by fast boats. A visit to any of the many snug harbors and boat landings unfolds bustling scenes.

Fleets of motor trucks and passenger cars are drawn alongside private boathouse docks and piers. The town's restaurants at late hours are doing a rushing business with patrons who frequently pause in their hurried meals to indulge in laughs over the trick they believe they have "put over" on enforcement agents. It is predicted that 35,000 cases of liquor would be brought in tonight:—most of which is destined for Manhattan.

There is not the least effort on the part of the runners to conceal their actions. The transfer from power boats to trucks and passenger cars goes on noisily.

Down at the mouth of the Shrewsbury river, at a little landing, one power boat crew unloads a cargo of 1,000 cases. The air is biting cold, but the men are in their shirt sleeves and perspire freely.

"Hurry, Hurry, Hurry!" is the cry, and to lend encouragement a bottle is passed now and then as truck after truck is loaded, each escorted by a four-passenger car carrying two or three heavily armed men, and starts away on its journey into the night.

Sound of the incoming power boats bring news of a coast guard vessel, carrying machine guns, that has made several unsuccessful attempts to overhaul them.

Word that the whiskey squadron was coming was circulated "underground" to local runners about a week ago, they said tonight. The first of the fleet, a big steamer, appeared Monday, and the word was passed ashore. Soon another steamer arrived, then a steam trawler, then 18 two-masted schooners, and today the latest arrival was a three-master with a cargo of 3,000 cases.

This information comes from a man who is operating ten speedboats tonight. He declared he would make $25,000 out of the day's work.

And there is still another and more risky end to the business. Last night a truck loaded with $10,000 worth of liquor left here convoyed by four passenger cars. The party was held up by six masked men on the Rumson road between Redbank and Seabright. The truck was driven off by two of the highwaymen while one of them took charge of each of the passenger cars.

Three of the cars were released several hours later. The other car, carrying forty cases, and the two "runners" occupying it, have not been heard from.

The load of "pirated" liquor was found here today by its original owners in a vacant house and immediately removed. The guard placed over it by the highwaymen escaped. The empty truck was found in a graveyard near Redbank. This job local runners attribute to New York gunmen.

EIGHT-POINT BREAK IN DELAWARE AND HUDSON

New York, Jan. 11.—A break of eight points on the New York Stock Exchange in the stock of the Delaware & Hudson company today, due to uncertainty regarding dividend action, tonight was followed by a statement from L. F. Loree, president, declaring that he anticipated no change in the dividend policy despite the fact that the company fell short by $500,000 of earning enough to meet operating expenses and fixed charges in 1922.

CITY OF BRIDGEPORT MUST PAY DOG WARDEN

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 11.—That the city of Bridgeport must pay Dog Warden George Hall his bills of $885 over and above the appropriations of $1,500 for fees made last year by the board of apportionment, was the opinion of Attorney General Frank E. Healey today. The attorney general said in part: "A municipality cannot evade payment of this character by its neglect to make appropriations, or by its failure to make adequate appropriations."

"THE BOY MURDERER" HAS BECOME A BANDIT

New Haven, Jan. 11.—Raymond Hill who served six and a half years for killing a man, was sent to jail for a year today for assault and robbery. Hill, who was referred to while on trial for manslaughter about ten years ago, was referred to as "the boy murderer," and got a sentence of one to twenty years. Recently he went into a pool room and drove the owner out. The latter found his cash register cleaned out upon his return and as Hill had made the disturbance his arrest followed and the money recovered.

GERMANY SENDS PROTEST, BUT WASHINGTON IS SILENT

German Ambassador Wiedfeldt Has Presented to Secretary Hughes a Formal Protest of Germany to Occupation of the Ruhr by the French—United States Officials Seem Disposed to Await Developments Before Making Any Further Move in the Reparations Crisis—There is No Present Plan of Recalling Roland W. Boyden, American Unofficial Observer on the Reparations Commission.

Washington, Jan. 11.—(By the A. P.)—Dr. Otto Wiedfelt, the German Ambassador, called at the state department late today and left there a formal protest against occupation of the Ruhr by France.

After reciting that the German government protested against "oppression applied towards Germany in contradiction with the treaty (of Versailles), and international law," the communication said the Berlin government did not intend to "meet violence with violence, nor to reply to the breach of the treaty with a withdrawal from the treaty."

"As long as the state of affairs contrary to the treaty exists," the protest continued, "Germany is not in a position to make actual reparations to those powers who have brought about this state of affairs."

The German communication was laid before Secretary Hughes after Dr. Wiedfelt had called at the department earlier in the day. Unable at the time to see the secretary, who was engaged at a session of the British and American debt commission, the ambassador left, intending to return tomorrow. Late in the afternoon, however, he returned to the state department and laid the protest of his government before Mr. Hughes.

The German embassy was of the opinion that the text of the communication was similar, if not identical, to that presented to the British foreign office by Dr. Sthamer, German ambassador at London.

The text of Germany's protest against occupation of the Ruhr by the French, dated January 10, which was communicated to the state department by the German ambassador follows:

"The French ambassador and immediately afterwards the Belgian charge d'affaires in Berlin have, this afternoon informed the German minister for foreign affairs in writing or orally that France and Belgium because of the defaults declared by the reparations commission as declared by Germany in execution of the deliveries of wood and coal, have decided immediately to send into the Ruhr control missions, composed of engineers and accompanied by the troops necessary, to control the management of the coal syndicate, to guarantee the strict execution of the progra of the reparations commission and to enforce the payment of reparations. The control missions will be placed under General Degoutte, who will have full dictatorial powers. Any local disturbances will be punished with most severe coercive measures and penalties.

"The German minister for foreign affairs has lodged a protest with the two foreign representatives against the action contemplated because this action represents a breach of the treaties and of international law.

"Owing to the declarations made by France and Belgium there is no longer any doubt at the latest Franco-Belgian army will occupy Essen and parts of the Ruhr territory. This happens four years after the signing of the peace treaty and is directed against a defenceless and peaceful nation.

"The reasons given for the procedure is that Germany is in default in her deliveries of wood and coal in 1922. The default in the case of coal represents a deficit amounting to less than 4 per cent. of the deliveries of coal to the entente powers since the signing of the armistice. Of the deliveries of wood to France for 1922 only 20,000 cubic metres sawnwood and 135,000 telegraph poles are missing. France and Belgium justify their action by asserting that Germany is in voluntary default and that this voluntary default justified one-sided coercive measures directed against Germany on the part of these two powers.

"The existence of such a default on the part of Germany is not only denied by Germany alone. But entirely apart from that, the Franco-Belgian action represents a breach of the treaty of Versailles in a three-fold manner:

"1—Germany's defaults in her deliveries of wood and coal would, according to the note of the reparations commission of March 21, 1922, always only justify demands for subsequent payment.

"2—The treaty of Versailles does not admit any territorial sanctions."

"3—The measures allowed by the treaty of Versailles against Germany can only be applied by the allied powers as a whole and not by single powers of their own accord.

"The German government herewith enters a protest against the oppression applied towards Germany in contradiction with the treaty and international law. The German government does not intend to meet violence with violence nor to reply to the breach of the treaty with a withdrawal from the treaty. However, as long as the state of affairs contrary to the treaty exists, Germany is not in a position to make actual reparations to those powers who have brought about this state of affairs."

official observer on the reparations commission. That course has not been considered, it was said at the state department. It was added, however, htat his retention with the commission depended on developments. If the situation changes due to French direct action to enforce reparations payments from Germany in such a fashion as to make the commission's deliberations of no material interest to the United States, Mr. Boynden undoubtedly will be called home.

The present purpose of the administration, it was indicated authoritatively today, is to avoid any action that might further tangle matters or lead to needless misunderstandings and it was reiterated that its course throughout had been and would continue to be dictated by the friendliest sentiments toward France as well as the other allied powers.

WASHINGTON IS PREPARED TO AWAIT DEVELOPMENTS

Washington, Jan. 11—With French occupation of German territory an accomplished fact, administration officials evidently were prepared tonight to await developments before making any further move in the reparations crisis. Official comment was denied even the understanding as to the motive of President Harding in ordering the American troops home from the Rhine which Premier Poincare expressed in the French chamber today failing to unseal official lips.

It was pointed out, however, that recall of the troops apparently had unanimous approval in the United States. It also was admitted that their retirement from the Rhine would prevent even the possibility of embarrassing circumstances in connection with French operations in Germany. On the direct question as to whether the Washington government had warned Paris in advance that occupation of the Ruhr would lead to American withdrawal, no comment whatever was forthcoming.

There is no present plan of recalling also Roland W. Boyden, American un-

U. S. TROOPS REGRET TO BID FAREWELL TO COBLENZ

Coblenz, Jan. 11—(By the A. P.)—Gloom, if not consternation, has descended upon the 1,200 soldiers of the eighth United States infantry who are now preparing to bid farewell to Coblenz.

While the news of the withdrawal of the Americans was official confirmed only this morning, it was known yesterday afternoon through the message of the Associated Press telephoned from Paris and speeded throughout the city. The word reached a dance given by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, where the German wives and sweethearts of many of the American troops were among the dancers. They raised their voices in tearful lamentations. It was a blow to Coblenz, and today the face of every man, woman and child expressed a personal grief.

The world political significance of the departure of the troops, however, is apparently lost to all save the commanding officers. Real sadness was evinced in a message sent to Major General Henry T. Allen tonight by the head burgomaster in the name of the people of Coblenz. The message read:

"We are sorry to see you leave: we do not know how we can do without you, nor what will happen to us soon. We are sorry to see the Americans go, leaving use so excited and at such a dreadful time. However, we trust matters will right themselves, and we wish all the best things to General Allen and his troops."

CHRISTIANS IN TURKEY SUBJECT TO MILITARY DUTY

Lausanne, Jan. 11 (By the A. P.)—There will be no exemption from military service for the Christian inhabitants of Turkey.

At the Near East conference today the allies yielded to the Turks and abandoned the project, especially affecting the Armenians, whereby all Christians would be relieved of the necessity of serving under the Turkish flag by paying an indemnity.

On the other hand, the Turks were conciliatory on the question of the general amnesty. They gave up their demand that Moslems should not be included in the amnesty arrangements, with the exception that they insisted that some 150 Turks who are held to have betrayed the Turkish nation during the war should never be permitted to return to their country.

A list of these people, who are chiefly traders, will be submitted to the allies. The amnesty otherwise applies to all subjects of Turkey, whether Christian or Moslem, for all political or military crimes committed during the last nine years. Greece agreed to grant amnesty without conditions.

The British delegation announced tonight that the Mosul oil district would never be returned to the Turks by virtue of any clause in the Lausanne treaty. Their spokesman, without making any distinct statement on the question, gave the impression that England hopes to settle the Mosul controversy outside the conference.

If this be so, it leaves the capitulations as the sole great outstanding problem of the conference. This question is, however, perhaps the most vital of all.

The Assyro-Chaldean delegation, disappointed at the failure of the conference to achieve results with the Turks concerning the establishment for them of an autonomous national home, declared tonight that they would appeal to Pope Pius to ask that all Christian nations unite in an appeal to Turkey to grant the Assyro-Chaldean some form of independence.

ALLEGED AUTO THIEVES HELD IN $48,000 BONDS

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 11.—Bonds aggregating $48,000 were fixed today by United States Commissioner Hugh J. Lavery in the cases of five men accused of being involved in what is described by state police as one of the biggest automobile theft cases they have uncovered. The cases of the men were continued until January 15.

Late today police confiscated two automobiles, making a total of seven, which they claim were stolen through the ring. One of these, valued at $2,000, was taken from a garage, while another was found in a parking place. One car, police said, was stolen in New York last October and was used by one of the arrested men.

Police further announced that they were checking up on at least 1,200 cars believed to have been stolen through the gang and said that they would confiscate any of the stolen cars they found.

Harold and Nathan Goldy, brothers, and Samuel Lefatz are being held in $15,000 bonds each; George S. Singer arrested today, a dealer in second hand automobiles, was released in $3,000 bonds on a charge of technical perjury, while Frank Cleary, a garage helper, was held without bond on a technical charge of breach of the peace.

Thursday's session of the Windham county superior court was resumed at noon, due to the late arrival of the Boston express on which several of the attorneys arrived.

A quick disposal was made of the case of Henry Woodward of South Windham, charged with assault, the case being nolled on payment of the fine and costs imposed in the local city court.

In the case of Guy Demarco, charged with embezzlement, the defendant failed to respond when his name was called and Sheriff Gates was notified by State's Attorney Searls to call the bond. The surety in the case was Sammel Calderado.

The case of Barnett C. Hart, charged with bribery was ordered continued to the May term of the superior court.

Theophile Ganthier, charged with abuse of a female child, was not prosecuted and the case was settled without court proceedings.

The first case to court was begun shortly after court convened and was that of Leo Bellevance of Mooscup, charged with non-support of his wife and child.

Mrs. Bellavance, aged 21, was the first witness in the case. She stated that she and her husband, Leo Bellavance were married July 12, 1920 and separated February 24, 1921. Some time after the separation the child was born. Since the time of their separation her husband had never offered to do anything in regard to her support and that of their child. The matter was brought to the Wauregan court and Bellavance appeared on the charge of non-support and was ordered by the court to pay his wife $10 a week, which he failed to do. She said that her husband had then offered to take her back home but refused to come for her and that she could not go to him on account of illness. Mrs. Bellavance claimed that while she was in a pregnant condition her husband failed to provide her with food, and eventually he came and took away all the furniture, forcing her to go to live with her mother, Mrs. Anna Bedard of Danielson.

Mrs Bedard, mother of the plaintiff, was next called to the witness stand, and she testified to the fact that Mr. Bellavance abused her daughter, and failed to provide her with food.

Leo Bellavance was the next witness. He stated that he was 24 years old. His first statement was to the fact that he blamed his wife's parents for the whole trouble, as they insisted on trying to tell him what he should do and not do. He testified that when the Waureagan court ordered him to support his wife he fixed up a home for her and paid the rent on it for three months while waiting her return, and for three weeks he called her up daily and asked her to come back to him which she refused. He admitted not offering any financial assistance to his wife and child since that time. Bellavance further stated that he always worked and gave his wife all that he earned which was $25 a week when they were first married and $30 later on. Upon a question made by the attorney he replied that he was willing to fix up a home for his wife and child and treat them as any man should.

When questioned by the attorney for the defense, Bellavance admitted that on one occasion his wife had struck him and he had slapped her face in return.

Henry J. Bessette, first selectman for the town of Plainfield then took the stand and stated that he had known Bellavance for over fifteen years and had always found him of the best character and a good worker.

Leo Oneletta, a cousin of Leo Bellavance was next called to the stand and he said that on one occasion he had seen Mr. and Mrs. Bellavance strike each other and on another occasion he had seen Mrs. Bellavance strike her husband.

Mrs. Velima Bellavance, mother of the defendant, stated that she never bothered her son and his wife but she believed that he had always provided his wife with plenty of food and she then gave a list of provisions and groceries which the defendant removed to her (witness) home when the couple separated and there were pacakages which which had never been opened for cooking purposes.

Miss Irene Bedard was then called and upon taking the stand she related a conversation which she had had with Leo Owelette at which time he told her her that it was a pity to see the young couple break up and he said he did not think they would have if Leo Bellavance left intoxicating liquor alone.

Witness then stated that on several occasions she had seen Bellavance so drunk that he could hardly stand up.

The arguments by the attorneys were then heard. Judge Hinman advised the couple that the marital state was a sacred one and that both parties entering into that state should be willing to make concessions to each other.

As Mrs. Bellavance refused to return to her husband the latter was not bound by law to support his wife and child. He found Leo Bellavance not guilty of the charge of non-support.

Court adjourned at 4.50 o'clock until next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Connecticut College Concert.

That the programs of chamber music given by the now famous Letz Quartet of New York have unusual interest and especially great educational value is proved by the long list of engagements being filled this season with some of the most important colleges and schools in the country.

It is announced for an appearance at New London on January 15th and will doubtless make a wide appeal to all lovers of this, the highest form of music.

It is of interest that one of the numbers on the program to be rendered in New London is the famous Quartet in A Minor by Kreisler, which was composed especially for the Letz Quartet and to which they have exclusive rights.

Tickets are now on sale at Chidsey's.

Breed Theatre.

Judging from the reception accorded this splendid photoplay last night at the Breed theatre, it fully meets the requirements of William Farnum admirers. To say that it merited the praise of the most captious seeker after dramatic suspense and thrills, is simply to do justice to a really splendid picture.

The locale is a frontier town of the Northwest. As a two-fisted sheriff who maintains the morals of the community without resorting to his shooting-irons, William Farnum has opportunities for displaying an intensive histrionic talent that places him in a niche all his own. No actor of the screen knows better than William Farnum the enhancing value of the dramatic power of restraint.

Without Compromise will be the feature attraction at the Breed theatre again today and tomorrow and other pictures on the bill include Chas. Hutchison in Go-Get-'Em Hutch, Al St. John in Special Delivery and Pathe News.

The Vaudeville Bill at Broadway Today and Saturday.

The five B. F. Keith acts scheduled for the Broadway for the last half of this week are as follows: Glades Correll, Harry Weston and Dave Gardner make a wonderful combination in their comedy offering called Nautical Nonsense. Joe De Lea is an accordionist and will furnish the musical part of the program, Murray and Clara Ferguson are called The Comedy Maniacs and rightly so. They work for fun and give abundance of this. Mack and Stanton in Home, Sweet Home, are immense. The King Brothers close the bill with a sensational novelty offering.

These five acts made up a very fine offering which was generously received with applause and laughter.

Where are scandal mongers found in the greatest number—the village or the big city? The author of Dangerous Paths insists that the former is the breding ground of scandal and gossip. See it at the Broadway theatre.

Worth While Laugh-Maker.

Said to be a laugh-maker that is distinctly worth while, Clarence, a new Paramount comedy featuring Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayres and May McAvoy, will be shown at the Broadway theatre next Monday. The story deals with the troubles of an American family the members of which are constantly at sixes and sevens and who are reconciled through the painstaking and humorous efforts of a rookie. The love element is strong and every scene has a laugh of its own.

In addition to this special feature there will be five acts of B. F. Keith vaudeville.

Elsie Ferguson at the Strand.

What chance has an outcast girl on the streets to regain her lost position in society? Is her case hopeless? The records of the Salvation Army and organizations devoted to the uplift of women, reply in the negative. The slogan of these organizations is that a woman may be down, but she is never out, any more than a man.

Elsie Ferguson in Outcast, her latest Paramount star vehicle, which is showing at the Strand theatre today proves that there is a bright future for every woman, however dark her prospects may be. In this beautiful picture story of human uplift, there are two persons, a man and woman, who fall into the depths, but are eventually redeemed by love.

Miriam, a deserted wife, portrayed by Miss Ferguson, is unable to pay her rent and is thrown out into the streets. She strangely meets Geoffrey Sherwood, a wealthy young man who is dissipating as a result of the collapse of his dreams of love for a fickle woman. Miriam proves to him that his plight is not so bad as her own, and then begins a charming love romance in which Miriam, after enduring many trials emerges triumphant. There is a surprising climax.

The story is an adaptation of H. H. Davies' play of the same name in which Miss Ferguson starred on its production in New York in 1914. Mr. Powell is one of the foremost leading men of the screen. Another player of note in the strong cast is Mary MacLaren. The picture, a Paramount, was directed by Chester Withey.

A comedy and news complete the program.

McCARTHY CHARACTERIZES AGREEMENT WITH MAJORS AS "SCRAP OF PAPER"

San Francisco, Jan. 11.—The agreement between the major and minor baseball leagues restricting the drafting of players was characterized today by William H. McCarthy, president of Pacific Coast League, as "a scrap of paper," as a result of a recent pact between the majors, which, according to McCarthy, extends the drafting privilege beyond the scope of the major-minor agreement.

"The minor leagues of this country, approximately twenty-five, have been humbugged, deluded, deceived and cheated by the two major leagues," the statement said. "And the pity of it is that this has been done with the knowledge, consent and approval of the new Moses, the high commissioner, who was to lead professional baseball into a new land of promise.

"Promises. Yes! That's what the minor leagues have been fed. At Louisville, Commissioner Landis brought the convention of minor leagues meeting to its feet with the statement that draft or no draft, the major-minor agreement would be lived up to to the letter, until 1927. The year when it is supposed to retire.

"Less than a month later he rendered this decision absolutely nullifying the major-minor agreement.

"The man whose proudest boast and claim to fame was that he had fined the Standard Oil Co. $29,000,000 was not big enough nor courageous enough to tell a multi-rich and over-prosperous employers that a contract is a contract, binding upon both parties and that they would have to live up to their part of it.

"When a ball player anxious for an increase in salary, refuses to sign his contract, he is banned for five years from professional baseball, exiled and ostracized and held up to scorn as a contract breaker. That is so easy. It is only the ball player's bread and butter is concerned.

"But when the men who make the ball player a contract jumper break their contract; when their dollars—not their bread and butter—are threatened—well, it's just a little bit different. They are judged by a different code."

After explaining the major league agreements which brought about the alleged breaking of the pact with the leagues of lower classification, McCarthy continues:

"And the more regrettable is that the man who held the respect and admiration of the minor leagues and of the country, who enjoyed as no other man their confidence—the pity and the shame of it is that Kenesaw M. Landis could lend himself to this. Never could anyone have suffered keener disappointment than I have met. I have fought for him, looked to him, followed him. But I cannot follow him to dishonor."

MANAGER PELLERIN TELLS HIS SIDE OF STORY

Manager Bob Pellerin of the Conn. Mills team tells in the following letter of the circumstances referred to in the letter from the Bristol Town team manager. Mr. Pellerin's and Mr. Reeves' letter follows:

Dear Editor: We judge by the article printed in The Bulletin of January 10th that Manager Shappee not only took the liberty of reporting same in his favor, but we assure you, and also our own townspeople, that he has lied in many instances.

First of all I wish to call attention to the fact that all local fans agree that it is the first time that they have had a "square deal" by not being kept waiting, and waiting until our honored visiting team should arrive and demand almost any guarantee before playing.

What do you think of a man who agrees to be present at a certain time and then arrives an hour and a half later, and then claims that the trouble delayed him, and writes the article you printed last Thursday?

We and all business men and fans here at Danielson think that he is pretty small potatoes.

As far as any visiting team being afraid to come to Danielson and not receiving a square deal, is out of the question altogether.

The fact of being on the level at all times in Danielson in any respect has been proven time and time again.

Indeed, Town team had better soon make themselves known that they were not asked to deposit an amount sufficient to cover our expenses as part of their guarantee that they would show up on time.

Mr. Shappee lied when he said he arrived at 6:30 p. m. He and his party reached here at exactly 8:30 p. m. The agreement read that he shall be in Danielson ready to start the game at 7:30 p. m.

When Mr. Shappee, Manager of Bristol Town team, asked "Your for cleanness" the local people here would like to know what it means.

During the conversation here last Saturday, he couldn't utter a sentence without using profane language which I am sure your paper would never print.

What is this? "Clean." I suppose. Furthermore, there is no such team in existence as St. Lewis A. A. of Woonsocket, R. I. The team that was representing Danielson were gentlemen at least, and they were taken care of at our expense.

In fact, most all of his statements were lies from start to finish.

We are sure that Bristol will never receive bookings in Danielson, and we inform all teams in Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts that if they book Bristol, be sure to bone them deposit enough to cover expenses because they'll always be found—"behind like an old cow's tail."

Very truly yours,

N. A. REEVES.

WILLARD IN GOOD SHAPE DESPITE HIS OVERWEIGHT

New York, Jan. 11.—Jess Willard, here seeking a return match for the heavyweight boxing title with Jack Dempsey, today convinced a majority of critics who watched him go through a little gymnasium workout that despite his 260 pounds he is in good condition and able to get down to fighting trip again with proper training.

Donning his ring togs, the former titleholder shadow boxed, skipped rope and performed other light exercises for about a half hour. He plans to continue similar workouts while he is in New York waiting final word on negotiations when Dempsey's manager, Jack Kearns, arrives here, probably next week.

"Willard is the best man available today as an opponent for Dempsey," Promoter Tex Rickard declared. "He is in better condition right now than he was a month before the bout with Dempsey at Toledo, in which he lost his title."

The first intimation of financial terms Willard desires for a bout with Dempsey were revealed in an announcement by Tom O'Rourke, Polo Grounds matchmaker, that Jess asked $50,000, with a percentage privilege, for his share if O'Rourke was successful in bidding for the contest.

A. judges who will be at the respective ranges of both clubs. The opposing clubs will not know the other's scores until the final shot has been fired. If the match is postponed the club will have their annual meeting for election of officers and for any other business of interest to the club.

Boston, Jan. 11.—Two of the Baltimore Oriole star aggregation of baseball players are to come to the Boston Red Sox in exchange for two Red Sox players and a sum between $25,000 and $40,000, Harry Frazee, owner of the Sox, today informed the club secretary, Larry Graber, by telephone from New York. The Orioles who will come to Boston will be two of the trio, Johnny Boley, Max Bishop and Merwin Jacobson, shortstop, second sacker and outfielder, respectively, he said.

While Secretary Graber tonight professed to know which of the Sox would go to the Orioles he refused to give their names.

Observers said they believed Conti had not had time to get in form for the Schaefer match following his match with Edouard Horemans in New York.

Conway Toole, of the International league today notified his owners not to accept any players from the major leagues which are subject to draft. Should the majors insist upon carrying out their recent rule in this matter, Dunn believes, Toole's decision will mean a breaking off of relations.

TOOLE PREDICTS SCRAPPING OF THE MAJOR-MINOR AGREEMENT

New York, Jan. 11.—Scrapping of the major-minor league agreement of 1921, involving possibly an open break in relations between the two factions, as a result of the decision of the majors to make all players hereafter released to minor league clubs subject to draft, was predicted today by John Conway Toole, president of the International league, in confirming announcement that he had advised owners of his circuit not to accept contracts from the majors on that basis.

"It is nothing but another indirect attempt on the part of the majors to force the draft upon the minor leagues which have exercised their right not to recognize its operation," Mr. Toole declared.

"The claim of the majors that the minor leagues violated the 1921 agreement at Louisville by declining to consider until the next annual meeting the increased optional player limit—which involves the new draft scheme—is merely a pretext to obscure its real motive," Mr. Toole said. "We are perfectly within our rights in refusing to consider the question. If the majors feel that we have broken the agreement they should declare it at an end. But they know we have not done so."

Unless the majors modify their plans it is believed that business relations between the majors and the anti-draft group may come to an end.

TO BUILD NEW CLUBHOUSE NEAR THE YALE BOWL

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 11.—Work on a new clubhouse near the Yale bowl that will provide dressing rooms and accommodations for all Yale athletes will begin some time this spring, it became known tonight. The exact site of the structure has not been selected and contracts for the work have not been let. It is estimated that the building will cost about $250,000 and that it will provide about 2,000 lockers.

The building will be of special benefit to the football team, which has been forced to dress in the Yale gymnasium in the past seasons, thus entailing a bus trip to football togs to the bowl.

It also became known that concrete stands, seating approximately 8,000 persons will be built on the new track field which was completed last year. With the completion of these stands it is believed that Yale will have one of the finest tracks in the country.

The Cubs and the Pirates are opposed to the return of "Rube" Benton into the National League and it is not particularly difficult to figure out why. With a pitcher of Benton's class added to their hurling staff, the Reds would be picked to top both the Cubs and the Pirates in the standing at the close of the coming race.

Italian Star To Race In This Country

KEYSTONE VIEW CO., NEW YORK

No money or other considerations were involved in the transaction he said. Brower will be used by the Indians as utility outfielder and pinch hitter.

On January 17, he jumps back to Wilkes-Barre where he meets Frank Kid Schoell and on January 20, Wells will go to Minneapolis where he mingles with Morrie Schlafer, the western star.

A match will probably soon be closed that will bring together bantamweight champion Joe Lynch and Danny Lee of Harlem in a 15-round bout for the title at Madison Square Garden the latter part of next month. Lee has steadily fought his way up the pugilistic ladder to a match with the champion, knocking out Billy Ryckoff in 10 rounds in his last bout.

The "pep" and popularity of Dan Howley prevented George Maisel from going to the Pacific Coast league in the Cubs' deal for Pitcher Nick Dumovich. George declared before the deal was made that he would not go west, saying that he wanted to play with Howley in Toronto of the International League. George's brother, Fritz, is with Baltimore of the same swing.

DEALING WITH PUBLIC BURDEN.

Perhaps it cannot be told to a cent just what the receipts for the state are going to be in the coming two fiscal years, yet when it is estimated that they will approximate $30,000,000 there is good reason for the general assembly using that as a guide for the present session.

It is of the utmost importance in every legislative session that the best possible efforts should be made to cut the garment according to the cloth. Just because the past year left a balance does not warrant launching out on a period of extravagance just for the sake of seeing how much money can be spent. It is to be realized that when appropriations are made in excess of the state revenue it means the placing of an increased burden upon the people of the state, and just at the present time there is a feeling that taxation is heavy enough.

In her message Governor Templeton laid stress upon the importance of husbanding our resources, scrutinizing carefully the proposals for new expenses and said that the efforts of the general assembly should be concentrated as far as possible in a strenuous purpose to reduce the public burden. This is believed should be accomplished through the reduction of the cost of state government.

Thus the indicated state receipts at this time, so soon after the golden advice offered by the governor, should serve as a warning to the members of the legislature. There is a large duty that rests upon their shoulders. The tendency to rush into large expenditures needs to be guarded against, and inasmuch as it is known in advance what can be expected in the way of revenue it behooves the general assembly to act accordingly. Quite important as it is to know the revenue in sight is several millions less than the appropriations of two years ago. From the indicated situation it will not be possible to equal the 1921 expenditures and also reduce the public burden.

WHAT FRANCE IS DOING.

France in moving into the Ruhr valley with an army and taking possession of Essen isn't moved by the spirit of conquest. France believes, and there are others that agree with it, that failure has crowned the methods that have been employed in the past, and even though Chancellor Cuno may be entirely right in terming the move as the application of "coercive measures" he will have to admit that such measures are resorted to because of the disbelief in the sincerity of Germany and the inability to get a fulfilment of its promises otherwise.

France has come to the conclusion that no other course will meet the situation. It has yielded with the others from time to time, and it has visions of continuing to do that very thing as long as there is a willingness to do so, regardless of the situation in Germany. This is to be gained from the decision to the effect that Germany is wilfully in default on its deliveries, and while it has indicated that it favored a moratorium as an aid to the German situation it likewise showed that it was not disposed to encourage Germany in the policies it has been following.

"In other words, there has been a difference of opinion as to how Germany should be brought to a proper realization of the situation. Time and again it has been hinted by France that it was ready to proceed under the treaty rules to secure getting the reparations. It has yielded each time until now. Its belief is that it can convince Germany that it means business and arouse that country to a keener realization of the treaty promises. There are those that suffer in the meshed to be pursued under the circumstances. It is a difference that hasn't caused animosity among the allies, but France is going ahead in an effort to demonstrate the correctness of its position. If it succeeds others will be more tolerant of such a view. If it fails, or causes the creation of conditions which peace workers are trying to avoid the responsibility must rest with it.

Just at the present time France is engaged in an important test after what it believes to be a failure of diplomatic efforts. It moves with confidence and is getting close, worldwide attention.

MINE FATALITIES.

While the past year was an unusual one in connection with coal mine activities, because of the idleness due to the strike lasting through the summer, it was not one that resulted in as great a decrease in the number of coal mine fatalities as the period of inactivity would seem to promise. During the year, accordingly to figures given by the bureaus of mines, there were 1950 fatal accidents in the coal mines of the United States. Happily this represents a smaller number than in the previous year and yet when comparison is made with 1921 as to the number of mine deaths per million tons of coal produced it shows a larger figure. Thus while the year's record is actually smaller it seems probable had there been no strike and normal production had been maintained the 1923 record would have been in excess of the previous year.

This is because there were experienced during the year many miners explosions which resulted in the deaths of many mines at a time. Efforts have been made to overcome conditions responsible for such without as great success as might be desired, but aside from these mine horrors, about which there is bound to be much uncertainty, there appears to be a lack of regard for greater safety from the falling of rock or coal, which picks off perhaps no more than one at a time, but which is constantly adding to the death list throughout the year.

Cooperation between the bureau of mines, the operators and miners has done much in behalf of greater mine safety. That there are still opportunities for better results is apparent. The demand for less disasters is justified, but when the falling of rock and coal, due to the failure to properly support them, exacts a toll of more than a third of the year's death it is evident that there is great need for concentration of efforts for greater safety in that direction.

RECALL THE TROOPS.

With the recall of the United States troops on the Rhine it means that there is to be a fulfillment of the promise that was made a number of months ago that our boys would be brought home. For reasons which have been considered sufficient by the state department, and it must be agreed that it is probably in closer touch with the situation than those on the outside, the recall has been delayed much longer than expected.

But for the new situation in Europe as the result of the sending of an army into the Ruhr the same reasons that have kept the force of 1100 men and officers there this long might have been considered sufficient to extend their stay. As the situation now is this government apparently doesn't wish to become involved in any emergency that may develop as the result of the action by France. Clashes in ways that might not be anticipated are entirely possible. It doesn't take much to start a lot of trouble and increased responsibility if the right conditions exist.

Both France and Germany have been desirous that the American forces remain at their post. It is not possible for either of them to look upon the recall as a move directly attributable to the respective action of either country. This country has not participated in the decision France has made. It has indicated through the state department that it was willing to participate in an alternative course if the Paris conference failed, but France preferred to make the adjustment in another way.

France may regard the bringing home of the troops as disapproval of its decision. Germany may look upon it as a rebuke to the course it has been following. Great Britain may regard it as sympathy for the view it has taken, while in this country there will be rejoicing when the boys get back onto their own soil.

COAL ADMINISTRATION.

The trouble of getting coal hasn't been overcome for everyone. Some may be in a position to go through the winter with what they have in their cellars by using it economically. Others may get it in driblets but sufficient to meet their requirements while there are those who must do some scrambling as well as economizing and in the end pay the highest price because of the small quantity they purchase at a time.

Two months ago there were those who offered the opinion that if the mild weather continues through 1922 the shortage would be practically overcome. The weather was not severe except in spots but coal isn't plentiful and it isn't going to be although improved deliveries are resulting in New York getting fresh mined coal two days after it is lifted out of the ground. That is one of the improvements that is going to aid materially in meeting the fuel requirements for the rest of the winter. Just at the present time conditions caused by the storm are seriously interfering with deliveries.

Because of a change in administrations the fuel director of New York state has resigned. General Goethals, his successor, will in all probability follow the same policy that he has been pursuing, and yet when it is intimated that he will find plenty to do if he devotes his attention to the prevention of profiteering, especially for the protection of those who buy by the hod or the bag, it is clear that he must struggle with a situation which exists quite generally and particularly in large centers.

With any improvement in other directions the service that can be rendered in this way will be well worth while.

A LITTLE DIPLOMACY

Think there ought to be a law against pretty young women's going into a busy man's office and making him part with perfectly good dollars for some perfectly worthless ticket," said the lawyer, coming home on the "L" from his office in the loop.

"The pretty ones are not only offenders," began the insurance man. "I—"

"What are your tickets for?" asked the real-estate broker.

"I don't know," replied the lawyer, taking one out of the envelope and reading it, "but the vision who came into the office selling them was beauteous and young, with dimples and a ravishing smile, so I took five. What shall I do with 'em?"

"Why don't you give them to your wife and daughter?" suggested the real-estate broker.

"Not much" declared the lawyer. "I used to bring them home, but I found it was too expensive. If the tickets happened to be for some classy affair they'd make me tog out my best dress suit, no matter how tired I was, drive them down to the scene of festivities, or hire a taxi, and they invariably insisted upon a supper as a final windup.

"If the tickets were for some ordinary doings, I'd get a calling down for wasting my good money on such things. So now I don't say anything about them at all to my loving family, but slip them to the bookkeeper or the cleaning woman."

"Why not use a little diplomacy in side-stepping these office disturbers?" asked the insurance man. "Take my own case. Miss Pothooks used to be my stenographer, and while her good looks were chiefly conspicuous by their absence, still she was a very efficient worker. Efficiency was her middle name. She got married about two years ago and I gave her a set of flat silver as a token of my regret at having to give her up. Capable stenographers are a rarity and I sighed to think that I was losing her forevermore. But not so.

"Having a great deal of leisure time, she joined numerous clubs and societies and it became the absorbing interest of her life to go round selling tickets for the money-making affairs of the different organizations she belonged to. It was the height of her ambition to sell more tickets than anybody else in one club.

"She picked on me right from the start and she has been coming to the office right along to dispose of the pesky things. She'd always start out with 'I just happened to be downtown shopping so I thought I'd drop in,' and so on, and calmly place from two to six tickets on my desk and then wait expectantly for the money."

"Couldn't you stall her off some way?"

"I tell her one day that I didn't have enough cash on hand to pay for them but she said she'd take a check, thank you. Her tickets nearly always called for dances and repeatedly I informed her I didn't dance, but she'd merely smile sweetly and say that they'd be so and so much as though I were hard of hearing and didn't get it the first time. Anyway, knowing her deadly efficiency, I realized that, if she set out to sell tickets, sell them she would, no matter what the obstacles.

"Yesterday when she came in I had an inspiration. I told her I had left my checkbook home, but wouldn't she like to ride out to the house and see Mrs. Willits, as she might take some tickets. She jumped at my suggestion, and said she'd go right out at once.

"When she left I went to the phone, I knew my wife was out, so when the maid answered the phone I announced that a young woman was coming to the house and that when she asked for Mrs. Willits, she was to call my sister-in-law, who, being the wife of my brother, is also Mrs. Willits."

"Ah!" said the lawyer.

"You see my sister-in-law fell and injured her knee while visiting us, and has to hobble around on crutches until her knee is better. So when the former Miss Pothooks arrived at the house and asked for Mrs. Willets, the maid called in, as per instructions. When the visitor saw the invalid slowly navigating into the room on crutches, she jumped up and said, 'Oh, pardon me! I came to sell you tickets for a dance, but of course you couldn't use the tickets at all!' and rushed off, with my sister-in-law staring after her in amazement.

"She called me up last night just before I left the office, and apologized for all the tickets she had made me buy in the past, saying that she never knew that Mrs. Willits was lame, and why hadn't I ever told her, and now she understood why I never danced, and she would never come into the office with any more tickets to sell, never! She had never seen my wife, but of course it wasn't my fault that she mistook the one Mrs. Willits for the other."

"Diplomacy, all right!" approved the real-estate broker. "You should have been a lawyer. And to think you didn't have to buy a single ticket this time."

"Well," admitted the insurance man, shamefacedly, "I sent her a check to cover the price of ten tickets—as an offering of gratitude for future freedom."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Rush to the Cities and Some of Its Results.

Mr. Editor: One of the most marked changes of recent years, is the rapid increase of the urban population, which includes as a general basis of calculation, people residing in places of from 2500 inhabitants up. In 1880 urban population was only 28.6 of the total, or a little more than one-quarter; in 1890, it was 35.4 per cent; in 1900, 40 per cent; in 1910, 45.8 per cent; in 19.20, 51.4 per cent., or more than one-half of the population of the United States, or, 54,304,603; as against 51,406,017 in places of less than 2500 population. In places of from 8000 up, in 1920 lived 43.8 per cent. of the population; such places being cities in the stricter sense. But cities are not producers of the raw material of food, clothing, houses, metal or mineral materials; in short of the necessaries of life. The United States and its institutions were founded by farmers as a class, and well and solidly founded. But with conditions wholly changed, results will be changed. In New England as a whole 79.2 per cent of the population is urban, and only 10.8 per cent rural; in Rhode Island, only 7.5 per cent; in Massachusetts 5.2; in New York 17.3; in New Jersey 21.6 per cent. It is plainly evident that with transportation cut off by strikes, or otherwise, states in such a predicament would starve, factories would soon have to stop, and in winter there would be great suffering from lack of coal; in fact, there are samples of it now. What are the sufferers going to do about it? Have the government taken over the railroads? It was tried to some degree, during the war, at least, far enough to prove that the government doesn't know how to run railroads. But the government, if it is a government at all, is to govern; not to abdicate, and leave us at the mercy of strikers, coal barons, or profiteers. If majorities rule, the fact stares the rural population in the face, that the majority is in the cities, and far better organized and combined for getting its way. Farmers, awake!

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Robert Underwood Johnson, poet and man of letters, and who served as United States ambassador to Italy during the latter part of the Wilson Administration, celebrates his seventeenth birthday anniversary today. A native of Washington, D. C., Mr. Johnson, after graduating from Earlham College, joined the staff of the Century Magazine when only twenty years old. For many years he was the right-hand man of Richard Watson Gilder, the editor of the magazine, whom he succeeded in the editorial chair in 1909. During the late war he led a campaign among American authors to raise funds with which to send ambulances to the Italian army. In yet another department of civics he has been a pioneering, hard-working figure, persistently giving his efforts to achieve fine public ends. Niagara Falls, the Hetch Hetchy Valley Park Reservation in California, and the national park system have all had him for a resolute champion.

WORK

Some work for wealth, some work for joy,
As if life were a game.
Some toil and struggle and all arts employ
To make themselves a name.
Some work with pleasure, some complain
About the daily task.
Some are contented with the daily gain,
And that is all they ask.

Some work with hope, some in despair,
Some view their work with pride.
Some find the daily burden hard to bear,
Always dissatisfied.
Some work to banish tedium,
Without work life would pall.
Some always work—and there are some
Who do not work at all!

knew her loved her. She was a distinguished woman, tall and dignified in appearance, but with a face of such sweet loveliness that banished any thought of aloofness or frigidity. Always calm and quiet in her bearing, never losing her self control under any circumstances, her radiant smile won the hearts of all who came in contact with her. But all this physical beauty came from a beauty of soul and mind that shone in her eyes, which her husband described as being "deep and unutterable."

Frances Longfellow entered heart and soul into her husband's work and did a great deal to help him. His eyes had become over-strained and she relieved him by reading aloud to him whenever possible. She also aided him by suggesting subjects for poems, as in the instance of "The Arsenal at Springfield." She was of great assistance to him in compiling some of the books he had published.

Her tragic death left a household bereaved and disconsolate. Mrs. Longfellow succumbed to injuries she received in a fire. Her husband always reticent, was perhaps the least demonstrative among the mourners in giving vent to sorrow, but her death left a wound in his heart that never healed.

Stories That Recall Others

Her Intentions.

Mrs. A. met Mary, who she had recommended to a neighbor for a situation. "How are you getting on at your new place?" asked Mrs. A.

"I don't intend to ma'am," replied Mary.

An Understanding of Holly.

A mother and her two sons, age five and three, were shopping. Entering a down town store the children became very quiet, and Dick took hold of his brother's hand admonishing him not to make any noise "in here as some one must be dead."

The remark being overheard it was ascertained that because of the holly wreaths tied with ribbon, a part of the store decorations for the holiday, the youngster had gotten an entirely wrong impression.

SEEKING BETTER CLASS OF MOVIES IN STATE

Replies from all sections of the state representing the sentiment of civic, welfare and religious organizations, as well as commercial and manufacturing interests, in the matter of a cooperative plan for bringing to Connecticut a better class of motion pictures, indicate, that without a doubt, this state will take the initiative in a movement that promises to be nation-wide in its scope.

The present plan, which contemplates a state-wide committee to consist of representatives of various organizations throughout the state, together with representatives of moving picture distributors and theatre owners, was instigated by the Hartford Council of Women's Clubs at the instance of the Hartford Theatre men.

At a meeting last month, when delegates representing civic, welfare and religious organizations endorsed a tentative plan advanced by the theatre owners, in which a friendly cooperative idea for the improvement of the motion picture industry in the state was projected, Rev. William T. Hooper of Hartford was named as chairman of the committee on organization.

"The response to the invitations sent to 100 organizations and individuals to participate in the movement has been immediate and most encouraging," Mr. Hooper said. "Already representative people in Hartford, New Haven, Willimantic, Bridgeport, Norwich and Jewett City have replied stating their belief in the ultimate success of such a movement."

On January 17 at the Old State House in Hartford a meeting of the general committee will be held to discuss ways and means of furthering the plans under consideration. Ideas are being crystallized for presentation to this meeting, which will develop a permanent, smoothly running organization. It is desired to have a central body which will be representative of the varied interests of the state.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE HOLDS SESSIONS AT CENTRAL CHURCH

The second of the three Teachers' Institutes was held Thursday afternoon and evening at the Central Baptist church, the attendance being larger than at the first Institute held Wednesday at the Third Baptist church in Greeneville.

Previous to the opening of the afternoon session there was a meeting for the women for the study of "Missions," led by Mrs. William Thayer.

The afternoon session opened at 4.30 o'clock with story telling. The subject was "The Wealth of Story Material in the Bible," and the meeting was conducted by Miss Ida L. Lillibridge and Mrs. Lucy Stock Chapin of Hartford. The meeting was well attended and the stories were of interest, pointing out the many stories in the Bible that could be used in church school teaching.

An appetising supper was served by the women of the church at 5.45 o'clock and the evening session opened at 7 o'clock with departmental conferences. Mrs. Chapin was in charge of the children's division. Rev. William T. Thayer, of Hartford, the young People's division, and Rev. E. C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church, took charge of the adult division.

At 8 o'clock Rev. William T. Thayer, state director of religious education, gave a most instructive talk on "The Pupil," explaining how Sunday school work could be carried on to interest the pupil, and to show him the story of the Bible.

At 8 o'clock Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church, spoke on "The Teachings of Jesus." Jesus, he said, the Master, is the great teacher and the wonder man of prayer. He also went on to explain the importance of prayer in the life of every Christian worker, when to pray, and how to pray.

The institute closes today (Friday) with afternoon and evening sessions at the First Baptist church, the hours to be the same as on previous meetings. There is every indication that the closing meetings will be attended by even more teachers of church school pupils than the preceding meetings.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting and operations fail? and danger of an operation.

Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal tablet remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEMROID, now sold by Lee & Osgood and druggists generally, that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the internal cause, by freeing blood circulation in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation. There is no reason why it should not do the same for you.

HOME RULE ACT PROVES FAILURE, SAYS COMMISSION

Harford, Jan. 11.—Repeal of the so-called home rule act is recommended to the general assembly in the report of the special committee on uniformity of municipal charters which was handed to Governor Charles A. Templeton today by ex-Senator Arthur S. Bowers of Manchester, chairman of the commission. The proposal for the establishment of uniform municipal charters, which led to the creation of the commission, is abandoned on the ground that the commission is convinced that "the relief sought does not lie in that direction."

"The conclusion seems inescapable, from all the facts and information obtained, that the attempt to provide home rule has thus far failed," says the report.

"We are of the opinion that our long-existing system of having the general assembly approve charters is in line with good government," says the report, "but that more latitude should be given than heretofore to municipalities in managing purely local affairs at home."

According to the commission, the home rule act seems to have been an attempt to provide for towns means for adopting, amending or repealing charters without recourse to the general assembly, but the law is so worded, in the opinion of the commission, as to make it impossible for towns to act with certainty under it and it has practically been a dead letter from the date of its enactment in 1915.

In support of its conclusion that home rule has failed to work under the existing statutes, the commission includes in its report a table showing that the number of bills concerning municipal government submitted to the general assembly had apparently not decreased by reason of the home rule legislation. An analysis showed that, on the average, towns have been coming to the legislature with greater frequency, since the passage of the home rule act, for the granting of specific powers that were conferred upon all towns by the home rule act.

The law is found defective and the chief endeavor of the commission was to make clear the intent of the general assembly. From its examination of the special laws, the commission formed the opinion that there are particulars, other than those set forth in the present law, concerning which municipalities should be permitted to exercise home rule. Some of these additional matters are:

1—Establishment of budget systems.
2—Making rules concerning the publication of notices.
3—Regulation of traffic.

It was under the home rule statutes that an attempt was made last year to secure the adoption of a new charter for the city of Norwich, but the proposed new charter which had been prepared by a special commission was slaughtered by a big vote at the annual city election last June.

Avon—The Girls' club gave a shower to Miss Nellie Collins at the recreation room. Seventy-five were present. The numerous articles were presented by Mrs. Samuel Goodwin.

STATE BODY ADOPTS NORWICH GRANGE RESOLUTION ON FOREST FIRES

A resolution from Norwich grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry, in favor of larger appropriations for forest fire fighting was adopted by the Connecticut State Grange, holding its 58th annual session in Hartford Thursday at Foot Guard hall.

Hearty support in every way to the enforcement of the Volstead act in the state was voted and continued opposition to daylight saving was also recorded. Upon favorable report of the committee on legislation a resolution was adopted endorsing the attitude of Governor Templeton as expressed in his inaugural message relating to daylight saving time. The legislative committee was further instructed to work for the passage of an amendment to Section 627 of the Public Acts of 1921, which deals with standard time, looking to the imposition of a penalty for failure to obey the law. At present the law carries no penalty, it was explained.

A resolution was also adopted urging revision of the motor vehicle law by making a uniform rate for lightweight vehicles carrying 1,250 pounds or less at the rate of $15. The present rate for motor trucks of this character is $22.50. The legislative committee was instructed to work for the passage of such an amendment.

In another resolution adopted at the closing session in the afternoon it was urged that the farm credit law be amended so as to enable the farmers to get credit on their livestock; and that the state direct tax on towns be repealed.

Among the other resolutions was one condemning the reinstatement of "Fatty" Arbuckle and producers for producing pictures with actors or actresses "who are known to be degenerate or who have so grossly violated the laws of God and man." The national grange at its next meeting will be asked to urge each member of the order to shun the halls or theatres attempting to produce such plays or films.

Other resolutions urged: Cleansing of the scale and shell fisheries which it was claimed have become polluted by refuse from factories and city sewage allowed to go into streams and rivers, thereby endangering the health of livestock.

Passage of an act by the legislature appropriating $15,000 a year, in accordance with the maternity act, for the promotion of hygiene in maternity and child welfare.

UNION STREET COASTERS, HIT FENCE AT LIBRARY

Sliding is now the first joy in the life of the youngsters of the city and on nearly every hill in the city where sliding is allowed can be seen the gangs entering one of the best of winter sports.

As yet no accidents have been reported from sliding accidents, but one crowd of boys using a "ripper" on Union street Thursday night had several narrow escapes. Once they threw themselves from their "ripper" to save crashing into the telegraph pole in front of the Otis Library, and on two other occasions crashed into the iron fence on the Church street side of the library property, breaking the steering apparatus.

One party of four from Church street was evidently rounded up and brought into police headquarters by Officer Charles Ebbets who was sent out by Captain D. J. Twomey to stop the sliding on the hill, especially after one double ripper had shot across Union square and down into Bath street, just missing hitting an automobile. The four boys were given a stiff talking to and ordered to get off the hill and go home.

Sleighing parties are out every night and if the weather continues cold there is a certainty of fine sleighing for many weeks to come for the snow is packed down hard and rests on a bed of ice.

Situations were secured as follows: Hartford 531, New Haven 811, Bridgeport 788, Waterbury 455, Norwich 347; total 2,932.

Of all applications for employment, 80.5 per cent. were supplied as compared with 84 per cent. in November, more males being furnished than females.

SQUIRRELS' SHAGBARK HARVEST MEANS SEVERE WINTER

One of the local weather prophets who says he knows a sign that never has failed predicts that this winter is to be a hard one. Another well known weather prophet states that he forecasted a severe winter in the fall and he is certain that his predictions of a few months ago will come out right.

MISSING TAFTVILLE GIRL IS FOUND IN NEW YORK

Annie Bontempo, the 13 year old Taftville girl, who disappeared from her home last Sunday has been found in New York, according to word that has come here to the police and to John R. Bowman, local agent of the Connecticut Humane society.

She was found there destitute by the Travelers Aid society, to whose agent, it is reported she told the story that her parents had put her out of her home and that she came to New York with $50 which she had drawn out of the bank.

The New York society communicated with headquarters of the Connecticut Humane society at Hartford, which requested Mr. Bowman to look up the case here. He learned that what the girl told of being put out of her home was untrue. Her parents are to go to New York Saturday after her, as the case is to come up at 10 a. m. before the children's court.

The girl is now in charge of the society for the prevention of cruelty to children.

PROPOSING TWELVE CHANGES IN THE SCHOOL LAWS

Twelve changes in the present state school laws are proposed in recommendations which the state board of education has prepared for consideration of the legislature and which will be presented at an early date.

The changes contemplate the discontinuance of the present department of Americanization and the substitution of the division of adult education with the recommendation that the state bear at least one-half of the cost of removing illiteracy. This plan calls for the expenditure of $160,000 for the next two years, or almost double the amount available for the 1921-1923 period.

In this connection it is interesting to point out that at the time of the last census Connecticut was the only state in the union to show an increase in the percentage of illiteracy. The total illiteracy in the state in 1920 was 67,260. The present state director of Americanization is Robert C. Deming.

The state board's plan also calls town school authorities in regard to transportation of children of school age by penalizing any town which unduly delays this duty.

A suggestion is made that normal school scholarships be made available for a larger number of girls from the rural districts and that the amount of scholarship be increased from $150 to $200 a year.

Fire Escape Improvement.

The board suggests an amendment to the statutes describing the character of fire escapes which schools must have and extending the penalties of existing laws to cover violations of the law regarding fire alarms.

The proposed changes are a part of the legislative program of the board, and it is likely that other bills will come up for consideration in the near future, said Commissioner A. B. Meredith.

Regarding the proposal of an act relating to adult education of non-English speaking foreigners, the board suggests that sections 1, 2 and 3 of chapter 286 of the public acts of 1919 and chapter 277 of the public acts of 1921 be repealed and that a new law be enacted calling for the removal of the present department of Americanization and the substitution of a division of adult education. This calls for classes for instruction in English for adults unable to speak, read or write the language, and also for instruction in geography, arithmetic and United States history.

State to Pay One-Half.

The board asks that the classes so established be maintained jointly by the local school authorities and the state, the latter to pay one-half of the total amounts expended for these classes.

"Under the present practice," Commissioner Meredith said "the state board pays one-half of the salary of the local directors of Americanization up to $1,500 a year, and also pays $4 a pupil in average attendance at classes for non-English speaking adults. At present the local authorities bear the greater part of the expense of the classes, and the opinion generally accepted is that the problem of adult illiteracy is a state problem and that the state should bear at least one-half of the cost of the solution. The plan of support and organization proposed has operated successfully in other states."

To conduct this work on the same basis as that of the two years just passed, the proposed plan will cost the state about $63,000 more for the approaching two years than during 1921-1923. With the probable expansion due to the flexibility of the plan, the cost for the two years would total about $150,000, Commissioner Meredith estimated.

Under the existing situation, the towns pay about three-quarters of the expense of removing illiteracy and the state pays the remainder.

Would Penalize Towns.

Other proposals by the state board are as follows:

Amendment to Section 836 is suggested to penalize any town which unduly delays providing adequate school facilities for children under 16 when, after a public hearing, the committee has been directed to provide these facilities by transportation or otherwise.

For "Handicapped" Children.

Sanitary Conditions.

An amendment is recommended to enlarge the powers of prosecution agents of the state to include, in addition to prosecutions for violation of the attendance and employment laws, direct prosecution for violation of existing laws regarding sanitary provisions or means of lighting and ventilating any school house.

A bill providing that required instruction in citizenship shall be taught in all private as well as public elementary schools is proposed.

A bill is suggested to apply the same conditions of construction to private schools of eight or more rooms as are now required of public schools.

SAYS EACH EXECUTOR HAD DISTINCT VALUE

In sustaining the finding of Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court in awarding a total of $435,000 in fees to the five executors of the estate of Morton F. Plant, where the Groton probate court had allowed $1,024,366.99, Chief Justice Wheeler of the supreme court, who wrote that court's opinion, in which the other justices concurred, went into the matter at length. His opinion pointed out that each executor had his separate and distinct value to the administration of the estate.

Morton F. Plant died Nov. 4, 1918, and his will gave the executors very broad powers as to the continuance of his business and as to his investments. His estate was inventoried at over $23,000,000 and up to the day of the hearing in the superior court over $36,000,000 of the funds of the estate has passed through the hands of the executors. The debts and charges of the estate were about $16,000. At the first meeting of the executors it was voted that the business of the estate be conducted by Messrs Sullivan and Shearer and the United States Trust Company and that upon their failure to agree upon any matter it should be referred to all the executors before action should be taken. From that time on these three had practically full power in the handling of the estate, which was in their hands for nearly three years before it was finally settled. In his finding of facts upon which the case went to the supreme court Judge Brown points out that the whole board or trustees met eleven times and discussed and passed upon actions of the three active trustees. The trust company had most to do with the custody and transferring upon sales of the securities, Mr. Shearer had the legal matters to handle and Mr. Sullivan had the handling of the accounts, being familiar with the conditions of most of the properties. The son and widow were not particularly qualified to administer this large estate, while the other three trustees were also qualified and for years had been the testator's trusted advisors or business associates and were familiar with the testator's business matters and financial problems, and also with general financial and business conditions." He further pointed out that at the time of the death of Morse many of his business affairs were involved and needed the broad powers given the trustees and used by them to save the estate from tremendous losses.

In his opinion Chief Justice Wheeler points out that the appellants apparently seek to have a judgment of the superior court set aside by having the supreme court reopen the case and decide upon issues of fact not embraced in the findings of the superior court as grounds for the reduction of the awards to the executors. He cites many decisions in which, it is specifically ruled that the supreme court cannot go behind the findings of the trial court and its jurisdiction does not extend to the retrial, by the testimony of the facts.

"The defendant could," he says, "by their motion to correct have all the subordinate facts which were omitted incorporated in the findings.

"Upon the facts incorporated in the findings, the opinion states there is no error in the award found upon which it may be set aside. In regard to the award being reasonable the finding says: In this connection, reasonable means what is fair in view of the size of the estate, the responsibilities involved, the character of the work required, the special problems and difficulties met in doing the work, the results achieved, the knowledge, skill and judgment exercised of and used by the executor in the speed and promptitude in which the work had been settled and the [illegible] required, and any other circumstances which may appear in the case to be relevant and material to this determination. Upon this basis the opinion states that the "unitary compensation" principle cannot be made to apply to the case.

By mere reference to the decision on this appeal as a "companion case" Justice Wheeler disposes of the reasons of William H. Blodgett, tax commissioner, against the trustees, finding no error in the superior court decision by Judge Brown on the same grounds.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Mrs. Eunice Persis Wright is dead at the home of he rbrother-in-law, Henry J. Paine, at North Foster, where she had made her home for years. She was the wife of Assel J. Wright, who has filled a position with the state board of education at Hartford for the past 40 years. Mr. Wright was with her when she died.

Mrs. Wright was born in Foster Aug. 3, 1849, a daughter of James J. and Eleanor Fisher Cook. Her father was the proprietor of the famed Cook's store, which served the people of the countryside for miles around and was a landmark for a great many years. Mrs. Wright was the last of the members of the Cook family.

Mrs. Adeline A. Culley, 67, for years a resident at East Killingly, is dead at the home of her daughter in Pennenganett, R. I., where she has been living for the past seven years. Mrs. Culley was a native of Putnam. She leaves two daughters and four sons.

The homeward boat train of the New Haven road being detained at Dayville Wednesday night through a blockade of the line resulting from the derailment of a car on a freight train, and eventually sent back to Putnam and then rerouted to New London by way of Willimantic and Norwich, news matter to have been forwarded by mail for this column did not get through, as pouches at Danielson and all points south could not be collected by the train.

This week's meeting of the borough physicians was with Dr. C. H. Kingsbury. Dr. George M. Burroughs presided. Sudden deaths including those resulting from motor vehicle accidents were made a subject of discussion by the physicians.

New London Vocational school's basketball team will make its first appearance of the season in Danielson at the town hall this (Friday) evening and its coming holds promise of providing a real contest with the Killingly High school team, which is reported in good condition for the game. The game is certain to attract a large attendance, as it is rated in prospect as likely to be one of the best games on the high school schedule.

There is a possibility, remote as it may be at the present time, that the next major building operation to be undertaken by St. James' parish will be the enlargement of the parochial school on Franklin street. The present building was erected in 1857. The attendance of pupils has grown so that the registration is now approaching the 500 mark and the need of additional quarters it making itself felt.

An addition of brick, three stories in height, providing four additional rooms and an enlarged parish hall, with such remodeling and brick veneering of the present structure as to make a harmonious whole, would cost, it is estimated, in the neighborhood of $50,000. This, however, is not too heavy a financial burden for the parish to assume in the interest of education, especially in view of the fact that the parish is free of debt and has a surplus account.

Despite the severe weather of the past six weeks, ice at the Quinebaug lake, where several thousand tons are harvested each winter to meet the supply of the borough, is not heay enough yet to undertake cutting operations. This is due to a series of unfortunate weather changes. All preparations to start cutting on New Year's day had been made when a sweeping southeast rain storm came along and so reduced the ice as to make it too light for harvesting. And then came the series of snow storms that have served much the same purpose as a blanket over the ice, which has not gained in thickness as would have been the case if the snow were absent. A thawing period or another heavy rain followed by a few snappy days would bring the ice back to cutting standard.

There were 30 fire alarms to which the Danielson department was asked to respond during 1922, the records of Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department show. The most serious of these, within the limits of the borough, was the one that destroyed a garage building, owned by Joseph Bodo, in Union street. This building has since been replaced.

In a letter to the sporting editor elsewhere in the paper this morning Robert Pellerin and Norman Reeves of the town team basketball management reply to aspersions cast upon them by Harold Shippee, manager of the Bristol, R. I., team, in a letter on the sporting page in Thursday morning's paper.

Next Tuesday evening Captain Sidney Dunn, U. S. A., will be at the state armory for the purpose of making the annual inspection of the Service battery, F. A., C. N. G. Captain Dunn during the course of Tuesday also will carry out the annual federal armory inspection.

This is a week in which motoring has been reduced to the lowest minimum of the year. Even the state highways represent tough traveling conditions despite the best efforts to keep them as free of snow and as even as possible.

It is of special local interest that Representative E. L. Darbie has been named house chairman of the committee on engrossed bills and also as a member of the judiciary committee, while Representative Williams is named as a member of the important committee on incorporations.

Thursday morning at her home in Dayville the funeral of Mrs. Julia Tigue was held, with services at St. Joseph's church, Rev. Ignatius Kost being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. The body was placed in the receiving vault at St. Joseph's cemetery. The bearers were Patrick Riley, Henry Brooks, Thomas Clarie, James Driscoll, William Gilooley and Harvey Baker. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

At Wauregan Thursday afternoon the funeral of Omer Maynard, 2 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Romeo Maynard, was held, burial being in the Sacred Heart cemetery. Louis E. Kennedy had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The death of Michael Weaver, 66, a resident of Dayville, occurred Thursday morning at St. Joseph's hospital in Willimantic, where he had been a patient for some time. The body was taken to his home in Dayville in charge of Undertaker L. E. Kennedy. Mr. Weaver was a native of Ireland. He had lived in Brooklyn for many years before going to Dayville to make his home, and while in the latter place had been an employe of the Assawaga Woolen company. He leaves his wife and several sons.

Harry B. Magoon has been named as assistant treasurer of the Danielson Trust company, a new office created by that institution, with which he has been connected for a little more than two years. This announcement is made following the annual meeting of the organization.

For some time past Mr. Magoon has been engaged as outside representative for the Danielson Trust company and the Brooklyn Savings bank, his work taking him into all the surrounding communities, in each of which he is very well known and has many friends. In his new position as assistant treasurer of the trust company Mr. Magoon will co-operate with Treasurer Clifford H. Starkweather in building the business of the bank. Mr. Magoon's former position as outside representative will be taken by J. Kimball Hargraves, who has been with the trust company in a clerical capacity.

The Danielson Trust company's board of directors for 1923 is the same as at the close of 1922: J. Arthur Atwood, William W. Adams, Sidney W. Bard, W. Irving Bullard, George H. Call, N. Lorne Greig, F. A. Jacobs, D. E. Jette, Angus Park, Clarence A. Potter, Frank T. Preston, Alfred L. Reed, Clifford H. Starkweather, Everett T. Tillinghast, F. W. Tillinghast, A. Putnam Woodward, F. E. Bitgood.

The fact that he was impudent to Chief John McFarland was a contributing cause for the appearance of Horace Fuld of Califon, N. J., before Judge W. Fenner Woodward of the town court Wednesday afternoon, to answer to a charge of operating a motor vehicle that showed 1922 registration plates of the state of New Jersey.

Fuld boobed blithely into town Wednesday in a closed car such as had made a certain Detroiter rich and ridiculous. The car attracted the attention of Chief McFarland because of its being without new registration plates. He talked to Fuld about the matter and Fuld promptly told him (the chief) that he didn't know anything about the law, for one thing, and some other things that were neither fitting to such an occasion or at all diplomatic. In fact Fuld was blunt—and the officer called the bluff.

It did not appear in any of the subsequent proceedings that Fuld, who said he has not been in New Jersey since December 3, has extended himself to secure new registration plates, which he could have had forwarded to him if he had but made the effort to get them. Incidentally, his driver's license, also issued in New Jersey expired with the end of the year. And here he was in Connecticut on the 10th day of the new year complacently going about with neither proper registration for his car nor legal authority to operate it. Counsel that he has asked for advise before going into court smiled upon hearing what he had to say in justification of his going about the country with an improperly registered car and without a driver's license and told him that his one best bet was to make the most reasonable possible settlement with the court and paid a fine of $5 and costs, a total of $15.74.

The lesson did not appear to make much impression upon him, subsequent developments showed. After paying the fine and costs he went to the state police barracks and asked for permission—a written one, by the way—to go along with the old plates. This was refused and Fuld told to put his car into a garage and leave it there until he could obtain 1923 registration plates either from New Jersey, Connecticut or some other state. Instead of accepting the advice he declared he would drive along and take a chance of getting by, a decision that if put into practice is sure to land him in court again if he remains in Connecticut.

Fuld is a traveling man and came into this state from Rhode Island, where he seems to have escaped any punishment for driving an unregistered car.

Fear is expressed by sportsmen that the long drawn out series of ice and snow storms is playing havoc with such flocks of wild game birds as remain in this territory. The feeding grounds of the birds are for the most part frozen over and snowed under and their foraging can be carried on only with the greatest difficulty. There has been some talk of distributing grain in haunts of the birds, but nothing had been done about it up to Wednesday.

The Danielson Rod and Gun club is the name of an organization formed on Tuesday evening at a meeting held at the home of F. E. Cunneen. Richard Bannigan was elected president, Henry Lagoe, vice president, and Harold B. Atwood, who was chiefly instrumental in promoting the club, secretary-treasurer, Sidney H. Perry was named as field captain.

About 20 were in attendance and there was marked enthusiasm over the plans of the club to lend its efforts toward obtaining fish and game for stocking purposes in all the territory hereabouts, to promote trap shooting and rifle practice.

It is anticipated that the club will have between 75 and 100 members by spring and that these sportsmen banded together for the general promotion of good hunting and fishing conditions will obtain results that many have wished for, but never have been able to accomplish as individuals. The next meeting of the club is to be held on February 13. In the meantime the officers and members will be busy in increasing the membership.

PUTNAM

A state police officer was in Putnam, Thursday, returning from Marrisville in the town of Woodstock, where a venerable couple had made complaint that they were made targets of children's jibes, whistles and catcalls. The officer learned who the chief disturbers are and unless the hectering ceases arrests may be made. It was just such actions on the part of certain individuals in Moosup that so preyed upon the mind of a man there that he finally appeared one night with a shot gun and fired into the crowd seriously injuring a number of people. It resulted in the otherwise harmless old man being confined in a state institution. It is the duty of parents to see that children do not act in this aggravating manner toward their elders when those elders are so constituted that they resent it.

At least one crosswalk in the business section of the city was cleaned Thursday morning by the street department. It was noted by pedestrians that the street cleaners spent many hours in carting off snow so that vehicles could move about freely but that no attention was paid to the cross walks and in front of the Congregational church the snow remained almost knee deep. A young lady who works in a down-town office was obliged to pass and repass and often filled her flopping goloshes with the fine but dirty snow. She finally eased her mind to her employer by telling him what she thought of the action of the street department. The man passed the word along to headquarters. Whether it was through gallantry or just because they had finally gotten around to it is not known, but however, between ten and eleven o'clock Thursday morning city employes got into action with their shovels and the young lady came back from a trip to the post office all smiles.

Notice has been received from Mrs. Wilson, state president of the W. C. T. U. that the W. C. T. U. conference which was to have been held in the Baptist church in Putnam this Friday has been indefinitely postponed.

According to figures given out by Charles H. Brown, treasurer of the city of Putnam, the total city debt is $157,925. This is an increase over a year ago of $8,570, which includes the cost of a motor driven hook and ladder truck purchased for the fire department for $7,500. The above does not include the bonded debt of the water department which is $300,000 the bonds securing which are being paid off with earnings of the department.

A class registration including the courses pursued at the Putnam high school has been drawn up to January 1st. The senior registration is 14 boys and 20 girls; no withdrawals. Junior registration, 19 boys, 27 girls; 3 withdrawals. Sophomore registration, 19 boys, 32 girls; 2 withdrawals. Freshmen, registration, 40 boys, 56 girls; 2 withdrawals. Special students, 2 boys, 1 girl. This make a total registration of 231 pupils with an actual registration in attendance January 1st of 224. The registration by courses is as follows: Seniors-Clasical course, 10; general course, 13; commercial course 20; co-operative course, 2. Juniors Classical course, 10; general course 14; commercial course 18; co-operative course, 2, Sophomores classical course 12, general course 6, commercial course 21. Freshman classical course 21, general course 13, commercial course, 45, The totals are: classical course, 53; general course, 51; commercial course 114; co-operative course 4; specials 3.

The annual church Day supper of the Congregational church was held in the church gymnasium, Thursday evening. This is the one time each year when all members of the parish sit at the table together. Reports of officers were read during the evening and a business session was held. The supper was served at 6:30 p. m., by the Ladies' Social Circle. Several new members have recently been added to the Junior Choir. They are: Doris Dean, Natalie Dean, Janet Eaton, Eunice Hanton, Astrid Hermanson, Junita Jordan, Dorothy Mansfield, Effie Perry, Pauline Rawley, Maria Stoumbelis, and Newart Varbedian, Ada Chandler and Edith Child have been transferred to hte Senior Choir.

Miss Elma Martin, nurse in charge of Lieutenant Ambrose Moriarty has been in Putnam from Fort Banks on a visit. Lieutenant Moriarty is reported in good spirits and in his usual state of health. For many years he has been unable to move a muscle and has to have an attendant constantly by his side. The effort to have his rank and pay raised to that of Captaincy is still going forward. A bill to this effect has passed the senate and will be acted on in the house.

The Putnam State Trade School will contribute to the annual industrial winter exposition to be held in Hartford, January 23 to 27 inclusive. The entire Connecticut vocational trade and home economics departments will be represented showing work done chiefly in the cotton textile, architectural drafting and home economics departments and it is expected that this year's exhibit will be very complete. The enrollment of the school is about the same as last year with a larger percentage of boys taking the regular trade courses.

Miss Olina LaRonte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harmidias LaBonte, Providence street, has gone to Chicago where she will join her sister, Miss Yvonne LaBonte in a training school for nurses at the Burnside hospital.

Miss Rhoda Gilpatric, who has been spending the holidays with her parents, State Treasurer and Mrs. G. Harold Gilpatric, returned to her school, in Natic, Mass., Wednesday.

Miss Alma Martin of Winthrop, Mass., is visiting Mrs. J. M. Talem, Grove street.

The Waterman Worsted Company's mill is running nights to keep up with orders. The concern manufactures high grade worsteds.

The French Canadiene Cercle d'Advancement has elected the following officers: President, Alexander Gilman; first vice president Alfret Bonneville; second vice president, Alphonse Beausoleil; secretary, George Potvin; treasurer, Joseph Perreault.

The Woman's Board of the Day Kimball hospital will hold a special meeting this Friday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

There is considerable complaint regarding the city water. People find that much air comes through the pipes and that there is a disagreeable taste to the water. This is unusual at this time of year.

Hyde Smith of Worcester has been in charge of the Bradley theatre a few days this week during the absence of his partner, Jacob Alpert.

Thursday included a lot in a Dayville Cemetery. The grantee admitted that it was for occupancy but express the wish that the time might be considerably deferred.

The daily snow storm was noted by its obsence Thursday but one is on the way. Henry Trudeau, foreman of the work train crew of the N. Y., N. H. & H. received a telegram Thursday evening to be ready as two feet of snow was expected within twenty-four hours.

Railroad men have been recalling that it was just ten years ago that Ralph Jardine, a drunken roundhouse employe of Worcester made his famous ride which ended when he ran a locomotive into the engine of the boat train which was stopped at the Webster railroad station. The man in an intoxicated condition climbed into the cab of a locomotive at Worcester pulled the throttle wide open and made a run to Putnam at a furious rate of speed. Here he reversed the engine and started back but at Webster found the track occupied and ran head on into the standing train. He was injured and arrested and later convicted in the superior court at Worcester. It was said at the time that he had as a companion a Putnam man but this was never verified.

Tuesday evening some person near the railroad station saw a blaze near the Manhasset mill and believing the mill was on fire notified Chief Ralph E. Thurston of the fire department. A three stroke alarm was rung followed by a box alarm and the two motor trucks at fire headquarters in Union square responded. From appearances as the firemen neared the building on the east side of Canal street the whole interior seemed to be ablaze. It developed, however, that the fire was not in the building but on the south side of the structure and the glare showing through the windows of the mill gave the appearance of its being on fire inside. The flames shot high into the air and the glare was visible from a considerable distance. The blaze was caused by the burning of a Christmas tree and decorations used by the company in giving a Christmas entertainment to its employes. The all out signal was rung in as soon as it was discovered that the building was not on fire.

Putnam lodge of Elks has brushed aside the $300 obstacle which has stood in the way of Putnam's having a public coasting place and skating rink. At the meeting of the lodge, Tuesday evening, it was unanimously voted that a sum not to exceed three hundred dollars be appropriated for the above purpose and the exalted ruler was authorized to appoint a committee to have charge of the plan. The place under consideration is a lot of land on the bank of the Little river near what is known as "Tourtellotte's" or the old golf ground. City Engineer George W. Perry has looked the ground over and has estimated that it will be possible to provide for flowage of the low land at a cost of approximately $300 and the owner of the land is said to be willing that the land shall be flooded. Nearby hills make it an ideal place for coasting and if the project is carried through it will give the boys and girls of the city a place to coast and skate that will be absolutely safe from danger of accident from collision with vehicles or of drowning while skating as the pond will not be of any considerable depth.

LIBERTY HILL

All who were interested in the Mother Goose entertainment recently given will be pleased to know that a party was given last Friday evening at the church rooms for all who took part. They came on foot and in sleighs. There were games and considerable time was spent in watching the working of a steam sawmill which was a Christmas present to one of the party. Songs were sung and refreshments were served.

The Wednesday evening topics for the six weeks' period of meetings at the church are Look Up, Stand Up, Fill Up Take Up, Wake Up and Keep Up. The theme of the meetings as a whole is Deepening of the Spiritual Life.

There was about 16 inches of snow on the level in the woods Monday. The mercury was 24 in the morning.

RHEUMATISM PAINS ARE NOW IN SEASON

Says glass of Salts helps to overcome Rheumatism acid.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kind.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

ALWAYS WISE TO CONSIDER BOTH SIDES

(Written Specially For The Bulletin.)

Nobody loves a liar.

People generally respect an honest man.

Yet the real, whole-cloth liar, who makes up his tales from unmixed falsehood, isn't half so dangerous, either to his neighbors or his country, as the perfectly honest man who doesn't see, won't understand, and can't be made to tell but just half the truth.

A straight-out, full-bodied lie, without any framework of truth in it, invariably blows itself up, sooner or later. It isn't dangerous, because it is so easily exposed and disproved. But a half-lie, which is also a half-truth, is the very Old Harry and all to knock out. You can't kick it contemptuously out of the path, any more than you can the old hat with a brick in it, April 1st.

The half-truth, by virtue of its certainty and easy proving, carries the half-lie right along with it. It's as hard to dodge as a boomerang; as difficult to run down as a snake in the grass; as awkward to put to sleep as the three-headed dog of Hades. In truth, it often seems to have more speed and a greater capacity to "git thar, Eli," than the whole and unadulterated truth.

Another thing; the real, old-fashioned liar soon comes to be known and accepted for just what he is. Nobody pays much attention to him; certainly no one buys stock on his say-so. But the honest man whose reputation is fixed, whose integrity of purpose is undoubted, whose word is his bond—ah, when that man gets hold of something half-truth and half-lie and peddles it out, he is apt to find believers on every tree and discipline under every bush. With undeniably good intentions he is, nevertheless, a worker of evil undiluted and often disastrous. People of that sort break up sewing societies and undermine empires. They are as much more dangerous than liars as the rattlesnake is more dangerous than the English sparrow. The sparrow may be a dum nuisance, but the rattlesnake is a deadly menace.

It is from the ranks of such well-meaning but half-deceived men that come the dogmatists and the bigots of thought; the scatter-brains of action; the fanatics and tyrants of history.

One of the surest signs of a really great man is his refusal to dogmatize anything, indeed, have his opinions and beliefs, based on the view he has been able to obtain of so much of the truth as he could visualize. But he never presumes to say that these opinions and hypotheses are the truth itself. We all remember the spelling-book story of the two knights who, coming up to a wayside shield from opposite sides, fought till both were dead because one said it was white and the other that it was black. Each fought for the truth as he saw it. Neither one, took the trouble to look at both sides. If they had, they would have seen that the shield was white on one side and black on the other.

It's just that way in real life. One man who trusts his own eyes to tell him the truth sees the right-hand side of it. He doesn't take the pains to go around and look at the other, but promptly declares that what he sees is the truth and the whole truth, and anybody who disputes it is a heretic and a fool and a robber of hen-roosts.

Worst of all, such men, unwilling to keep their great discoveries to themselves, insist upon writing letters to the editor and making speeches on the street-corner and proselyting in the highways and byways. They are so cock-sure of their own accuracy of eyesight that they sincerely think all who fail to see as they do are blind or worse. And, naturally, they often come to have followings.

I'm not disposed to dispute with Mr. Coue whether the imagination is more powerful than the will, as he maintains. But there's one sure thing; the imagination is always on its job, while a good many men are too lazy to use their wills more than once or twice in a lifetime. There are few leaders in the world but a great many taggers-after.

The newspapers these days, especially those from the west, are full of effusions from these half-seeing prophets of astigmatism. I also hear them too frequently, as I'm sure you also do, whenever a bunch of people get together. Indeed, I sometimes think that farmers, perhaps on account of the comparative isolation which throws them back too much upon themselves, are especially prone to "harm" about [illegible] see it, which isn't always to [illegible] the law as it is.

In the last issue to my hand of Capper Weekly, a Kansas paper which has a great circulation among farmers, I found two letters along this line. One is from a man who says that recently he shipped both goods and was charged $2.60 a hundred freight. Another time he wanted to ship a car of eggs but found on inquiry that the expressage would come to more than the eggs could or would sell for. "If this is not robbery," he exclaims, "what is it? Bank robbers have to take chances to get away with less loot. . . . The railroads and express companies are the biggest legalized robbers."

Another man, who seems to feel sure that he has authority to say things, writes: "About all manufactured articles are high-priced except Ford autos. Manufacture of railroads and labor got enough of boost [illegible] during the war and can't bear to return to a pre-war diet."

Now these two men are just samples of a big bunch. They see a part of the facts very clearly, and thereupon jump bodily at rather sweeping conclusions. They are undeniably honest in intention. They are, however, so sure of what they see that they utterly fail to consider there may be some things which they can't see. They seem even to deny the existence of things they don't see. Both of them are sure the railroads are "legalized robbers."

Now, I am most emphatically no advocate for the railroads. I have no liking for them and small interest in them. I do not admire their methods nor highly respect their spirit. But a fair man will give even the devil his due, and a man will get all the facts attainable before he brings in a verdict of guilty.

The facts in this matter are not impossible of discovery. The business of every railroad has to be reported, in full detail, to the interstate commerce commission every month. These figures are made public from time to time.

The very day I read these attacks from Kansas Cappertites on the railroads as grabbers of "blood money," and "legalized robbers," the interstate commerce commission published the facts about railroad business and income for the first eleven months of 1922.

These facts are that the total net operating income of the roads for those eleven months amounted to $693,134,700, which is just four and two-hundredths per cent. upon their valuation as established by the commission.

That is, their net earnings were only two hundredths of one per cent. greater than the average dividend paid by the majority of savings banks.

Even though a man were a confirmed and hopeless railroad hater and railroad baiter, he couldn't find fault with that rate of profit as exorbitant. Furthermore, while freight traffic increased by thirty-one per cent. in November, 1922, as compared with November, 1921, freight revenues increased only twelve per cent. This shows that there has been in the year a material reduction in freight rates. If there hadn't been the increase of revenues and of traffic would have run even.

Right by the side of this set the significant fact that "operating expenses," i. e. for fuel and labor, increased eleven per cent. in November, 1922, over November, 1921.

In this case reduced, income cut down to saving bank size—but "operating expenses" increased. That tells where the money goes which the shipper has to pay.

We farmers, who stand outside of the railroad situation, ought to be the very last men to take sides hastily. We owe it to ourselves and our own sense of justice at least to find out all the facts within reach before we get out our shotguns. This blazing away at the first passer-by because somebody has robbed our hen-roost is not in accordance with out natural ideas of what's what.

"Be sure you're right, then go ahead," said Davy Crockett. It is quite as essential to be right or it is to go ahead, you'll observe. For going ahead when you're wrong isn't likely to bring you to any desirable destination.

Nor does Fate make any deductions in your behalf if you plead that you thought you were right, or that you intended to be right. It isn't enough just to want to be right or mean to be right. "Hell," said Bluff old Hickory Jackson, "is paved with good intentions." "Well," said wise Tom Hood, "is wrought by want of thought as well as want of heart."

This jumping at conclusions and bringing in verdicts without considering all the evidence is a symptom of either pitiful ignorance or unpardonable prejudice, in either case, of cheap self-conceit.

The evidence in regard to the railroads shows with a fair degree of certainty that they have slightly reduced their freight charges in the past eleven months, that they have earned in that time barely savings bank interest, and that they've been compelled to pay for labor and fuel something more than a year ago. It is, then, not the railroad managers but the coal miners and the railroad employes who are responsible for high freights. Nothing can be clearer. This being so, it seems highly unfair to pound the railroads because of high charges which are due to coal strikes and brotherhood exactions.

Curiously enough, the same day these railroad figures were published, the federal trade commission made up a table of 328 business companies or corporations which have declared stock dividends in 1922 amounting to a total of $3,149,151,245. These are all organizations engaged in manufacturing or producing supplies for dear old Mr. and Mrs. Consumer. The list does not profess to be complete, but it shows that there are at least 328 corporations who have done well enough in 1922 to cut a two million dollar melon.

Now if I were a western farmer and felt so mad that I simply must smash somebody's head, here's one that would tempt me.

Even so, however, I think I should wait till the returns were all in and both sides of the melon exposed, the inside as well as the outside.

For there are always two sides to even a stock melon.

REMARKABLE CASE OF RAPID RECOVERY AFTER SERIOUS BREAKDOWN

Woman Had Grown Weaker and Weaker Under Constant Care of Physician

"I had a severe break-down. I could neither eat nor sleep and I can truthfully say that I did not touch any solid food in four weeks. I had no appetite and the sight of food sickened me. I was constantly under my Doctor's care and there was not the slightest change in my condition. I grew weaker and weaker. I saw your advertisement in the paper one day and purchased a bottle. I felt the first effects in getting a good night's sleep and then gradually my appetite returned and after taking three bottles I again felt as well as ever. I always recommend Wincarnis to my friends." (Mrs. L. Brown, 10 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.)

Lyman, treasurer; Alonzo Little, trustee and Edward P. Lyman associate trustee. Miss Eliza Hutchins and William M. Wolff were elected members of the Library committee.

The librarian, Mrs. Howard A. Rice, reported that the library had been open to the public every Friday afternoon and evening and Monday evenings during the past year. The aggregate attendance has been 2,325 persons. The largest patronage was during July and August. When the attendance was almost 700. The smallest attendance was in the months of February and April.

From our own community 50 families are regular patrons and during the summer months 50 summer residents drew books.

The total circulation for the year was 3,887 volumes, of which 2,401 volumes were fiction, 900 magazines, Juvenile 324 volumes and all other classes 123.

Teachers in the public schools have taken 125 volumes, special mention being made of the West Street school. Miss Granstrom teacher. The High school pupils have made frequent use of the library for reference work. COLUMBIA

The snow, sleet and hail storms are inconveniencing the rural travel public considerably. The heavy fall of snow and hail on Monday last was cleared by evening from the state road running through the Center to Hebron, but the roads running north and south have not been cleared although another snow storm has fallen since. Automobile drivers carry shovels and are frequently obliged to clear out drifts and bad places in the roads. Because of the impassibility of the roads, the auto-bus which carries the pupils from Hebron, passing through Columbia Center to the Windham High school in Willimantic, did not run on Monday.

Mrs. Cummings, teacher of the Pine Street school, who lives in Hebron, was unable to reach her school, and there was no session on that day.

The Hebron school truck passed through Columbia on Tuesday nearly two hours late. The milk truck, which comes from Lebanon through Chestnut Hill, passing through Columbia Center at 6.30 a. m. did not arrive until 1 p. m. on Tuesday, having experienced tire trouble on the rough roads. It was not until 4 p. m. when a new tire was obtained replacing one that had blown out that the truck was able to proceed.

MYSTIC

The death of Henry Schroder, which occurred Tuesday at the Home Memorial hospital at New London, came as a shock to his many friends here. Mr. Schroder was badly burned while moving an oil stove from his home Dec. 31, and he was removed to the hospital in the hopes he would recover.

He was born in Mystic and was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schroder and had resided his father in his duties at Elm Grove cemetery. He leaves his wife and two sons, Charles R. and Wilfred Schroder, two sisters, the Misses Wilhelmina, Louisa Schroder of Mystic, Mrs. Nettie Crandall of Groton and Mrs. Lottie DeWolf of Jewett City.

The coal situation in Mystic and Stonington has become acute. There is no coal for people and the worst is there is no prospect of the dealers having any. It is hard to procure wood here as hauling the heavy wood out is almost impossible. There is not enough on hand cut and sawed to keep ahead of the demand.

The 32nd anniversary and roll call of Mystic Encampment No. 17, I. O. O. F., will be held Friday evening in Odd Fellows hall, and the officers are to be installed at 7 o'clock. Those present will sit down to a most delicious turkey supper.

Friday evening the members of the Congregational church will enjoy an address by Mrs. William Merton Jones of Chicago, a graduate of Piedmont, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen P. Reynolds have returned from their wedding trip and are to reside at 19 Willow street.

The funeral services of Mrs. Ella Maine Whitford were held Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Fisher pastor of the Congregational church at North Stonington, officiated. Interment was in Elm Grove cemetery.

The sleighs have been put into commission here the past week for the first time in two years. The sleigh bells are a familiar sound to the ears of all here and unless the weather man shows a decided change in the atmosphere the town is likely to enjoy more sleighing. A number of sleighing parties are being planned for Saturday night and a dance and oyster supper is to be served upon reaching these destinations.

The marriage of Miss Ida Edith Pendleton of Westerly and Joseph P. Sartori of Greenmanville avenue, Mystic, took place at the Immaculate Conception Church a Westerly Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. Burns. The couple were attended by Addo Santi, as the groom and Miss Emma Pendleton, sister of the bride. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents on Grove street.

The bride received handsome and valuable gifts, including cut glass, silver and linen. Upon their return from their wedding trip they will occupy a newly furnished home here.

The death of Mrs. Lucretia Grant of West Mystic occurred Wednesday at the Home Memorial hospital, New London. The day before Christmas she fell, fracturing her left hip. She is survived by two sons, Charles and Rowland Grant, and several grandchildren. Mrs. Grant was a devoted mother and a devout member of the Episcopal church here. She had a host of friends in Mystic.

Mr. and Mrs. George Keich have returned from New London.

Collinsville—Mrs. Jerry Crowley had a narrow escape from death near the academy in Canton. She was in a sleigh with her son, James, when a truck passed them. In getting out of the way of the truck the sleigh tipped over and Mrs. Crowley had a shoulder dislocated.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

STONINGTON

People here are not letting opportunities pass so far as sea food is concerned. The Clam flats are visited at both early and late tides and many buckets of clams are disposed of daily by diggers here. The coal that is strewed along the shore is appreciated by many and many are able to keep warm whereas they would suffer as the coal situation has become serious for there is no coal to be had. Dealers have tried to get the precious black diamonds and report they are many times over sold.

Elias Miner of Coast Guard Station No. 59, at Fishers Island, has left the hospital at New London and returned to his station once more. Two of the crew at Fishers Island are ill with chicken pox.

The Men's club programme will be indeed a most enjoyable one and those who attend will be more than pleased with the first entertainment held by them this year. Prof. William H. Kenerson of Brown university is a drawing card for the club. Piano solos by Miss Florence Buck and Miss Constance Fort are on the programme.

There are to be many new residences erected at Lord's Point for the summer. Already ground has been broken for the cellars. Joseph E. Pendleton, of Preston, has made an effort to put in his foundation for his bungalow and as soon as the ground is cleared of the snow, many others will proceed with the construction work. William R. Jennings of Deep River has purchased a lot and will be among the colony's number to build this spring. His lot is on the corner of Noyes avenue and James street.

JEWETT CITY

W. S. Christopher and his party, in their house on wheels, have arrived in Florida, which as he promised, he announces in the following especially interesting letter dated at Daytona, Florida, Jan. 7.

"It affords me much pleasure to drop you a few lines this morning. I can say now we are in the 'Lord's country. I must tell you about some of the things we saw as we passed along. We are camping for a few days at a private camp where we pay 25 cents each night. There are plenty of other cars here today, from almost every state on the map. We are on the Halifax river and within 150 feet of the river bank, it is warm and fine, with the mercury outside the door at 70.

We have traveled 1641 miles and have yet 300 miles to Miami. We have had no trouble except the mud. The roads have been almost impassable, but we have been very lucky. Have had one slow leak in the whole trip and had the brakes relined once on "Mike".

Now for a few words in regard to some of the states we have passed through. North and South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia are poor miserable states, the people, especially the poor class in Georgia, are almost starving in the northern part. They have raised no cotton to speak of in 3 years, and that is all they know. In coming through some of the small towns, the negroes would jump on our running boards and beg us to take them along. With good health and as much as the average poor persons should expect, it made me feel as though I never should find fault again at not having all the things the rich people can enjoy. Well I just a few words about some of the people of our party. Now, of course, I do not read these letters over to them, so I can tell some things and feel reasonable safe.

Our [illegible] thing [illegible] when I must tell, although I almost promised I would not. The first orange tree we saw of any size was just loaded with fruit. I heard a second in Georgia of the same looking kind. I saw Mrs. Robb half way out the window of the [illegible]. The windows turn down about 16 inches. I stopped the car and with Lelo we drew her back and swat running from [illegible] school. Those who know Mrs. Robb may [illegible] is no featherweight. In [illegible] time I looked [illegible] and there [illegible] orange trees were. I saw [illegible] standing under a tree with a basket in his hands calling to some one [illegible] down, or he would put them [illegible] sack. I thought I would [illegible] the groves and see what the [illegible] was. And there I saw Mr. Robb, on the limb straddling a limb [illegible] in with the workers I told [illegible] he was the best [illegible] I ever saw. I [illegible] a number of [illegible] bell rang for supper at [illegible] where I was [illegible] was time off to the [illegible]. We had a half hour, and then [illegible] the parts to look for him, when a man [illegible] town. I would [illegible] E. was good to [illegible] and supper was ready. We asked [illegible] and he said before he left [illegible] had promised Frank Whiting [illegible] supper.

In looking for [illegible] I had a [illegible] and lot of [illegible] I do not [illegible] so that I am [illegible] Well [illegible] happy.

Miss Mary Doyle has one of the oldest and best preserved daily papers owned in this section. It is a copy of the Boston Gazette and Country Journal of Monday, March 22, 1773, and considering its age, is devoted to describing the distressing circumstances that the Provinces are involved in, by reason of the acts of parliament, by duties and taxes imposed upon the inhabitants of North America.

All through the four pages, is evidence of the feeling of the unrest that existed just before the Revolution broke out.

There is a copy of a prayer to the Lieut. Governor from the town of Boston asking redress and relief relative to the chartering of British troops, among the citizens in time of peace, under pretense of supporting the law and aiding civil authority.

On one page are four coffins, with skull and cross bones, each bearing the initials of the men who "fell in a bloody massacre" on Monday evening. During the funeral in Charlestown all the stores were shut and troops patrolled the streets.

Mt. Vernon Lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M., N. B. Parkhurst, master, has appointed the following committee to arrange for its annual banquet and ladies' night: William McCluggage, S. L. Thompson, Harold Fields, G. T. Bell and Lawrence Drescher.

Local people who went to the depot to take the boat train, Wednesday evening due at 8.21 p. m., were left waiting at the switch. The train showed up at 1.30 Thursday morning after a detour via Willimantic.

Adolph Heinrich, one of the recently raised members of Mt. Vernon lodge, entertained, recently, a number of the craft from Jewett City and Baltic including N. B. Parkhurst, F. S. Kanahan, E. E. Cheney, William McCluggage, R. J. Guy, John Davis, Lawrence Drescher, G. T. Bell, Joshua M[illegible] and [illegible] Barnes.

The family orchestra furnished the best of music. A delicious supper proved a attractive past of a most pleasant evening.

A. Beaulais; marshal [illegible], Lionel Raymond; marshal [illegible], Lawn Beaudoin and William Vin[illegible].

The ceremony of installation included a short musical program and addresses by Rev. L. P. Morissette and Messrs. Caron and Beaula[illegible] of Norwich.

As one of the aims of the society is to encourage the speaking of the French language, the installation and speeches were in French. The installation was conducted by the following: Attorney Gaudet, H. Caron and H. B. Beausoleil of Norwich and Joseph Metevier and Paul Pelletier of Plainfield.

A special meeting of the Ecclesiastical society will be held to meet Friday evening at the Congregational church.

A fine game of basketball was played last Friday at the Community house between the Plainfield team played Danielson [illegible] the game. Score, 26 to 31.

The annual meeting of the First Congregational church last week reports a good progress on all the societies. The treasurers reported a balance in all the treasuries. Membership increased in all the organizations, the Ladies' Aid reaching a membership of over 90 [illegible] Sunday school adding largely to [illegible] During the year the church received [illegible] new members—26 on confession and 45 by letter. Six more members were added the first Sunday in January, bringing the present membership up to 240.

The following new organizations have been started during the year: The Friendly Helpers, the Lincoln club, the men's congregation, a new group of Camp Fire Girls, a kindergarten and nursery, a [illegible] Bible class and a ladies' Bible class. This last year the Sunday school has been graded and the attendance built up. In all the church there is a healthy activity and a splendid spirit of co-operation obtains throughout the parish.

The two largest enterprises of the year have been the undertaking of the repairing and alteration on the church building and the bazaar. The work on the church is still going on and the bazaar enabled the people to realize $2,400 to be applied on the church building operation. The church is especially appreciative of the help and support so willingly and widely given during the recent bazaar.

Ernest Wilde, employed in the office of Lawton Mills corporation, has the sympathy of the community in the loss of his sister, Mrs. Homer W. Davis of Wauregan, who died Monday at Backus hospital in Norwich. She had been very ill for three weeks and everything possible was done for her recovery. The death of Mrs. Davis is a great loss to her family and a shock to the community in which she lived, for she was a fine type of woman, devoted to her home, loyal to her friends and active in outside interests. Mrs. Davis will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends.

The Ladies' Aid of the Congregational church met Wednesday afternoon for the annual meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. Carl N. Mathewson. Excellent reports were given of the year's work, showing that this organization has a membership of 90, has been unusually active, and has handled this past year $1,204. Notable is the part taken by this society of women in the recent bazaar, conducting two booths. At the annual meeting Wednesday they voted $150 to be used on repairing the windows in the auditorium of the church.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Carl N. Mathewson; first vice president, Miss Annie L. Tillinghast; second vice president, Mrs. William E. Wilson; secretary and treasurer, Miss Ruth A. Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Phillips have been ill with the grip, but are again able to be about.

These heavy snows and ice storms make hard conditions for the winter birds, greatly reducing their food supply. It is the custom of many to feed the birds during the winter months and it is very satisfying to see these little feathered friends eating of our bounty and to know that thoughtfulness may mean the life of many birds. There in one home in the village where some of the winter birds are coming daily for their meals.

Miss Florence Onderdonk is again able to resume her work in the grammar school as teacher.

The Camp Fire Girls met with Miss Emily Hopkins on Wednesday evening to hear annual reports and to elect officers for another year. Mrs. Henry W. Fontain is guardian of the troops and the following are the officers for the next year: President, Emily Hopkins; vice president, Lillian Heap; secretary, Ruth Cleland; treasurerers of the two troops, Vivian Cleland, and Dorothy Prentiss. One of the craft classes for girls met last evening at the Community house in charge of Miss Nelsie Hartwell. These girls are very enthusiastic over the work which they are doing in wax.

WOMEN OF THREE GENERATIONS

The daughter, mother and grandmother have all proved from personal experience the remarkable strengthening and tonic properties of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in overcoming the ills of women. It was first made from roots and herbs in 1873 by Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., for her neighbors and friends. Its fame has spread from shore to shore until it is now looked upon by women everywhere as the standard remedy for woman's ills. It has been proved that it benefits 98 out of every 100 women who try it, which is a marvelous record for any remedy to hold.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS BULLISH.

New York, Jan. 11.—Stock prices continued their rise to higher ground in today's market, which was featured by another series of bullish demonstrations in special shares. Speculators for the advance were very encouraged by the further strength in foreign exchanges, optimistic reports of domestic business conditions and the plentiful supply of call and time money at comparatively low rates.

Actual occupation of Essen by the French troops caused further selling of French bonds, but good buying support limited the losses to a point or less. Stock market traders were still inclined to look upon the foreign exchanges as the true barometer of European banking opinion on the reparations situation.

California Petroleum continued as one of the market features, reaching another new record top at 30 3-8 but yielding at the close to 29 7-8, where it represented a net gain of 3 7-8 points on the day. Dunlop also reached a new top on the movement at 56 7-8, up nearly a point, buying being influenced by publication of statistics showing earnings of approximately $10 a share last year.

Postum Cereal was run up to 136 1-2 on rumors of a stock dividend distribution, but profit taking brought it back to 132 1-2 at the close, or only 1-8 above yesterday's final figure.

Nash Motors furnished the widest fluctuation, selling between 106 and 111 1-2, the big and closing price representing a net gain of 15 1-2 points. Fisher Body, which recently has been selling between 301 and 305, was run up to 313 1-2 but forfeited nearly 5 points later, closing at 307 1-2 or up 6 1-4 on the day.

Other strong specialties, most of them objects of pool operations, were Loose-Wiles Biscuit, Hartman Corporation, Woolworth, Kelsey Wheel and Mack Truck, all up 3 3-4 to 6 points.

Baldwin and Studebaker were two of the most active shares on the big board, the former closing at 135 for a net gain of 3 points, and the latter at 115 1-4, or 5-8 above Wednesday's final figure. U. S. Steel common closed 1-2 higher and Crucible 1, with the other independent steels showing only nominal changes.

Reports that the St. Paul railroad had sustained another deficit in 1922, although it was smaller than 1921, and speculative uncertainty over the Delaware and Hudson railroad dividend arising from the quoted statement of President Loree that he did not know what action the directors would take at their meeting later in the month, had a restraining and depressing effect on trading in railroad shares. Delaware and Hudson dropped to 103 for a net loss of more than 3 points before buying support set in and carried the price to 105 1-2. St. Paul issues showed little change at the close.

Call money held at 4 per cent. throughout the day. Time money continued to be quoted 4 1-2 per cent. bid and 4 3-4 per cent. asked, with 45-day maturities arranged at the lower figures and the longer loans at the higher rate. Out of town banks continued to be the principal takers of commercial paper, the bulk of which moved at 4 1-2 per cent.

Demand sterling got up to 4.67 3-4, or nearly 3 cents above yesterday's close, but eased off to 4.67 3-8 in later dealings. French francs held steady around 6.90 cents, while the Belgian and Italian rates showed little change. Marks sold at .0095 cents. South American exchanges were slightly better. The Canadian dollar was at a discount of slightly less than half a cent.

COTTON.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Jan. 11.—Chief interest in today's bond market centered in the rapidity with which more than $56,000,000 in new offerings was taken up. Books were closed today on the $25,000,000 issue of new Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania 5s and the $13,875,000 issue of Baltimore and Ohio 5 per cent. equipment trust certificates.

Further selling of French securities took place on the New York stock exchange, but except for losses of 1 1-2 each in Framerican 7 1-2s and Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean 6s and a point each in French 7 1-2s, Lyons 6s and Seine 7s, the losses were limited to fractions. Serbian 8s dropped to 63 1-2, another new low record, and weakness developed in Czecho-Slovakian 8s. Mexican 5s and City of San Paulo 8s. Mexican 4s and Queensland 6s moved against the downward current, each gaining a point.

Except for a drop of 18 cents on $100 in the first 4 1-4s, U. S. government bonds showed little change. Uncalled Victorys gained 3 cents and the other active issues lost 2 to 6 cents.

Speculative railroad mortgages were inclined to sell off, losses of a point each being recorded by Erie consolidated 4s and 7s and New Haen 7s and France 7s, while International and Great Northern adjustment 5s dropped 1 1-2 and Seaboard consolidated 6s 2. St. Paul refunding 4 1-2s gained 1 1-4 cents.

Speculative belief that Brooklyn Rapid Transit noteholders would profit under the reorganization plan found expression in some good gains in that group the 7s, certificate 7s and stamped 7s moving up 2 to nearly 3 points. Chile Copper 6s made a new high and the 7s climbed more than 2 points, while Cuba Cane convertible 7s made up their 2 point loss of yesterday and International Cement 8s and Lorillard Tobacco 7s gained a point each. International Paper 5s, Series A and B, were weak.

Total sales (par value) were $13,028,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Uneasiness over trans-Atlantic war possibilities and as to the domestic winter crop outlook led to a fresh upturn today in the price of wheat. The market closed firm, 1c to 1 3-8c net higher with May 1.20 3-4 to 1.20 7-8 and July 1.13 1-8 to 1.13 3-8. Corn gained 3-8c to 5-8c, oats 1-4c to 1-2c and provisions 7 to 12c.

With Liverpool quotations showing a substantial advance and with a continuance of excessive dry weather threatening damage to winter wheat, especially in the southwest, traders on the bear side of the wheat market failed to make any impression in contending that 3c advance which had been scored from the recent low point of prices was sufficient for the time being. On the contrary, the market began to move upward as soon as business got under way. Meanwhile drastic new moves in the reparations crisis were being reported, and war talk centered in questions such as what Russia might do, little heed apparently being given to financial and economic factors likely to have a weakening effect on the value of breadstuffs.

Reports that French interests were re-selling considerable quantities of Canadian wheat afloat in eastern lake ports had a temporary depressing influence about the middle of the day. Heavy new buying, however, took place on the setback and the market rebounded. Final transactions were at nearly the top figure of the session, gossip about better prospects for farm credit legislation helping to some extent the closing rally.

Corn and oats sympathized with the wheat advance. Furthermore, Omaha and other centers were reported as far out-bidding Chicago for corn at rural points that usually ship to this city.

Provisions were strengthened by upturns in the hog market and in grain.

PROTEST AGAINST THE FRANCO-BELGIAN ACTION IN THE RUHR

London, Jan. 11.—(By The A. P.)—Dr. Sthamer, German ambassador to Great Britain, presented to the British foreign office late today Germany's formal protest against the Franco-Belgian action in the Ruhr, which it declared violates the treaty of Versailles.

The German protest argues that the Franco-Belgian action is a three-fold breach of the Versailles treaty—First, because the defaults in wood and coal would, according to the note of the reparations commission of March 21, 1922, only permit a demand for payments in cash; second, the treaty permits no territorial sanctions whatever, and, third, according to the treaty, reprisals against Germany are only permissable if imposed by the allied powers in union, not by a single power on its own individual iniative.

The German government protests "the unheard of oppresion, contrary to the treaty and international law," but says it does not intend to meet force by force, nor answer a breach of the treaty by disengaging itself from the treaty. So long as conditions contrary to the treaty persist, Germany, it is declared, will not be in a position to make deliveries of any kind to those powers which brought about these conditions.

GERMANY IS PASSIVELY AWAITING DEVELOPMENTS.

Berlin, Jan. 11.—(By The A. P.)—German official action, so far as it concerns active or passive reprisals for the French advance into the Ruhr, awaits clarification of the situation there and the ability of the German government to arrive at an intelligent estimate of the political and physical character of the policies France purposes to enforce in connection with her occupation.

Official quarters admit that the situation does not yet permit of the adoption of diplomatic or economic steps or an early decision with respect to further recognition of the reparations demands, and that the government's attitude on these issues is expected to be set forth in Germany' reply to the Franco-Belgian note.

The question of coal deliveries and of further recognition of the Stinness-De Lubersac agreement are problems which are now up for official decision, and the government admits that their solution prevents pronounced difficulties not only from the legal viewpoint but also for the reason that the bulk of deliveries of goods in kinds emanate from the Ruhr sector.

The recall of Ambassador Mayer from Paris and Minister Lansberg from Belgium does not indicate a breaking off of relations between Germany and France and Belgium, as the government has instructed the staffs of its missions in Paris and Brussels to remain at their posts. The government also does not purpose for the time being, to interfere with the activities of the inter-allied control commission, and has merely suggested that the entente authorities at the head of these bodies request the members of them to observe due circumspection in view of the frame of mind of the public.

Chancellor Cuno will discuss the situation with the premiers of the federated states tomorrow. He will propose the enactment of a series of economic measures calculated to meet a possible critical turn in th home situation, especially as regards shortage in fuel and interruption of rail traffic.

RUHR RICHEST INDUSTRIAL SECTION OF GERMANY

Essen, Jan. 11.—(By the A. P.)—Germany's richest industrial section of the Ruhr district is in the hands of the French troops tonight owing to the failure of the Germans to live up to the stipulations of the treaty of Versailles. While the occupation is not actually spread over the entire district, its leading city, Essen is occupied, and the 600,000 inhabitants of the municipality are now subject to the supervision of soldiers with fixed bayonets and full field equipment.

The proclamation of General Deoutte, in command of the French army, which is addressed to the residents of the city, says that the Franco-Belgian troops are being sent into the Ruhr in order to assist the allied engineer commission in obtaining the coal required from Germany on the reparations account. It announces that German social and other laws, including that providing for an eight-hour day, will remain in force. The German officials are requested to continue at their accustomed duties, and the press is advised that it will not be interfered with so long as it does not publish articles libelling the occupying armies.

Posts and telegraphers will continue "fundamentally" the same.

NO SPECIFIC TERMS FOR WAR DEBT REFUNDING

Washington, Jan. 11.—American and British debt refunding commissioners spent another two hours today discussing the whole subject of Great Britain's four billion dollar debt to the United States but it was stated officially that the conversations had not yet progressed to the point of condideration of specific terms.

Chairman Mellon and other members of the American commission were represented, however, as feeling confident that an agreement would come out of the negotiations before January 20, the tentative date set for the departure of the British for home.

Much of today's discussion had to do with the methods of payment and the general conditions of British government finances. The conversations will be resumed tomorrow, but the official spokesman for the gathering was unable to say whether the question of terms would be reached at that time.

The American delegation, it was made known, is approaching the subject of terms in a most liberal spirit, appreciating that in this settlement, it is dealing with America's best customer and at the same time will be establishing a precedent which it is hoped will prove a guide to all of the allied nations in squaring the circle of war debts.

The chief and controlling factor in the negotiations will be the amount of money that Great Britain will be able to pay annually. In this connection, attention was called in a summary of the British financial condition, made public by the commissions, that in order to balance its budget or this year Great Britain had to give up its sinking fund payment for the ultimate retirement of its public debt.

Normally the sinking fund payment is 35,000,000 pounds sterling annually. In the budget for this year was included approximately 20,000,000 pounds sterling which already has been pand to this country on account of interest on the debt.

The total British debt was stated to be 7,700,000,000 pounds sterling. The percentage of the total expenditure this year on account of interest on that debt was placed at 37.3. Expenritures for this year for the fighting forces, army, navy, and air service, was placed at 16.7 per cent. of th ewhole, as compared to 24 per cent. for America's fighting forces. Administration of the British government, including the collection of revenue, was estimated at 11.5 per cent., or about the same percentage as obtaining for the United States.

Of the total British revenues, it was stated that 36.1 came from income and super-taxes; 17.5 per cent. from duties on consumptions of beverages and liquors; 5.2 per cent. from tobacco; 3.5 per cent. from duties oh food; 5.2 per cent. from death duties and the same amount from excess profits and corporation profits duties.

INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE OF WOMEN IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Jan. 11.—With the reading of a greeting from President Harding and an address by Secretary Davis, the three-day industrial conference of women, held under the auspices of the women's bureau today got under way. More than 300 delegates from fifty or more industrial, social and civic organizations were in attendance.

The president, in his letter, encouraged women to participate more generally in public and social activities, while the secretary of labor stressed the importance of preventing the exploitation of women in industry.

Discussing from the employers' viewpoint "What Women Workers Mean to Industry," Charles Cheney, of South Manchester, Conn., representing the National Association of Manufacturers, declared that "women mean to industry a supply of labor."

"Industry will give employment to women—or to men—either because they are better adapted to the employment," he continued, or because scarcity of labor forces it, or because the work can be secured at the lowest cost. It must be remembered that the lowest cost does not necessarily mean the lowest wages.

"There seems to be a tendency to magnify the differences and forget the essential unity of men and women as to their aims and interests as well as responsibilities and obligations. I believe that what is now needed is to visualize the points of equality rather than exaggerate the differences. The employment of women in factories is not inflicting a new burden upon them, but is simply transferring the labor from the home to the shop, where it is done under usually better conditions and in shorter hours.

"I believe that insofar as it is possible the mother should be kept at home, but it will not do to deprive the woman by law or regulation of the free right to support herself and her family in such manner as she can."

Miss Mary Van Kleeck, of the Russell Sage Foundation, declared that industry means to women an opportunity to earn, an endurance test and a challenge to share in the construction of a better social order, while Mrs. Raymond Robins, of Chicago, president of the International Federation of Working Women, asserted she favored industrial welfare legislation for both men and women, because "humanity was intended not only to produce the material things conducive of comfort and pleasure, but also to have leisure and strength to enjoy those material things."

Senator McCormick, republican, of Illinois, spoke briefly in support of his proposed amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting child labor, and Representative Alice Robertson, of Oklahoma, offered a plea for employed mothers, urging that they be kept in the home.

AMERICAN MINISTER TO SWEDEN HAS RESIGNED

Washington, Jan. 11 (By the A. P.)—Ira Nelson Morris of Chicago, American minister to Sweden, has resigned in order to resume direction of his private business interests at home.

Mr. Morris, a democrat, business man, author and extensive traveler was appointed minister to Sweden by President Wilson in 1914 at the outbreak of the World war.

Although he had retired from active financial affairs he retained large interests in banks, railways and corporations.

As minister to Sweden during the war, Mr. Morris received the acknowledgments of his government for skillful handling of an delicate situation in helping keep Sweden out of the war at a time when the allied blockade of the allies was causing grave complications.

When President Harding came to office the king of Sweden sent an emissary to Washington to see that Mr. Morris be returned at Stockholm. When affairs in Russia became so chaotic that the Washington government was almost entirely without information of affairs there, Mr. Morris established lines of communication which were of much value to the state department.

DECLARES CIVIL SERVICE BILL HAS NO CHANCE

Efforts to secure the restoration of the civil service law to the Connecticut statute books along the lines of a bill being prepared by the Civil Service Association of Connecticut will not have the active support of Senator Charles M. Bakewell of New Haven, leader of the futile fight in the last session of the legislature to save the old civil service act.

"It hasn't a Chinaman's chance to pass," said Senator Bakewell last night. Representative John C. Brinsmade of Washington, president of the state civil service commission which was legislated out of office by the repeal of the old law in 1921, said that he had not been consulted about the new bill and was not at all certain that it would be possible to pass any civil service law in the present session of the legislature. The record of the state government for two years during which the civil service system has been dead in Connecticut, was too good to offer any argument of big improvements that could have been accomplished had the merit system been in effect, he said. Contrary to general reports, Representative Brinsmade will offer no bill of his own, he said, and will not take the initiative in any effort to restore the system.

Proponents Leaderless.

It had been expected at the capitol that Senator Bakewell and Representative Brinsmade would take the lead in the fight in their respective houses to secure the restoration of the civil service system. Their announced views leaves the proponents of the new bill without a leader in either house, unless Representative C. Dennison Talcott of Vernon, who also was a member of the civil service commission which abruptly discontinued, can be persuaded to take on the leadership in the house.

"I want to point out that the state has never been better administered than during the past two years," said Senator Bakewell. "Take Tax Commissioner Blodgett's office, for instance. Here is a department run by a man who is violently opposed to civil service, and yet this department has made a better record in the past two years, without civil service, than ever before. It would be difficult to find a department in the state which has suffered for the lack of the merit system," he said. "This is because we have the right type of men at the head of our state departments. In Connecticut it isn't a question of civil service, but one of picking the right men." His advice of those who insisted on civil service in the state government was to take off their coats before nominating conventions and help to select the right kind of men to take charge of the different state departments.

Senator Bakewell said he was absolutely opposed to the system recommended to the Civil Service Association of Connecticut by former U. S. Civil Service Commissioner William Dudley Pierce, which would require the appointment for a position of the person standing highest in the civil service tests, instead of allowing the department head to chose from the first three or four on the list.

"So many intangible qualities such as honesty, integrity and pertinacity enter in the qualification of a man for a position," said the senator, "that such a system could not work to the best interests of the state."

Both Senator Bakewell and Representative Brinsmade, each speaking separately, made it clear that, while they would take no active part in the fight for the adoption of the bill to be introduced in behalf of the civil service system, which will be understood to be similar to the provisions of the bill which received unfavorable votes for it, Senator Bakewell, however said he had no idea that the bill would ever be reported out of committee.

COLLEGE JUNIORS WILL UNVEIL THEIR MASCOT

One of the largest Connecticut college affairs this year will be a banquet in the main dining room of the Mohican hotel, New London, Saturday evening. At present there are ninety girls in the class of 1924. When they started on their way 141 enrolled. The former members who dropped out or are taking college courses at other institutions have been invited with the honorary members of the class. President and Mrs. Benjamin T. Marshall, George S. Palmer, chairman of the college board of trustees, Dean Irene Nye, Ph. D., Assistant Professor Orie W. Sheer, and Assistant Professor Henry Bill Selden.

Among the members of the class are Miss Helen L. Dodd and Miss Mary L. Higgins of Norwich.

TAFTVILLE

The village was treated to quite a little excitement, Thursday morning about 10 o'clock when the mammoth truck owned by Romaine Beauregard, took fire in front of the property of EH Pothier, on the Blissville road, Lisbon, when the big truck was having its tank filled with gasoline. In some manner the gasoline pipe was jerked out of the opening to the tank, the gasoline flowing on to the exhaust pipe, which was hot and instantly a sheet of flame enveloped the truck.

The alarm was spread by the siren of Fire Company, No. 3 and the ringing of the bell at the Sacred Heart church. The Fire company got under way within a few minutes, although they were handicapped by a quantity of snow which the state road scraper had pushed in front of the door of the firehouse, when they arrived, however the flames had subsided and they returned immediately.

Beauregard, who was standing near the tank, was so unfortunate as to have his apron catch fire, and Mr. and Mrs. Pothier enveloped him in rugs, rolling him in the snow, putting out the flames. His hands and arms were burned, but he is fortunate to have escaped more serious results. The truck was not badly burned, and went home under its own power.

Irving Boynton of New Haven was a caller in the village Wednesday.

Philip Sanderson of 3 North B St., has been a recent caller in New Haven, Conn.

John D. Parada of Hunters Avenue spent Thursday in Hartford.

Donat Simino of South Third avenue is spending a few days in New Haven, Conn.

Court Wequonnoc, No. 86, Foresters of America, met Thursday evening in their rooms in St. Louis Hall. Chief Ranger William Simon presided and routine business was transacted.

The annual meeting of the Taftville congregational church was held Thursday evening in the lecture rooms of the church. Rev. Edwin Gordon Crowdis presided. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Clerk Allan Bogle, Mrs. Walter Dyer, secretary of the Ladies' benevolent society, read the report of the organization. The treasurer's report showing Benevolent society was omitted. Miss Dorothy Wood, treasurer of the Sunday school, read a report showing the school to be in good financial condition, and the superintendent, Fred Knowles, reported that there were 165 pupils enrolled in the school, 56 in the home department and 28 on the cradle roll. The church treasurer's report, which had been examined and found correct by the auditors, Earle M. Wood and George H. Young, was read by Treasurer George N. Beardow, showing a substantial balance on hand for the beginning of the new year. Rev. Mr. Crowdis gave a report covering the short time he has been pastor of the church. The budget made up by the standing committee was presented by Allan Bogle and was adopted with no amendments. It was voted to continue the church apportionment, $150, for the missionary fund. Victor H. Davis, scoutmaster of Troop 8, Boy Scouts of America, made his annual report, showing that the troops is made up of 12 tenderfoot scouts, two second class scouts and seven first class scouts. During the year 60 second class tests and 13 first class tests have been passed. Some of the members attended Tippecan at Beach pond. There had been five hikes and one over-night hike. The scouts distributed pamphlets and collected bundles for the Near East relief and did work to improve the appearance of Montonomo monument. The troops committee includes George H. Young, Harry E. Prentice and Earle M. Wood. The assistant scoutmasters are Fred Knowles, George W. Meyer and Raymond A. Pingree. The troop is in good financial shape. The election of officers of the church resulted as follows: Deacon for one year, Allan Bogle; deacon for two years, Nathan S. Bushnell; clerk, Allan Bogle; treasurer, George N. Beardow; collector, Miss Ruth E. Heap; chairman of standing committee, George J. Meyer; music committee, Thomas Grimshaw, Arthur E. Aiken, William Bailey; nominating committee, Rev. Edwin G. Abers, Mrs. Thomas Grimshaw, Mrs. James Hartley, Mrs. Edmund Hindle.

The Camp Fire Girls will meet Friday evening at the home of the assistant guardian, Mrs. John Volkman, of Masonic arbor avenue.

On Sunday Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of the Norwich Town church will occupy the pulpit of the Taftville Congregational church and Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis will preach at the Norwich Town church.

ARGUES STATE HAS PROVED CASE AGAINST MARINELLI, GROTON GROCER

Evidence was closed late Thursday afternoon in the superior court here and the first argument for the state was made in the trial of Domenico Marinelli of Groton, accused of arson on the night of Dec. 1 at his grocery store in Groton.

Attorney Warren Burrows, assistant to State Attorney Hadlai A. Hull, made the first argument for the state, concluding as court adjourned for the day at 5 o'clock. He declared to the twelve jurors that the state had proved its case and that the evidence should produce a verdict against Marinelli.

When court comes in this (Friday) morning, Attorney Perry Hollandersky will make the first argument for the defense and will be followed by Attorney Arthurd M. Brown for the defense. State Attorney Hull will make the concluding argument for the prosecution, after which Judge Allyn L. Brown will charge the jury and turn the case over to the twelve men for a verdict. It seems probable that a verdict may be given reached late in the afternoon.

Trial of the case will have consumed practically two court weeks, during which the state has presented 29 witnesses and the defense fifteen. There have been 23 exhibits put in evidence by the state and six by the defense.

Accused Concludes Testimony

When court came in Thursday morning Marinelli, who had been on the stand Wednesday, took the stand again to conclude his direct testimony. He was on the stand for about an hour and a half under questioning by his counsel, Attorney Brown, after which Major Hull took up the cross-examination, which was not finished until after 3 o'clock.

Marinelli was cool and collected throughout, giving straight-forward answers and making a good impression on the witness stand.

In answer to questions from Attorney Brown he furnished figures concerning the values he placed upon the stock and equipment of his store.

He stated that he had an account book but that it was not in court. He estimated his stock of goods in the store to be valued at $1,600 and asserted that his ice cabinet alone was worth $525. The ice box was valued at $75 and figures were given for the value of the show case and other equipment.

The defendant declared that his former partner had a key to the store, but he did not know where he was. He stated that after the fire he had put a padlock to the door of the store. Marinelli detailed his recollections of the night of the fire. He said in response to queries by Attorney Brown that he went to the fire partly dressed, after having been aroused by his mother and that firemen had sent him to get dressed.

The defendant stated that he carried insurance of $2,000 on his stock and equipment, that he employed extra help in the summer season, but not in winter. In response to questions, he stated that he took in $100 on the day of the fire and that he had approximately $500 in cash. He paid his bills promptly and stated to the court that there was one damaged window to the store that was protected by cardboard.

He told of closing the store and going home for supper, and of later in the evening being aroused by his mother and told of the fire. Marinelli detailed what he did while at the fire.

Denied Placing Candle

With reference to the inventory of his stock, and equipment made by Mr. Beebe, the defendant told the court that the figures placed thereon were put there by Mr. Beebe and not furnished by the defendant.

Attorney Brown pointed to the basket and candle which had been placed in evidence by the state and inquired of the defendant if he had placed them in the store. Marinelli emphatically denied that he had.

On cross examination, Major Hull questioned Marinelli in detail on the story he had told on direct examination.

In the afternoon session, the account book was produced and the state attorney cross-examined Marinelli on this.

Judge George E. Parson, clerk of the superior court, was called to the witness stand by the defendant's attorneys. The clerk was shown a file from the superior court of a case against Joseph Gomma and Frank Rotondo, in which Rotondo was convicted of theft and sentenced to jail and to pay a fine of $119.44. Mr. Parsons identified the paper as from the superior court.

Marinelli had testified he paid such a fine for Rotondo.

Character Witnesses

Simon A. Welt, a storekeeper on Thames St., Groton, close to Marinelli's store, testified that Marinelli had a good reputation as a law abiding citizen.

Hiram W. Schreiber, a Groton grain dealer, said that Marinelli's reputation was excellent as a law abiding citizen. He pays his bills and keeps his word.

John A. Mutch of Eastern Point, Groton, operating a lunch room, formerly a police officer, also said Marinelli's reputation was good. He had heard this said of him last July, but could not remember who said it. He had never heard anyone say anything against the man.

Ludwig Mann of New London, wholesale tobacco dealer, said he had known Marinelli for three years and his reputation was good.

Cosmo Gentile of Groton a machinist, testified he had known Marinelli since he started the store and his reputation was good.

Capt. George O. Vincent of the Groton police force also said that Marinelli had a reputation that was all right.

Many of the character witnesses, upon cross examination by state attorney Hull said their opinions were based upon knowledge of the man rather than upon what they had heard persons say about him.

Rebuttal Witnesses

The defense rested its case at 3:27 and after a short recess state attorney called several witnesses in rebuttal.

Mrs. Lulu Cohen was asked about the locks on the front door which she said were a Yale lock and a padlock which had been there over two years.

To Attorney Brown she said they were used to lock the store. It was an old rusty padlock.

Mr. Cohen, the owner of the building also said there were these locks on the door of the store. The door was locked with both locks, he said.

Civil Engineer George E. Pitcher said that on Dec. 15 there was a rim Yale lock on the door and there was a padlock on the outside of the door.

Between 5 o'clock on the 15th and the next day a brand new brass padlock was put on the door. The old padlock was broken when he first saw it.

Begin the Arguments

Both sides rested at this point and Attorney Warren Burrows, who has been assisting the state attorney, began his first argument for the prosecution at 4 o'clock.

Attorney Burrows spoke of the three counts against Marinelli, 1st, common law arson; 2nd, tenant setting fire to building; 3rd, burning private building, not a dwelling house, situated so near as to endanger a dwelling house.

There can't be any question from the evidence, Attorney Burrows argued, that this fire was of incendiary origin, that it was set, and there was criminal intent and malice. The accused was in the place 3 or 4 hours before the fire was discovered. The bags, the basket the candles, implements used for starting the fire were all in the store. This fire was three separate and distinct sets as shown by the evidence, one under the floor near the stove, another near the built-in ice box where the burned bottom of the basket was found, and the third where the basket, burlap and candles were found. The only entrance to the store was by the front door and the holes found in two side windows were made by the firemen on the night of the fire. The accused had a $2,000 fire insurance policy on the store and fixtures and the testimony has shown there was a valuation of $1,500 to $1,600 in stock, but the only list of articles is that given by Marinelli. Attorney Burrows continued his argument by stating that Marinelli had placed the fixtures in the inventory at much above their value for the purpose of defrauding the insurance company. This man, owed money, over $600 and he didn't have much money owing to him. His first testimony was that it was between $600 and $700, but when his book was brought in the most it showed was about $3,000. He had told Mr. Jackson he had been closing early because his business wasn't good. That's where you find him on the night of the fire.

Mr. Burrows referred to the two families upstairs in the building and said this was no place for sympathy for anyone who set that fire. In regard to the defense that Marinelli makes, Attorney Burrows said the first move was an attack on Arsenault, the fireman, because Arsenault owed this man and this man sued him. Then there is the alibi furnished by his wife and his parents. Attorney Burrows argued that nobody could have known whether Marinelli left this own home during the night, and that the evidence showed he must have been up and dressing before he had been told that there was a fire.

In concluding his argument, Mr. Burrows said that he did not wish to belittle the service that any man rendered to his country, but such service could not be considered as evidence.

Postmaster at Middletown

(Special to The Bulletin)

Washington, Jan. 11.—The president today sent to the senate the nomination of Alfred C. Ward for postmaster at Middletown.

NORWICH TOWN

Washington Irving Mott died Thursday morning at 1 o'clock in his late home on Otrobando avenue, following a serious illness of seven weeks. Mr. Mott, who had been in failing health for the past six years, suffered a shock about Thanksgiving time, from which he failed to rally. He was born in Norwich in the Falls section, May 24, 1856, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvas Mott (Susan Care).

His early boyhood was passed in Norwich. When he was thirteen years of age his father purchased a farm in Lebanon and it was there that the major part of his life was spent. In Norwich, January 31, 1882, Mr. Mott was united in marriage with Jennie M. Dalaba of Middletown Springs, Vt. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William S. Palmer, then pastor of the Second Congregational church, on Church street, which later united with the Broadway Congregational church.

When a young man Mr. Mott was engaged for a few years in hotel work. For over a year he was steward at the Crocker house, New London; and previously for about three years was night clerk at the Wauregan house. For two years Mr. and Mrs. Mott were engaged in Christian work in Vermont. For two years Mr. and Mrs. Mott were engaged in Christian work in Vermont. After leasing their farm in Lebanon about eight years ago, they moved to a location on Canterbury turnpike, from which they located on Otrobando avenue, about four years ago.

Mr. Mott was a devout Christian, being a loyal member of the Holiness Mission, and a constant attendant at all its meetings, when his health permitted. He was a man deeply interested in his belief and lived it in his every day life. A kind and obliging neighbor, always ready to do a Christian act for someone else, his passing has cast a gloom over this and other communities where he was held in high esteem. In his home he was a generous hearted and loving father and it is in this circle of loved ones, where his loss will be felt most keenly.

Besides his wife he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Ernest Fargo (Pearl Mott) of Fitchville and Mrs. Arthur Warrous, (Hazel Mott) of Norwich Town, with whom he and his wife made their home. There also survive two sisters, Mrs. Jane Dixon of Springfield, and Mrs. Eldora Goodwin, of Haverhill, Mass., and the following grandchildren: Wilbur Irving, Rosena Hazel, Jennie Matilda, Merrill Mott, Justin Dalaba, and Myrtice Pearl Fargo, of Fitchville; and Marion Adelia and Darolyn Pearl Waltress, of Norwich Town.

The monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Connecticut Reformatory was held Wednesday at Cheshire. Two young men were discharged who have been under parole for a year and have observed the parole rules.

LIVED IN GRISWOLD AFTER ESCAPING INDIANS

In a recent issue of the Boston Globe under the department, Children of History and Legend, Samuel Leonardson, who lived in Griswold after his escape from the Indians is the subject of the sketch as follows:

Although King Philip was dead, the Indians still snaked around the white men's dwellings and made off with whatever plunder they could find. Sometimes they came a-kidnapping as for instance in 1695, when they crept into Worcester, which was not much of a town then, but rather a small community of scattered houses and cottages.

Samuel Leonardson was a boy of 12 at that time and had come from Bridgewater with his parents and one sister. One evening he was playing outdoors, dusk was gathering and a thin mist was hanging over the trees. He was not very far from home, could see the flickering candle lights in his mother's kitchen, and, of course, had no fear. He had not noticed crouching stealthy figures who were creeping along in the shelter of the trees, nearer and nearer to where he was. Very silently they came, like panthers, keeping close to the ground.

Then, all of a sudden they were upon him, were stopping his mouth so that he could not cry out, were binding his arms and twisting thongs about his ankles.

For almost two years he lived there with them, as their own child. They treated him kindly and never seemed to think that there would come a day when he would wish to escape. They taught him their language and trained him in many of the practices of cunning in which they were so skilled. One day, he asked one of them to show him how to use the tomahawk and how to scalp a victim. Willingly the Indian did as he was asked and before the lesson was over Samuel new exactly how to use both the knife and the hatchet to most excellent advantage.

One evening in winter, when the boy had reached the age of 14, there came two new arrivals at camp, two women; they were Hannah Dustin, a citizen of Haverhill, and her baby's nurse. They had been captured by a band of marauding Indians, the baby had been murdered and the women brought to the camp. Samuel had a word or two with Mrs. Dustin when she arrived, the Indians ate their supper and very soon everyone was on blankets asleep.

Everyone but the prisoners. In the middle of the night Mrs. Dustin got up, went to Samuel and whispered something to him. The nurse was already up, but was too frightened to do anything but stand open-mouthed.

Mrs. Dustin and the boy took two hatchets from beside two sleeping Indians, stole from one victim to another and, before they had finished their gruesome task, had killed almost all of them. Then they used the scalping knife, took their hairy trophies and stole down to the canoes.

The hardships of their journey were terrible, they suffered from cold and hunger, but they arrived at last at Haverhill.

The boy was anxious to see his parents and remained with the Dustins only long enough to receive recognition from the General Court of Massachusetts, which paid him the equivalent of $50 for his share in the executions. He found out that his parents were no longer in Worcester, so he went to an uncle, William Bradford, at Plymouth. There he learned that his mother had died from anxiety during his captivity. His father and sister were living in Norwich, Conn.

There Samuel went, but was so fearful that the Indian would trace him and take terrible revenge that he persuaded his father to move farther away. They settled at which is now Griswold, Conn., but even there the boy was not happy. He told no one of his life among the Indians, and lived many times in the memory of that terrible night when he had managed to make his escape.

APPLYING NEW RULES IN SUPERIOR COURT BUSINESS

Members of the local bar have been notified that the new rules of the superior court will be strictly enforced from now on. Hitherto the lawyers did not have copies of the practice books, but now that each has received one the courts about the state will insist on strict compliance with the new rules.

Short calendar sessions, which have sometimes been anything but what the name implies will now be short calendars in the real sense of the word, because the new practice rules tend to make the short calendars shorter. The effect of the rules should be to hasten procedure, the effect being to get cases ready for trial in shorter time. Judges who have had to tolerate numerous motions at short calendar sessions now find that much of the work at short calendars will be eliminated.

The new rules tell how lawyers shall claim cases for the trial list, and even how defaults shall be entered. They remove much work from the short calendar and really should shorten the short calendar sessions. Under the new rules the time pleading is shortened also. Cases must move forward at least every ten days now, instead of every 15. Answers must be made within 20 days, instead of 30 days, and pleadings thereafter must be made within ten days, instead of 15.

CARBON MONOXIDE WAS CAUSE OF SPENCER DEATHS

Carbon monoxide poisoning was the cause of the death of Arthur T. Spencer, his wife and baby, all three of whom were found dead in the kitchenette of their home in New London Sunday morning, Dec. 31. This is established conclusively by the test of blood from both Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, made by James H. Newlands, state chemist of Hartford, whose report reached Medical Examiner Dr. H. H. Hoyer Thursday morning.

The report of Dr. Newlands bears out the verdict of Medical Examiner Heyer, who declared his opinion that carbon monoxide was the cause of the deaths of the three people.

Samples of blood taken from both bodies was sent to Mr. Newlands and the samples were compared with a sample of normal blood. Five distinct tests were applied and the result showed that the blood of the deceased contained carbon monoxide in abundance.

The carbon monoxide was caused by an imperfect combustion of gas and the victims succumbed because of breathing this poison in a small, unventilated room in which a Vulcan gas heater, unvented, was lighted.

It is the same form of poisonous gas which has caused many deaths in garages where motors have been run without ventilation in the garage.

VERDICT FOR DEFENDANT IN AUTO DAMAGE SUIT

In the suit brought by Robert M. White, alias Robert William Andriola, of Groton against Richard Pugh, in which damages to the amount of $5,000 was claimed for injuries alleged to have been caused by Pugh's automobile in Groton on March 24, 1919, which was tried in the November term of the superior court, judgment for the defendant has been handed down by Judge Marvin.

The court ruled that the plaintiff had failed to show that the driver of the car at the time of the accident was actually in the employ of Mr. Pugh, and that the responsibility of the defendant, sought to be established through alleged admissions to Mrs. Andriola by him, had not been established by a preponderance of evidence. Following a statement made by Mrs. Andriola to Mr. Pugh, concerning her financial condition, the latter had paid her bill for $48 to Dr. Hewes of Groton for medical attention to the boy, but the court ruled that under the circumstances and in view of the evidence produced at the trial, and despite statements attributed to Mr. Pugh, it had not been proved that the chauffeur, who was an itinerant operator, was engaged in Mr. Pugh's business and employ when the accident happened.

TO EXTEND UNTIL FEB. 1 GERMAN PAYMENT OF 500,000,000 GOLD MARKS DUE JAN. 15

Such Concession Will be Made Today by the Reparations Commission at the Request of France—Germany's Request for a Moratorium is to be Discussed This Morning by the Commission—Poincare May Arrange a Meeting With the Germans, to Which Would be Invited Great Britain, Belgium and Italy, and Perhaps the United States—The French Have Advanced Three Miles Northeast of Essen, in the Second Zone of Occupation.

Paris, Jan. 13—(By the A. P.)—The reparations commission tomorrow will grant Germany a further delay, until February 1, in the indemnity payment of 500,000,000 gold marks due next Monday, it was forecast in reparations circles here tonight.

The decision will be taken at the request of France. Although the "official" reason is to give the French delegation more time in which to prepare new moratorium conditions, it is believed the increasing indication of passive resistance by Germany to the French occupation of the Ruhr has much to do with it.

It had been decided to begin discussion of Germany's request for a moratorium tomorrow morning and to reach a decision as soon as possible, but it is thought in reparation circles that France desires to leave the question of a moratorium in suspense for several weeks more, in order to see what turn German events may take.

There are many reports of the possibility of Premier Poincare arranging a meeting with the Germans, to which would be invited Great Britain, Belgium and Italy, and perhaps the United States.

The purpose of such a meeting would be to try and arrange a settlement with Germany, now that France has seized guarantees which she regards as necessary to the fulfillment of any terms which might be presented to Germany. M. Poincare left the way open when he declined the proposal of Hugo Stinnes, the great German industrialist, to come to Paris after the breakdown of the recent premier's conference in an effort to reach a direct understanding between France and the German industrialists.

If no such meeting develops, the reparations commission is expected to grant Germany a moratorium by a majority vote sometime before the newly granted delay expires. A general outline of the new French plan for a moratorium was circulated privately today. It provides for a two year moratorium, with the following conditions:

First—An internal loan of gold marks, to be used partly to stabilize the mark and partly to make certain restricted cash payments during the life of the moratorium.

Second—An internal loan of German paper marks also must be raised with the purpose of meeting reduced deliveries of merchandise during the moratorium, and also to meet the cost of army occupation.

Third—The budget to be balanced.

Fourth—Comprehensive control of Germany's internal finance to be exercised by a committee of guarantees sitting permanently in Berlin; this control to be about the same as outlined in the French plan of January 2.

Fifth—Maintenance of the present position of France in the Ruhr as a guarantee of good faith in the carrying out of the conditions.

Sixth—Further penalties to be applied if Germany fails immediately to consent to execute the conditions of the moratorium. These penalties would consist in complete occupation of the Ruhr basin and an extension of the customs cordon to territory considerably east of the Ruhr.

GERMANY SENDS IDENTICAL NOTES TO FRANCE AND BELGIUM

Berlin, Jan. 12.—(By the A. P.)—Replying to the France-Belgian communications notifying Germany of the impending occupation of the Rhur, the government today handed identical notes to the French ambassador and Belgian minister declaring the decision of the reparations commission and the stipulation of the Versailles treaty mentioned in the communication contained no legal basis for action in the Ruhr region, which is described in the notes as a violation of international law and of the Versailles treaty.

Arguing that the defaults in timber and coal only justify a demand for cash payment, the German reply continues:

"The German government maintains that only financial and economic measures within the territory under jurisdiction of the entente are permissable, but not such measures as the present invasion of troops and civil officials, which constitutes a very grave violation of Germany's sovereign right. Germany further holds that measures against her, according to the treaty, can be taken only by common action of the allied powers, not by any single power.

"Germany solemnly protests this violence against a defenseless nation. She cannot oppose this display of force, but at the same time she is unwilling to submit to a breach of the treaty of peace or to cooperate in carrying out the French terms.

"Responsibility for all the consequences will rest solely on the powers which made the invasion. These consequences already are manifested in a further fall of the mark and an enormous increase in prices of all commodities. What economic and political consequences the future may have cannot be foreseen.

"So long as this situation exists and its actual consequences are not removed Germany cannot fulfill her obligations towards the powers which brought them about."

POINCARE DENOUNCED BY THE BRITISH PRESS

London, Jan. 12.—(By the A. P.)—The development of the situation arising from the French advance into the Ruhr is being watched in official circles with anxious interest, and some fears are beginning to be express that the British government may before long be compelled to devise its attitude of benevolent dissociation from the French action. Never before during the long disputations over the reparations problem has the French policy been so strongly and universally criticised and deplored in London.

The weekly reviews follow the utterances of the daily press in this respect. The Outlook declares Premier Poincare is assured of immortality as one of the most colossal of idiots, or alternatively the greatest of knaves who ever strutted upon the stage of high human doffinies."

Says the Spectator: "France, poisoned and intoxicated by a sense of wrongs, with mind dazed by fears and suspicions, is going to commit the extremity of human folly."

The Spectator argues the France's action will compel Great Britain to take a much less generous view of the question of France's debts to Great Britain.

The foregoing is illustrative of the general trend of comment, and while most of the paper support the present policy of the cabinet, voices are not demanding something quite different. The Economist, a leading financial organ points out that the withdrawal of the American troops of occupation increases the very definite danger which cannot be disregarded—that the occupation of the Ruhr may start a conflagration which may spread right through central Europe and the Balkans, because the action of the United States advertises to the world France's complete isolation."

The Nation goes still further. It says: "French militarism being established, it will of necessity march through illegality to fresh deeds of perfidy and violence. . . . There is only one way out of the position in which M. Poincare has placed us, namely, to follow the American example and withdraw both from the reparations commission and from the Rhine and inform the French government that it must abide by the logical result of its action.

DEVELOPMENTS FIRST DAY OF OCCUPATION OF ESSEN

Duesseldorf, Jan. 12.—(By The A. P.)—The first day of the occupation of Essen was devoted almost entirely to obtaining contact between the French economic mission and representatives of the German coal mine operators and steel mill owners with a view to finding a basis of co-operation in the working of the Ruhr industries.

Conferences between M. Costa, French inspector general of mines, General Degoutte, superintendent of iron and steel plants, and representatives of German industries, were held in Duesseldorf and Essen. The Essen conference was attended by delegates from both the Krupp and Thyssen plants.

Both sides to the discussions were non-committal regarding the results achieved, but the feeling was expressed tonight by the Germans, and not denied by the French, that the entire success of the French occupation from the economic viewpoint depends upon the co-operation of the existing German organizations.

The French were loath to admit it, but seemingly they realize that they failed to grasp the magnitude of the economic operation, and that their technical, financial and economic effectives are not sufficient to carry out their share of the work as effectively as the military accomplished theirs.

From French sources it is announced that the coal operators and other industrialists attending the Essen conference are prepared to disregard the Berlin government's ruling that they must discontinue making deliveries in kind to France, Belgium ad Italy on account of reparations. Notwithstanding this good will, however, the Germans desire to know whence payment for deliveries will be forthcoming, since the Berlin government no longer is prepared to meet them. They will continue deliveries, it was said, but they must be guaranteed payment by France.

Paul Tirard of France, president of the International Rhineland commission, in accord with Baron Jacquemain, Belgian member of the commission, has sent out a circular to all German functionaries in the occupied territory of the Ruhr informing them that they are liable to the sanalties prescribed by the rules of the commission if they carry out the instructions from Berlin and fail to make deliveries in kind.

These penalties prescribe dismissal or expulsion or trial, with consequent fines or jail terms.

The French officially deny that there is any intention to occupy Bochum, which is the center of the great Stinnes industries, but the Stinnes managers there say they expect occupation to be a matter of days. Documents and account books are being removed.

No untoward incident has been reported from the newly-occupied districts. The French soldiers are strictly obeying the order to avoid moving about on the streets. The German population is orderly and quiet, if somewhat sullen.

FRENCH ADVANCE TO THE SECOND ZONE OF OCCUPATION

Essen, Jan. 12.—(By the A. P.)—Gelsenkirchen, three miles northeast of Essen, and in the second zone of occupation, was taken over by th French today.

Gelsenkirchen, like most of the other towns, owes its prosperity to the coal mines in the vicinity. These mines have been extensively developed at Gelsenkirchen. There are numerous blast furnaces, steel and boiler works and large factories where soap, glass and chemicals are made. It is on the Duisburg-Hamm railway, and, with a number of Contiguous villages, has a population of about $200,000.

ITALY HAS CALLED MORE RECRUITS TO THE COLORS

Winsted.—Mrs. Maude Swenson Fleton, wife of Walter F. Fleton, died at the family home on Torringford street. Her death came as a great surprise to her many friends, as she had been ill but a short time.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Census of Palestine.

London, Jan. 13.—(Jewish Telegraph Agency)—The Colonial office today published the figures of the Palestine census, only recently completed. They show that there are 589,564 Moslems, 83,794 Jews, 73,036 Christians of various denominations and 7,926 druses.

PROGRESS MADE BY DEBT FUNDING COMMISSIONS

Washington, Jan. 12.—Conversations between the British and American debt commissioners progressed today to a point where it is believed the matter of the terms of the settlement of Great Britan's debt of more than four billions of dollars can be approached at the next session on Monday. An agreement in principal, at least, still is forecast before the end of next week at which time the British commissioners plan to depart for London.

An official spokesman for the commission declared after today's session that the general situation had been very thoroughly explored and that a gret deal of progress had been made in clearing up many points essential to a general assessment of the whole problem.

In the negotiations thus far, considerable attention has been given to the form of payment of the principal of the debt, and it was indicated that an annual installment plan had been uppermost in the conversations in this particular point. Whether there will be a deferment of the yearly payments on account of principal until Great Britain has more fully recovered from the industrial depression in which she now finds herself, remains to be determined.

While the method of meeting the annual payments to the American government will be throught the purchase of exchange in the markets of the world, it was reiterated that funds for such purchases must come from British internal revenues. In this connection it was pointed out that Great Britain had balanced her budget and cut her expenditures right and left and the belief was held that as time went on and British wealth increased and government expenditures decreased, payments could be met without actually increasing the burden of taxation on the British people.

Additional figure as to financial conditions in Great Britain were made public today on behalf of the debt commissions. These showed that the total of the British public debt on the first of last April was £7,676,295,109, the interest on which was £335,000,000. There is owing to the British government by the European nations a total of £1,503,643,616, exclusive of approximately £500,000,000 in accrued and unpaid interest. Stanley Baldwin, British chancellor of the exchequer and head of the British mission, declared at the opening of the formal sessions that Monday that these debts were in a frozen state.

While terms are yet to be discussed, there were increasing indications today that the settlement agreed upon would be well within the limitations fixed by congress, certainly so far as the time of payment of the principal was concerned. Administration officers anticipated no particular difficulty in obtaining congressional approval of the terms that may be fixed, but it was stated at the White House that should congress fail to act before the end of the session, President Harding would not call an extra session of the new congress to consider the matter.

The White House spokesman added that the executive was not inclined to favor the calling of an extra session for any reason that now appeared upon the horizon.

RAILROADS AND SEA CRAFT HAMPERED BY THE STORM

Boston, Jan. 13.—With two schooners driven ashore off the coast of Maine by gales and railroad transportation throughout New England hampered by another day of heavy snow fall, relief was in sight tonight following a break in the weather.

Four inches of snow fell in Boston during the day and this was greatly exceeded in other parts of New England. Portland, Me., reported eight inches, making the winter's total 70 inches, and this month's total 36 inches.

Two men aboard the lumber schooner Robert W. of Rockland, Me., driven ashore by a heavy gale today at York, Me., were rescued late tonight by police and firemen of that place.

The three-masted British schooner Don Parsons was driven ashore on little Cranberry Isle, off Mount Desert Island, Me., during a blinding northeast snow storm. Captain Card, the six members of his crew and a woman were rescued by coast guardsmen.

Railroad companies were making efforts tonight to keep their tracks open as freezing weather settled following the end of the snowstorm.

Wholesale prices of fish in this city reached wartime levels today. Owing to the storms that have prevailed except four days this month fishermen have been unable to put out for extended periods.

ONE MAN KILLED IN COAL MINE EXPLOSION IN INDIANA

Vincennes, Ind., Jan. 13.—Onus man is dead, one seriously injured and another is known to be entombed as the result of an explosion in American Coal Mine No. 1, near here late today. The explosion is believed to have been caused when a shot firer set off a charge of explosives near a gas pocket which ignited. The mine, which is said to be the largest bituminous coal producer in the world, is afire.

MEXICO PAPERS DESCRIBE U. S. AS "A CRUSHING GIANT"

Mexico City, Jan. 13.—"Yankee imperialism," and "North American bureaucry," are terms used by the newspapers today in unanimously approving Mexico's refusal to participate in the Pan-American congress at Santiago. The United States is variously described as "a crushing giant" and "unscrupulous potentate," while Pan-Americanism, as interpreted by the present union is referred to as "a farce and comedy from which no good can come."

First Public Lecture Given By Emile Coue

Seemed to Cast a Spell Over Audience of Fashionably Gowned Women.

New York, Jan. 12.—A fashionably gowned audience made up mainly of elderly and middle aged women, many of them socially prominent, attended today the first public lecture given by Emile Coue, apostle of conscious auto suggestion, and enjoyed the experience. Men were in the great minority. Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and John Barrymore, actor, were there.

The pharmacist from Nancy seemed to cast a spell over his attentive audience as he pronounced his formulas. Women sat with closed eyes, tightly clasped hands, their faces twitching with emotion. There were frequent flurries of applause; every merry quip, however subtle, occasioned a ripple of appreciative amusement.

The climax was a demonstration. Two men and a woman, apparently picked haphazard from the audience went to the platform and auto suggested themselves into inability to open or close their hands, walk or talk.

After bursts of applause had greeted the successful experiment. M. Coue read letters from former patients who claimed to have cured themselves by his method. Curious ones in the audience got their awaited thrill just before M. Coue left the platform, when a woman, who said she came from Hackensack, N. J., sprang to the rostrum and shouted: "Believe him. He is right. I cured myself after suffering years of torture."

The woman said she had been a cripple, unable to walk until she heard of Coueism and that by the practice of auto suggestion she had cured herself almost entirely. She walked firmly aided by a can.

20 WITNESSES ON STAND AT MARION YESTERDAY

Marion, Ind., Jan. 12 (By the A. P.).—Twenty-nine impeachment witnesses, the largest number heard any day since the opening of the Horrin riots trial, were put on the stand by the defense today in the hope that it would be able to rest its case before the court adjourned over Saturday and Sunday.

At the close of the session, however, the defense counsel announced they still had a score of witnesses to be called and would not be able to complete the presentation of their evidence until Monday, when the state is prepared to begin its rebuttal.

Angus W Kerr, chief counsel for the defense, also announced that he would be ready to proceed immediately after this trial ends with the next case growing out of the riots, that of the trial of eighteen men, including the five defendants in the present case, charged with the murder of John Shoemaker, ones of the twenty non-union men slain during the outbreak.

Sixteen of the witnesses heard during the day were put on in an effort to impeach the testimony of George Nelson, a farmer, who testified for the state that he had seen Otis Clark, one of the defendants, and Oscar Howard, who is under indictment, lead C. K. McDowell, superintendent of the Lester "strip" mine, where the trouble started, away from a crowd that took the non-union workers from the pit to the spot where McDowell's body was found later.

All Greek Males to Be Released By Turks

All Seized at Smyrna Are to be Sent to Greece Upon Signature of Peace Treaty.

Lausanne, Jan. 12 (By the A. P.).—The Turkish delegation to the Near East conference agreed today that all Greek males seized by the Ottoman army at the time of the Smyrna affair shall be liberated and sent to Greece immediately after signature of the peace treaty. Most of these able-bodied Greek at present are working in labor gangs in the interior of Anatolia. A general exchange of the Turk and Greek civil populations—that is, Turks in Greece and Greeks in Turkey—probably will begin in May.

Efforts are being made outside the conference to find solutions for the questions of the Turkish tariff and distribution of the Ottoman debt.

The departure for London today of Sir William Tyrrell, British delegate is understood to be connected with negotiations to settle the Mosul dispute outside the conference.

The Turks made it know ntoday that they are ready to employ foreign legal experts to redraft the Turkish legal code, hoping thus to satisfy the foreign governments' demands for special tribunals for the trial of non-Turkish individuals, but it is considered doubtful that this would satisfy France, Great Britain and the United States.

TESTIMONY AGAINST SKIPWITH AT KU KLUX KLAN HEARING

Bastrop, La., Jan. 13.—Will R. Norsworthy, adroitness parish planter, testifying today in the open hearing investigation of masked hand depredations in Morehouse and the slayings of Watt Dunn and Thomas Rickard, victims of a black hooded mob, credited Captain J. K. Skipwith, leader of the parish organization of the Ku Klux Klan, with having said, "Richard and Daniel knew too much."

Norsworthy was testifying as to a conference he said was held with Skipwith in the latter's home at Vaughn, La. The discussion led up to the disappearance of Daniel and Richard.

"He made the remark that all of this trouble had occurred from two very sorry boys, very sorry characters, or something to that effect," Norsworthy testified. "And he say 'If the boys hadn't been so smart we intended to give them trial in the courts for shooting at Dr. McKoing,' but he said they were so smart and had too much to say at the ball game and there at Jim Norsworthy's barbecue at the Bonlbee," that he says 'the boys'—he didn't say 'we' that time—he said 'the boys decided they knew too much.' I believe those were the words he used—the best I can remember."

The testimony of Norsworthy with statements of Robert L. Dado and Kelly Harp, that black masks were used by a klan band on a march to the village of Stampley early last summer and the testimony of Joseph Davenport, Mer Rouge merchant, were high lights of the day's proceedings.

Norsworthy is a brother of J. T. Norsworthy, who testified that he was a former klansman and "captain" of the Morehouse chapter of the klan.

Will Norsworthy declared he was not a klansman. He explained that his conference was to ascertain the authenticity of a report that he had been accused of agreeing to accept $1,500 to kill Skipwith and Dr. McKoin.

"Captain Skipwith said he had investigated and found the report untrue. He said that the time there were six men in Arkansas spotting me. I had just returned from a trip to Arkansas before the conference."

The witness continued that he had been informed by friends at Spencer, La., that "Dr. McKoing with guns and two friends were there looking for me."

ARRAIGNED FOR THE MURDER OF THERESA McCARTHY

New York, Jan. 12.—Benjamin Prenderville, an employee in the Brooklyn general postoffice, today was arraigned on a short affidavit and held for the grand jury, charged with the murder of 10-year-old Theresa McCartha, whose night-clothed body, with a bullet through the heart, was found in her home at Brooklyn last December 26.

Mrs. Pauline McCarthy, mother of the little girl, was held without bail as a material witness. Prenderville had been a roomer at the McCarthy home.

Both the man and the woman were questioned by the police when Theresa's body was found. Prenderville was held on a charge of homicide although police declared the evidence seemed to indicate that the girl had accidentally shot herself while playing with one of the thirteen pistols Prenderville admitted having had in his bedroom.

Prenderville threw away the pistols the day Theresa's body was discovered, and police at that time accepted his explanation that he did it through fear that he would be unjustly accused of murdering the girl.

"I am satisfied that this little girl did not commit suicide, and I am equally convinced that her death was not an accident, but a deliberate murder," District Attorney Charles Dodd declared tonight.

U. S. MAY BECOME MEDIATOR IN THE REPARATIONS CRISIS

Suggestion of Secretary Hughes Still is Before the Allied Governments for Acceptance or Rejection—It Would Reconcile the Conflicting Views of Great Britain and France on the Course to be Followed—Friendly Purpose of the United States Has Been Made Plain to Both Powers—Unless the Nations Concerned Desire It, No Move Will be Made by America.

Washington, Jan. 12—Secretary Hughes' proposal for reference of the reparations problem to international financiers for recommendations based on purely economic considerations is regarded in Washington as still before the allied governments for acceptance or rejection. In the opinion of administration officials it may yet offer a way to reconcile the conflicting views of Great Britain and France on the course to be followed.

A White House spokesman stated today that the government was not moving in the reparations crisis in any way at this time and could not move unless the powers concerned showed a desire that it should do so. It was added that the friendly purposes of the United States had been made plain to all concerned. Ultimately it is hoped that a way to be helpful will be opened by action of the French or British governments.

At the state department it was said that Secretary Hughes suggestion was unchanged; that nothing had been done by this government to withdraw the proposal. It was evident that officials did not believe that actual occupation of the Ruhr region by French and Belgian forces had operated to prevent the carrying out of such a project as Mr. Hughes suggested. It was practical test of the French plan for forcible collections did not come up to French hopes.

An authoritative interpretation of French governmental opinion obtained here during the day is in line to some extent with this view. It was stated that there was no doubt, in the event that occupation of the Ruhr failed to produce the results French expert opinion forecast, further conferences with Germany might be expected and probably would lead to such alterations in reparations schedules as experience had demonstrated to be necessary.

The determination of France to proceed with the occupation it was explained, had two underlying purposes. The first was that experts in whose judgment the French authorities had confidence had held that the desired payments could be produced in that way. The second purpose, it was added, was to make it very plain to Germany that she could not escape the role of vanquished in the war by trickery or diplomatic evasions. The French authorities are convinced, it was said, that the Germans can understand only lessons backed by force.

It was admitted, however, that French economic experts might be wrong and British opinion right as to the situation in Germany. If it should be proven that Germany has been honestly endeavoring to meet her treaty obligations, and not to dodge them, the French spokesman thought it wholly probable that there could and would be a readjustment.

Another element in the reparations situation that may have to be dealt with by the powers sooner or later is the pressure in business circles in all countries for peaceful readjustments in the interest of world recuperation from the war. That has been the thought of officials of the chamber of commerce of the United States in such activities as they have undertaken.

The foreign affairs committee of the chamber was here tonight to attend a dinner given by the president, Julius Barnes to Albert Thomas, head of the international labor bureau at Geneva.

The prepared addresses dealt entirely with labor matters, but with the reparations crisis as the foremost problem of the world, business or political, it was regarded as certain that some interchange of views on that question entered into dinner table conversations.

Presumably chamber officials are marking time with any plans of their own until the state department shall have abandoned hope that the Hughes suggestion will bear fruit. They would be unlikely to intrude any new proposals into an already badly complicated situation without some knowledge of how their suggestions might be received.

NEW HAVEN GAS PLANT CRIPPLED BY EXPLOSION

New Haven, Jan. 13.—The gas supply of the city of New Haven was threatened tonight when an explosion occurred on an air blast pipe of the wate gas plant of the New Haven gas company on Chapel street. With this plant, which furnishes fifty per cent. of New Haven's gas, running at less than 50 per cent. capacity, it will be necessary to use reserve banks before repairs can be completed. It was estimated that the plant would be running at full capacity by morning.

The explosion, of undetermined origin, tore the roof from a shed and shattered about 75 windows tearing out sashes and hurling debris more than 50 years. One man, Dominick Polatti, a stoker, was hurled 15 feet but was not injured. Nearby buildings were rocked by the blast but were not damager. The explosion started a slight fire which was checked by firemen. The total damage was estimated at several thousand dollars.

Engineers said that a thirty inch cast iron valve which was shattered would be the chief cause of delay in starting the plant again. They said it would take at least 12 hours to repair the damage. They added it would be necessary to use reserve tanks to keep the city supplied until repairs were completed.

MAIN REASON FOR CAR SHORTAGE IS FINANCIAL

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 13.—The main reason for railroad car shortage is largely financial and will recur at periods of sudden business revival until a central clearing house agency, of and by the railroads, is established, S. Davies Warfield, president of the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities declared in an address before the National League of Commission Merchants in annual convention here.

The permanent remedy for the car shortage Mr. Warfield said, was through the proposed clearing house agency for the federal incorporation of which a bill is now before the senate committee on interstate commerce. He showed how his agency of the railroads would finance, rebuilt as well as new equipment. Supply the means for a comprehensive survey of the equipment and car service of the country and make effective determined necessities.

York, Me., Jan. 12.—M. S. Mitchell and his son of Rockland were rescued late tonight by police and firemen of this place from the wreck of their schooner, the Robert W., which was driven ashore at noon today on Long Beach. Coast guardsmen had failed to reach the schooner with a boat during the storm, but tonight, when wind and wave had abated, the shore rescuers reached the wreck.

Both men were frostbitten and exhausted with cold and exposure in the rigging, where they clung for hours while waves washed over the hulk. Physicians said they would recover. Vessel and cargo are a total loss.

PROHIBITION AGENTS HALT RUM-RUNNING VESSELS

Highlands, N. J., Jan. 13 (By the A. P.).—Government craft were reported tonight by bootleggers' scouts to be keeping a sharp watch on waters off the Highlands, and runners who last night were smuggling liquor ashore from a fleet massed off Ambrose channel lightship declared a holiday.

Two Highlands runners ventured out this afternoon and, although they returned tonight with small cargoes, they asserted that the risk was too great as the Highlands were under close guard. They added, however, that rum runners from Long Island points had visited the liquor fleet today and had no trouble running their cargoes through the haze which hung over the sea. Some of the rum fleet, they declared, had disposed of their stock and departed.

Receiving this report, the local bootleggers met after supper in a boathouse and voted to "lay low until the squall is over." The bootleggers sat on whiskey cases and rested their backs against stacks of them.

The capture last night of four boats belonging to the bootlegging ring was attributed to the failure of one small government craft that tried to halt a bootleg boat. It was admitted however, that the man on the Margaret G. thought the coast guard boat friendly and drew alongside her to borrow a gasoline tunnel.

It was revealed at the bootleggers' meeting that one boat captured last night escaped from her captor in the darkness. This boat today was repainted and her engine changed.

Boston Jan. 12—The evidence when the full bench of the supreme court found sufficient to remove Joseph C. Pelletier from office as district attorney of Suffolk county and to disbar him and Daniel J. Although no formal finding to this effect was entered, announcement of such a result was made in open court by Martin J. McGuire, foreman of the extraordinary session, after the grand jury had been summarily dismissed by Attorney General J. Weston Allen today.

ATHENS MOURNS DEATH OF EX-KING CONSTANTINE

Athens, Jan. 12—The news of the death of ex-king Constantine, received in Athens late Thursday, spread rapidly throughout the city. It was received with deep regret, but resignedly by his former partisans, and even his bitterest adversaries found no tongue for the revival of bitterness.

Constantine's heart, his friends here said, had been affected by excessive smoking, and they considered it not improbable that this contributed to his death.

King George, it was learned, was deeply affected by the news of his father's sudden demise.

"Since the saloon has passed into oblivion," he said, "money that was formerly spent on liquor goes into the purchase of wearing apparel. This change applies to other forms of wearing apparel besides hats."

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office
31 Church Street Telephone 1023

A new organization known as the Church Street Property Owners, Business and Professional Men's Association has been formed for the purpose of overcoming existing deplorable conditions on the street, between Main and Valley street. Dr. W. P. E. Keating has been elected temporary chairman and Harold C. Lincoln, temporary secretary. The organization have drawn and signed a petition which was presented to Mayor Charles A. Gates, Friday, asking for the immediate removal of the high snow banks which have been allowed to accumulate on the street.

Church street is very narrow compared to the amount of travel on the street and in the mind of the business men the condition of the street since the advent of snow has been a deplorable one. The work of the organization, however will not stop with the removal of the snow as another meeting will be called within a few days at which officers and committees will be selected with the aim of bringing about certain needed improvements on the street, one of them being a better lighting system. At present there is now only one incandescent electric light on the business section of the street and according to the organization, a half a dozen such lights would not be too many.

Brewster to arrange for securing his successor. Two sets of resolutions in regard to the resignation of Rev. Mr. Borchert were presented, one by the church vestry and another by a special committee of the parishioners.

The resolutions embodied the sentiment of the church officers and parishioners of the genial and spiritual relations between the rector and the people, of an untiring service of Mr. Borchert in his duties and management of church affairs. The resolutions expressed regret for the fact that Mr. Borchert is leaving for another field of work. Good fortune and a successful future were expressed by all.

A matter of old standing was brought up again within the past few days when it devolved that a number of wise mothers were justly disproving of the fact that some of the teachers in the local schools were using the hooded forms of the Ku Klux Klan as a means of frightening children who show any evil behavior. It is said by persons in a position to know that the advent of the organization gives an opportunity to tell children horrible stories of hooded forms doing wicked things and it seems that recently the custom has been so much in practice that some of the younger children are perpetually fearing an attack from the ghost forms and their sleep is disturbed with wild dreams.

In at least two of the local schools Friday the children were greatly excited by a rumor that soldiers were being sent to guard the school in view of an expected attack from the Klan who had promised to blow up the buildings. The wiser mothers are of the opinion that telling ghost stories to children is a very bad practice and detrimental to the courage and peace of mind of their children.

The Hottentot Coming to Strand

Thomas H. Ince has picked a winner and produced a thriller in his film version of "The Hottentot." Adapted from the stage play of the same name in which Willie Collier scored his great success, the picture is a novel combination of hilarious comedy and tense drama.

The witty lines of the play which won such endless laughter from the audiences throughout the country have been retained in sparkling sub-titles. The absurd situations in which a horse-fearing yachtsman finds himself when he becomes the accidental hero of a runaway and is mistaken for a famous steeplechase rider of the same name have been developed on the screen with the experiness of the master showman.

Just by the way of good measure, Ince has filmed a steeplechase, which couldn't be included in the stage play, and in a thrilling achievement of daring riding and spectacular photography. It took a month and 200,000 celluloid feet to catch the hurdling horses and their riders in action rapid enough to satisfy the producer.

From beginning to end "The Hottentot" is crowded with laughs. Sam's introduction to Peggy Fairfax, with whom he promptly falls in love, is one of the funniest incidents ever screened. The horse-fearing yachtsman has just shaken hands with her when her horse runs away. Sam jumps on the running board of his automobile to pursue her. When the car hits a rut he is thrown into the air and lights on the back of a riderless horse that has been plunging along in mad fright beside the auto.

By sheerest accident the terrified yachtsman on the equally terrified horse manages to pull the girl from her mount before he himself is thrown violently over an embankment and crowned with a flying horseshoe from the violently pawing horse that has just run away.

After this absurd scene which everyone believes has been a brilliant rescue, Sam is mistaken for a famous steeplechase rider of his same name. His struggles to extricate himself from a situation as embarrassing as it is dangerous, in view of the fact that he can't ride at all, make Sam's life miserable from that time on. In the end he either has to admit himself a coward to the girl he loves or ride the wild Hottentot in a break-neck steeplechase.

"The Hottentot" is the sort of a picture that is sure to appeal to every member of the family. Its comedy is brilliant and wholesome from start to finish. There is a strong love interest and a smashing climax in the magnificent steeplechase.

Madge Bellamy, recently starred in Maurice Tourneur's "Lorna Doone," is at her winsome best as the vivacious little sportswoman for whom Sam overcomes fear. Douglas MacLean, as the horse-fearing yachtsman, and Raymond Hatton, as Swift, the eccentric butler, have worked out clever characterizations that are good for a laugh every time they appear on the screen.

"The Hottentot" will be shown at the Strand theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Breed Theatre

Prohibition and the arguments, for and against it, stories of bootleggers and their apprehension and punishment, fill the newspapers. The liquor question is still one of the grave problems of the day. It affords many opportunities for dramatic treatment, and one of the best of these is disclosed in Over the Border, the Penrhyn Stanlaws Paramount production featuring Betty Compson and Tom Moore, which is the feature attraction at the the Breed theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Betty Compson as the daughter of the man who smuggles liquor in wholesale quantities across the United States-Canadian boundary line, and the sweetheart of a Royal Mounted policeman charged with enforcing the law, has a fine emotional role, while the part opposite her, that of a mounted policeman, is ably played by Tom Moore. The picture was taken in the mountains amid the snows, and is pictorially very beautiful. Individually, every scene is a gem, and in its selection for inclusion in the picture, marks the artistic sense which made Penrhyn Stanlaws a power in the artist world before becoming a director. The supporting company is wholly adequate.

Today's bill consists of William Farnum in "Without Compromise," Chas. Hutchison in Go Get Em Hutch; Al St. John in Special Delivery, and the Pathe news. Continuous show today from 1.30 to 10.15.

Attraction at Broadway

That it isn't a good idea to change husbands without genuine consideration, which cannot be a thing of a moment, is the advice of the picture "Don't Change Your Husband," produced by Cecil B. DeMille for Artcraft and which is scheduled to be shown at the Broadway theatre on Sunday night only.

Jeanie Macpherson is the author and she has woven a tale of really beautiful character, and into the warp and woof has introduced a thread of Oriental mysticism that is distinctly bizarre and at the same time effective.

Gloria Swanson is the leading feminine figure and her work is said to be exquisite, while she is certainly one of the most beautiful women on the screen today. Elliott Dexter and Lewis Cody play the leading male roles and do so with real artistry.

For a picture out of the ordinary in every respect, "Don't Change Your Husband" can be strongly recommended.

A comedy and news will furnish the remainder of the program.

Vaudeville at the Broadway First Half of Next Week

There are going to be five B. F. Keith vaudeville acts at the Broadway for the first half of next week and a special feature attraction.

William de Mille's latest Paramount production, "Clarence," said to be one of the finest refined comedies ever seen on the screen, will be the feature at the Broady theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayers and May McAvoy, three noted screen stars, are featured. The story deals with the trials of a war veteran with a fondness for music and quiet, to adjust the differences of a wrangling family and ultimately brings peace to the household. There are many laughs and and exquisite love element. The cast is unusually effective.

JOHNSON OUTFIGHTS VETERAN BRENNAN IN TERRIFIC BATTLE

New York, Jan. 12.—Floyd Johnson, sensational Iowa heavyweight, decisively defeated Bill Brennan, Chicago veteran, tonight in a 15-round contest at Madison Square Garden. Johnson received the judges' decision after outfighting and out-boxing his rival all the way.

It was the acid test for Johnson, who has come rapidly to the fore in the past few months, and his victory over the battle-scarred Chicagoan, put him in the front rank of contenders for the title held by Jack Dempsey.

Ring critics were agreed that the form shown by the young Iowan was the most impressive of any pugilist who has appeared on the heavyweight horizon in some time. Johnson, realizing that his championship aspirations were at stake, set a furious pace from the start. He directed a smashing attack to the head and body and had Brennan in distress in several rounds, notably the twelfth and fifteenth. His eagerness cost him several chances to put over what might have been a decisive blow.

Brennan weathered the storm of his young opponent's attack largely because of his ring generalship and apparent good condition. He was totally unable, however, to carry on any kind of an offensive.

A galaxy of notables in present and past heavyweight history witnessed the bout, including three former champions, Jess Willard, Jack Johnson and James J. Corbett. Willard, who is seeking a return match with Dempsey, was given a tumultuous greeting.

Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight, knocked out Joe McCann, of Newark, N. J., in the fifth round of the 12-round semi-final match. Renault weighed 192 1-2 and McLann 205 1-2.

The Fight in Detail

Round One

Brennan rushed Johnson at the start but the Iowan countered with his left, landing several stiff jabs to the jaw. Both mixed willingly with Johnson landing the cleaner blows.

Round Two

Johnson took the aggressive and both landed hard body blows at close quarters. Johnson shot over a hard right to the ribs and Brennan countered with a left hook to the chin. They were mixing furiously as the bell rang.

Round Three

Round Four

Johnson shot over two jolting rights to Brennan's body without drawing a reply. Brennan jabbed with his left to the jaw, but was forced to clinch by a smashing right to the head. Johnson forced the Chicagoan about the ring with battering rights and lefts to the head.

Round Five

Brennan accidentally slipped to the floor as they were mixing but quickly regained his footing. Brennan absorbed a hard right to the jaw, but drove in his left in retaliation. Brennan blocked Johnson's frequent lunges and forced the Iowan to swing wildly.

Round Six

Johnson rocked Brennan with a right smash to the jaw. A stiff right jab to the head opened a cut over Brennan's eye. Both drove in hard blows to the body and Johnson missed a wild swing with his left.

Round Seven

Johnson sent Brennan back on his heels with a crashing right swing. The Iowan set a terrific pace, but Brennan seemed content to stay on the defensive. Blood posed from cuts over both of Brennan's eyes after a swift exchange. Johnson hurt Brennan with hard rights to the body.

Round Eight

Round Nine

Brennan appeared weakened by Johnson's steady attack to his body and clinched repeatedly. He caught Johnson twice on the jaw with jolting lefts, but the Iowan came right back with both fists.

Round Ten

Johnson staggered Brennan with a two-fisted attack to the head and body. Brennan shot in a right to the jaw and followed with his left but the punches lacked steam. Both swung furiously with both fists for a few moments. Johnson landing effectively with his left to the head and body as the bell rang.

Round Eleven

Johnson drove Brennan back with a terrific right hook and bombarded the Chicagoan about the head. Brennan landed lightly to the jaw while Johnson swung wildly. Johnson was forcing the fighting as the round ended.

Round Twelve

Continuing his furious pace, Johnson showered Brennan with rights and lefts to the head and kept the veterans on the defensive. Johnson had Brennan hanging on as he drove in stiff punches to the jaw and ribs. Brennan apparently was in distress as the round ended.

Round Thirteen

Johnson shook Brennan with a hard right to the body and drew a right swing to the head in reply. Johnson swung wildly several times before connecting with a right to the body.

Round Fourteen

Brennan took the aggressive for a few moments and jabbed Johnson about the head with his left. Johnson swung wildly and took another right to the head. Both appeared tired as the result of the swift pace.

Round Fifteen

Johnson drove in his left to the head and body, staggering Brennan with a smash to the ribs. Both landed hard blows to the head. Johnson unloosed a terrific attack to the head, forcing Brennan to clinch. He sent the Chicagoan to the ropes and battered him with terrific punches to the head.

LANDIS UNDECIDED ABOUT ENTERING LEAGUE'S SQUABBLE

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 12.—Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, was still undecided tonight whether he will take a hand in the word battle over the major-minor draft question.

After mulling over William H. McCarthy's statement at San Francisco last night in which the Pacific Coast league president charged that the former judge is a false Moses who has failed to lead baseball into the promised land, the commissioner indicated tonight that he might take a turn at bat later, but then in answer to a question he countered:

"Can you see any need for erecting a ring, climbing in and going to it every time some gentleman happens to pop off?"

For the want of a regular fight with the commissioner, the minor league magnates filed in the day by starling a mild row in their own household, with McCarthy and Al Tearney, president of the Western and Three Eye leagues, both taking pot shots at Mike Sexton, president of the minors.

Sexton became the target when he issued a statement at Rock Island deploring the "radical expression" coming from some of our members predicting a break between the majors and minors and advised the minor leaguers to refrain from further newspaper discussion.

TOOLE MAKES SWEEPING STATEMENT REGARDING MAJOR-MINOR AGREEMENT

New York, Jan. 12.—John Conway Toole, president of the International league, jumped into the thick of the major-minor draft controversy today with a statement charging that "defenders of the one-sided legislation recently passed by the National and American leagues" either were ignorant, were being misquoted, or were trying to deceive the public as to the action on the increased optional player limit taken by the minor leagues' association at Louisville.

By "one-sided legislation" Mr. Toole referred to the joint major league decision increasing the optional player limit from eight to fifteen and attaching the draft string to all players released to minor league clubs after Jan. 10. The majors have defended this move on the ground that the minors violated the joint agreement of 1921 by refusing to consider the optional player increase at their last meeting.

"The National association did not pass a resolution declining to pass on proposed amendments to the major-minor league agreement," Mr. Toole's statement said. "What the minors did do and the reasons for it are as follows:

"In January, 1921, after months of negotiation, committee meetings and joint meetings, the major-minor league agreement was signed at Chicago on Jan. 14, 1921. It provided that each major league club could send out eight players and no more on optional agreement. Less than six months later the major leagues admittedly sending out over eight optional players, asked the minor leagues to overlook their violation and permit them to continue for 1921 on the plea that they had so many players on hand they would not live up to what they had agreed to after much thought in January, 1921.

"Did the minors raise loud cries of broken agreement against the majors? Not at all. On Commissioner Landis' assurance that it would not occur after 1921, they decided to overlook the violation for that year.

"In 1922 the major leagues voted to raise the number of optional players from eight to fifteen. The minors voted 'No' on that. If Commissioner Landis says that the majors lived up to the rule and only sent out eight optional players each in 1922, everyone will believe it, although it is common talk in baseball that the rule was not observed by all clubs.

"At Louisville the secretary of the National association read a proposal submitted to the advisory council, on which he is one of our representatives, which, if later approved, would raise the optional player limit to fifteen and the number of players that could be owned by each big league club in the off season from forty to fifty.

"The National association unanimously voted to reject this suggestion, and having voted to have eight instead of fifteen the optional player limit three times in two years, it went further and said it would not vote on any proposed changes to these particular features of the agreement until the next annual meeting.

"The major-minor leagues' agreement says that amendments to it may from time to time be proposed by the advisory council. If voting three times to fix the optional player limit at eight and voting once to suspend it at the request of the majors for 1921 only is not voting from time to time, what would be? If any other organization voted four times on a single proposition in less than two years, it might well be excused for declining to vote again at this time."

C. OF C. MAY PARTICIPATE IN INTERNATIONAL LABOR OFFICE

Washington, Jan. 12.—Announcement that the Charber of Commerce of the United States is considering the advisability of participating in the international labor office, set up under the treaty of Versailles, was made here tonight by Julius Barnes, the chamber's president.

Speaking at a dinner given by him in honor of Albert Thomas, director of the international office Mr. Barnes declared that such a participation would be based on the idea of "levelling up" foreign industrial standards rather than "levelling down our own."

The suggestion made by the chamber president was in response to an address by Mr. Thomas, saying that although the United States government did not want to bind itself unduly by international obligations, Amemrican business men should not hold back from the "center of co-operation" established by the international labor office.

"Though the United States is not a member of the international labor organization," said Mr. Thomas, "I venture to point out that they derive indirectly some advantages from the work accomplished by that organization. When we endeavor to protect the countries which have advanced social legislation against the unfair competition of countries where the work people are harshly exploited, we are helping the United States as well as other forward countries to maintain their high standards of labor conditions.

"Substantial results in this direction have already been achieved. But we cannot develop our effort to its fullest possible extent except with the daily co-operation of the United States. Once the country whos econditions of labor are the best puts itself in communion with us, it will help us considerably in leading all of the countries of the world towards better conditions. Moreover, the employers in this country have often shown in signal ways their realization of the bearing of good conditions of labor on good production and in that respect they are already in agreement with the international labor office."

Mr. Barnes declared he had called together the foreign affairs committee of the chamber to meet Mr. Thomas because "we have a feeling that there are times when national self-interest and international co-operation run in parallel channels."

"America has a considerable pride," continued Mr. Barnes, "that its common standard of living is manifestly higher than that of any other industrial country. It desires to maintain and advance that standard. But as a surplus producing country selling in export markets of the world there is a limit to the disparity in living conditions and wage scales which cannot be wholly overcome even by American resourcefulness and American adaptibility to large scale production, through mechanical aids.

"Manifestly, both in the interests of an increase in human standards and also in the self interest of national protection of our own standards the process of equalization in wages and working conditions between ourselves and our industrial competitors should be one of levelling up their standards rather than levelling down our own.

"It is with this adea that the Chamber of Commerce of the United States is seriously considering the advisability of participating in the employers section of the international labor office so that we may understand and influence comparative world industrial relations."

QUEER THINGS ACCUMULATED BY U. S. TROOPS AT COBLENZ

Coblenz, Jan. 12 (By the A. (P.)—The American transport St. Mihiel will look like Noah's Ark when she sails from Antwerp with the last of the American forces in Germany, if the officers and men are allowed to carry all the quasi animals and merchandise they have accumulated in the ast four years.

The men have acquired many strange creatures, ranging from monkeys to Rhine fish. The exact number of German police dogs in the outfit is unknown but they are a multitude, and in addition there are numerous dachshunds, turtles, monkeys and song birds.

Of the inanimate objects, there are queer little music boxes fixed in the bottom of beer steins that, when properly worked, make noises like birds; there are weird collections of postcards, antique pictures and all varieties of carved pipes, and great supplies of carpets and civilian clothes, the latter including queer-shaped hats and silk underwear bought at ridiculously low prices in Cologne, together with furs and other odds and ends.

Getting all this dunne abdard the St. Mihiel has become a great problem.

"You fellows seem to have the idea," one top sergeant told his men this morning, "that the old boat is just going to steam right up the Rhine, back up to the bank and let you drag your truck on board."

All in all, it is certain the St. Mihiel will be fully loaded. But it is not so much what the soldiers want to take that counts as what both officers and men are leaving behind. The majority of them are pulling up the roots the life they learned to love; it is not a regiment, but a colony, that is being moved.

There will remain for a time fifty officers and men to straighten out the records, dispose of property and settle claims. Major-General Allen and Coy Colonel Willam W. Harts, chief of staff of the army of occupation, probaby will head this rear guard. They will close down the model farm, where cattle, hogs, chickens, rabbits, fruits and vegetables have been raised and to which was attached a large dairy.

Then, too, there are a number of army schools, tennis courts, golf clubs and an athletic field near Fort Alexandria where polo matches were held.

One place which officers and men will abandon with great regret is Carnival Island, the scene of many horse shows and baseball and football matches. Its diamond is regarded as the finest in Europe.

EXPECTING TO PAY.

It is an excellent impression that is made by the chancellor of the British exchequer, who heads the delegation sent to this country to negotiate terms under which the war debt which Great Britain owes to the United States shall be paid. Chancellor Baldwin has come here talking as a debtor nation. Great Britain is in and wants her hands and setting up misrepresentations for the purpose of getting the United States to say that it will not attempt to collect.

Regardless of all that has been said from time to time about cancelling the debts, and the attitude which is known this country takes on the question, Chancellor Baldwin has come saying that the British mission is here "with the expressed intention of paying our debt and it is owing to the practical difficulties of making international payments that we are about to consult with you in order to accomplish the end which we both have in view."

That is coming to the point promptly and properly, and what further impresses is the statement that it is "our wish to approach the discussion as business men seeking a business solution of what is fundamentally a business problem."

Nothing more pat or sensible could be expected. The chancellor hasn't come over here to give us the impression that Great Britain is flush with money and is willing to throw it away. He hasn't come with the idea of arranging for something which the British do not intend to carry out. The idea that the problem should be dealt with in a businesslike manner is the one and only attitude that is to be expected. Conditions that exist must be taken into consideration. Due attention must be given to the ability to pay, and the parts which the payment of this debt must play in connection with the financial situation and economic conditions likewise have a bearing.

There is no intention on the part of this country to exact payment under such terms that it will mean hardships. Payment within reason, all things considered, is as much as can be expected and the British chancellor has not injured his chances of getting fair treatment by the open and frank statement he has made.

SHORTAGE OF LABORERS.

Among others who are looking for a modification of the existing immigration law is the National Association of Manufacturers, which has had a special committee probing into the question during the past two years. The demand which this organization voices is for unskilled laborers. There was a time when we had plenty of them, but modern conditions there are not enough to meet requirements. Those who have responded to such demands no longer consider themselves in that class. They have moved on and there has not been a sufficient number to take their places to serve industrial requirements. It is of course a situation that must of necessity get its share of attention from those considering immigration law changes.

There are also those who are seeking the lifting of the restrictions that the farming sections of the country may obtain the help that is required to produce the crops. Farm help is really a problem.

Under the literacy test that is applied there is no encouragement given workers because they are such. Efforts are made to get those who can read and write. They may be material for good future citizens and they may not be. It is likewise impossible to say that many who are kept out because they are illiterate will not make good citizens under the right influences.

We are most anxious to keep out the undesirables. We want none of the crooks from other countries and yet it would doubtless be found that some of the most undesirable would meet the literacy test with flying colors.

As the result of the study they have had made the manufacturers offer the suggestion that the monthly quota arrangement by ended, that physical examinations be made abroad, that the literacy test be eliminated, that the government control the distribution of immigrants and that the secretary of labor shall have the authority to admit immigrants in excess of the quotas whenever there are labor shortages. The difficulty of establishing immigration restrictions that will cover all periods is apparent and such suggestions as are made for dealing with prevailing conditions are entitled to be judged on their merit.

DECIDED REFORMS NEEDED.

From the testimony that is being produced as the result of the methods pursued by the Ku Klux Klan in Mer Rouge, Louisiana is making not only a good start in the way of cleaning up such conditions, but it is also demonstrating to any and all other states where similar conditions prevail that the quicker they come to the recognition of the fact that mob violence and lynch law are done away with and replaced by lawful methods of adjusting improper conditions the quicker will there be an end to the long series of disgraceful affairs which characterize certain southern states.

This endeavor to take the responsibility of punishing those judged to be guilty of wrong doing, without bringing them to account under the established provisions of the law is as lawless as the acts of those whom they feel bound to punish. By their very acts they belittle the law. Their action encourages others to show disrespect for what is intended to and what if given a chance will regulate undesirable conditions and check crime. If those who are so devoted to the mob rule or the hooded method of dealing with conditions would give just as strong backing to the enforcement of the law there would be no more need for lynchings and pillow case parties in the south than there is in the north.

It is an unfortunate state of affairs that has developed there, and it is impossible to note that any great amount of improvement is being shown because of the resort to such methods. Indulgence in it for the worst cases of crime only encourages the resort to it for all kinds of minor offenses. Even suspicion is considered sufficient to kill a man in cold blood and gloat over it.

Louisiana may not be proud of conditions that existed in Mer Rouge, but it can be less proud of the manner selected by those who took matters into their own hands by doing masked what they ought to have done openly and through the courts, if in fact there were grounds for action.

DEALING WITH PANAMA.

When the United States made arrangements with Panama for the construction of the canal across the isthmus it was agreed that the United States should be permitted to do whatever was necessary for the protection of the canal. Possibly the agreement was on broad terms and that it has been necessary to use land and take military measures and otherwise protect the large investment that has been made there. It doesn't appear that this country has exceeded its rights, although it may be that Panama, or some in that republic, think it has done some things which they had not contemplated, or failed to do some things which they had expected.

Under the circumstances the information to the effect that the government is preparing a new treaty to replace the existing one, with a view to overcome any friction that exists or any friction that might be caused indicates that the United States isn't disposed to create ill feeling in that republic, whether it is based upon good or imaginary grounds.

Though it was persistently maintained that this country was not under obligation to make a settlement with Colombia in response to the demands that were made by that country as the result of the canal preliminaries, it was nevertheless believed that it was for the best interests of the country that there should be swept away any grounds for bitterness and that as long as it existed the most satisfactory ending would come from a settlement. Friendliness is preferable to enmity, even though there is no disposition to encourage any hold-up games.

Panama has no reason to doubt the sincerity of the United States in the administration of the Canal zone. And the good feeling is preferable to bad. For that reason a reconstructed treaty would prove an admirable method of eliminating whatever friction may be developing in that region. Much the same view applies to Panama that did to Colombia. We are not ready to be worked, but we are not willing to be judged as unjust.

CONSTANTINE.

The death of former King Constantine of Greece marks the ending of a career that has been much in the eyes of the world for the past several years. When he succeeded his father who had been greatly liked by the Greeks he made a most favorable impression. As a leader he was acclaimed and particularly after such service as he saw with the army. Much was expected from him, but little has resulted. Greece would be in a much different position today but for the course he has led it.

Constantine's mistake was made during the early days of the World war. Because he was of Danish descent on his father's side and linked up to Germany and the former kaiser through his wife he was strongly inclined to German views. In fact it is maintained that when his views were strong enough in that direction his army was depened upon to furnish whatever was needed in addition. Such assistance was most probable and it was because of his German leanings that he was dethroned the first time.

Greece recovered much in the period following and had reinstated itself in the good graces of the allied nations only to have the situation upset again by demanding the return of Constantine. It took only a comparatively short time to convince the people of Greece that they had made a great mistake, and as usual under such conditions his second overthrow came speedily. As he went into exile others fared less kindly but death has now overtaken him before he had reached a permanent earthly abode. Constantine's career has been such that it will not be soon forgotten by the Greek people.

For various reasons it is felt that we had snow enough, but when the conditions in states to the north are learned there is increased certainty about it.

Now that 10,000 German marks can be obtained for a dollar some will regret they rushed into the market as early as they did a year or two ago.

Now that there are vacancies to be filled on the supreme court bench, and after March 4 in the cabinet, the guessing as to appointments has started. Yours may be as good as any.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Two organizations of Massachusetts, the Woman's Municipal league of Boston and the state committee of the National Civic federation, have taken in the establishment of a school for public service. This organization is to train women for the duties of public office. The women of the country have asked for the elective franchise, and the request has been granted. Logically they expect to bear their part in the administration of public affairs. It is expected that they should do so. Therefore this projected training school is of the highest importance. It shows that women recognize the need of such a school, and their willingness to patronize it. If the nation is calling loudly for anything, it is for qualified officials. We must get over the idea that useful partisanship is the only qualification needed for a good official. Let such schools be established all over the country, and by all means make them co-educational.

One of the current political questions that is arousing the interest and, in no small degree, the hot passions, of the European countries is that of reparations. Is there not a moral side to the question as well as political? If it is a great business question it will involve both. One phase of the matter is not open to debate, and that is: Germany and her allies are morally and politically to repair the damage they did, as far as they are able. At the same time her creditors must not play the role of Shylock, demanding a "pound for a pound," for this is beyond her power probably for years to come. She has yet to regain her far-reaching trade relations with the rest of the world before she can pay her full indebtedness. She must also restore that amazing internal producing capacity which she had in pre-war days. An individual cannot pay his debts if he has nothing to pay with. Neither can a nation.

As a world problem would it be wise for her various creditors to swoop down upon her industries and natural resources like a flock of vultures, getting but a fragment of what she owes? Thus enfeebled, she would easily become bankrupt and her creditors would lose the major part of their dues. Provoked as we have a right to be for the damage done by her militarist parties, we must remember that the world owes her a great debt for her deeds in the whole realm of learning. Still she must be made to feel that she must pay to the limit of her ability, even when these bills are somewhat trimmed. To let her go scot free would be a great moral wrong. It would have a bad influence on business in general. The plain business man on the street is asking this question: "Why should a nation be excused from meeting an obligation which would be denied an individual?" If nations refuse to pay their honest debts, and get away with it, why not individuals and corporations?

"All things come to them that wait" is a saying as false as it is old. People who wait for things to come usually get sadly left for two perfectly obvious reasons: Either because somebody who doesn't wait steps in and gets them, or the things themselves, waiting so long to be gotten, become so antiquated that nobody wants them. This waiting business isn't what it's cracked up to be, whether it is a job you're waiting for or a wife. No job goes begging for the man unless it is one so responsible that a big enough man for it is not forthcoming. If you want a wife, don't wait for her to come, but go after her as it is the only way you'll ever get her. I say this in full knowledge of the fact that we are living in the golden age of flappers. You will wait a long time for the right sort of woman because you are not worth going after. There is something to be said for the flapper. She has a spine and a will power joined together by pep, and, whatever else she is not, she is not a lifeless member of the community just waiting—for the undertaker.

In order to hit a mark one must be able to see it. If a man hits a target with his eyes closed, it is mere chance. As a rule, blind men are not sharpshooters. Soldiers and sportsmen prefer the ones who aim at marks, neither is the bullseye the only target in use. Any object one chooses worth the efforts as a target to hit at and ordinarily one must see it if he expects to get it but not always. For short range practice anywhere in human life the target must be seen. But in some of our large fortresses there are disappearing guns that fire at unseen marks, the range and aim being controlled by transmitting data through some agency. I wonder if we do not need a little more scientific aiming after the prizes in practical life. If boys and girls are educated they are more than apt to make scientific approaches to the object sought than the ignoramus. Education makes for skill, and skill is an immense help in getting results.

Prizes are the visible rewards of merit, and they do not seem to be numerous until they have been secured. They are given to those on rather they are won by those, who display more than ordinary skill. The boy who can run, walk, hop, skip and jump, row, paddle, swim, dive and throw better than other boys who enter a contest gets a prize. To do a thing he must have endurance skill and judgment. Untrained strength is not a prize winner. Men of quite ordinary strength and build make home runs. Anyone in the bleachers are many men twice as strong as they who, if suddenly called into the game, would not be able to make first base. Great strength is a fine asset to begin with but if it is untrained and used with poor judgment it counts for very little in gaining the prizes of life. A horse has far greater animal strength than a man but man is his master absolutely.

One is not to be judged by what the vox populi says either in praise or censure. The more one studies this so-called vox populi or voice of the people he will see that it is utterly useless and without any value whatever. It may be open to quest on if there is such a thing as public opinion because the public is so divided up over every conceivable question. When you talk about the public opinion of a political question what do you mean? Democratic opinion or republican? Which amounts to nothing because on many questions they are diametrically opposed. What is public opinion on the rum question? Those who believe in prohibition or bootlegging? Both cannot be right. Moral decency says that Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle ought not to come again into the limelight. Others—whatever he feels opinions—belong equally to the great general public say that he is as decent as half of those whose films are seen nightly. Just what do you mean by public opinion?

The cynic may call it a bit of Sunday school propaganda and yet when one sees the failure of all other policies one is inclined to ask if the exercise of the Golden Rule to the diseased conditions of the world might not at least be tried. Diplomacy has utterly failed in meeting the political needs of Europe. Not a single prime minister of the war period is now in power on the continent. Italy has had four since Orlando resigned; France has had two since the days of the "Tiger." It is nearly two years since Wilson left the White House. More recently, Lloyd George has been repudiated by the coalitionists and if he, with his amazing political sagacity, was unequal to the task, it may be questioned if diplomacy will do it. We may laugh about Sunday school policies but there will never be peace in Europe until they give up their mutual suspicions and have faith in one another. If the leaders of the people were all following in the steps of the Master, there would be peace. Might has been tried and failed.

It is the contrariness of her sex that causes a woman to love a man after she imagines she has broken his heart by not loving him.

ATLANTIC IN ENDLESS WAR AGAINST COAST.

The washing away by the sea of land worth millions of dollars on the coast of New Jersey, pointed to recently in the annual report of the director of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, draws attention to the battle waged year in and year out between the sea and land along the entire length of America's shore line.

"The truth is that sea and land have been foes since the beginning of time," says a bulletin on the same subject issued from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"According to the dreams of some physiographers, these old enemies will remain such until the last mountain pinnacle has been washed down and ground to sand, and the victorious ocean rolls, unbroken around the world. But whatever may be the outcome millions of years in the future, we are now in an era of give and take. Many acres —even square miles—of land are lost annually; but compensating areas are built up at other places."

Continuing, the bulletin quotes as follows from a communication to the society by John Oliver La Gorce describing the "action" in portion of the Atlantic sector where the never-ending conflict rages most furiously:

Waves Undermine Nantucket's Cliffs

"Looking southward across the eastern entrance to Nantucket Sound, one sights Nantucket Island in the distance. On the south side of this island the retreat of the cliffs is often as much as six feet a year.

"Further to the west lies Martha's Vineyard, also an outpost of the land. Here there are rearing ramparts of rock a hundred feet high, but even they cannot entirely withstand the incessant attacks of the indomitable sea.

"To the southwest of Martha's Vineyard lies the desolate island of 'No Man's Land,' which is well worthy the name it bears. Gradually the sea is tearing away its vitals, and it is predicted that by the end of the present century it will disappear beneath the waves forever.

"On the south coast of Long Island we find beaches and shifting sands. Here we get into more hopeful territory, for the land always has an upbuilding Oliver on for every down-tearing Roland the sea may have to offer. From Shinnecock Bay to Fire Island, a rampart of sand some 40 miles long has been thrown forward off the real shore line, and the sea, pounding against this in its maddest fury, encounters a buffer that throws it back a baffled and exhausted foe. Moreover, the sea is compelled to surrender captive sands taken up elsewhere, and these are re-equipped and put into the front trenches of the island's south-shore defenses.

Sandy Hook Victory for Land Forces

"On the Jersey coast, Sandy Hook stands out as an advance guard of the forces of the land, determined to cut through the line of communication of the sea in its drive into the Raritan Bay salient.

"When there is a deeply indented coast-line, the ocean currents paralleling the shores refuse to follow the indentation and cut straight across. Striking deeper water, they slow up and deliver from hundreds to countless grains of sand which momentum has enabled them to carry along.

"Eventually these grains grow into a high submarine ridge, which holds up the onrushing waves and forces them to give up a sand toll as they pass. Having gained courage in its size, the ridge makes a sally from the surf and becomes a full-fledged spit, or hook.

"Sandy Hook is a splendid example of this method of the land in invading the dominions of the sea. It very frequently happens that the spit marches on until it reaches across the bay area and captured the entire water army within the fallen. Then science decorates it with a cross de guerre and gives it a new name—it becomes a bar.

Sand Barriers a Protection

"The Jersey coast is full of classic examples of the war between the land and the sea. Here are no towering ramparts, with frowning walls, that seem to defy all the armies with which General Neptune can attack them. Nay, rather, here the land forces have camouflaged their strength, and have entrenched themselves behind barriers of sand.

"At Long Branch one may watch the shifting fortunes of the battle. Here, in spite of the most elaborate system of breakwaters man has erected, the shoreline is being led captive inch by inch. But the prisoner sand does not remain in captivity. As it is being escorted back of the lines it makes a successful dash for liberty and rejoins other land units north and south of Long Branch and aids in a counter-attack in those neighborhoods.

"In the vicinity of Atlantic City the sea is ever striving to gain a foothold; but at present the best it can do is to force a shifting of land reserves from one side of a salient to another. In a few years it took off 76 acres of ground from the neighborhood of Maine avenue and forced most of it around to the lee of the point at Ohio and New Jersey avenues.

"If the sea in its warfare against the land sometimes ruins a haven of refuge, at other times it is compelled by the land to create such a haven. Off the Maryland-Virginia shore lies the long barrier-like island of Assateague. Once the seaward southern point of this island was only a bare lip. Gradually, the land began to force the sea back to give it sand, and with this it has built a fine behind which many a mariner seeks safety from the fierce nor'easters that sweep these coasts.

Wind Changes Sides

"When one comes to the Virginia capes and studies conditions there, it is found that in times past the sea had another ally, of which no mention has yet been made—subsidences. In a bygone age the Susquehanna, the Potomac, and the James rivers rolled in stately grandeur to the sea. Then there came a subsidence, and the sea rushed in through the reach between Cape Charles and Henry and overwhelmed the land in all that vast area we call Chesapeake Bay.

"The land has not always been without an ally to counterbalance this display of strength. Sometimes there comes upheavals of the floor of the sea that drive the water into a retreat which often becomes a rout.

"From the Virginia capes southward, one may see the same forces at death grips that are found on the Jersey and other coasts. But neither at Cape Cod nor in Jersey will one behold to such advantage the role played by the wind, the bolshevik of the land and sea, as in the region of the kingly capes and in the vicinity of Hatteras. Now it boldly marshals its forces alongside those of the water and urges on the attack with the utmost abandon. And now, repentant of that role, it steps in and helps the land erect great barriers of sand dunes—against which the wildest sea, in its maddest moment charges in vain.

"Along the southeasternmost coast of Florida, from Cape Florida, which guards lovely Miami, on down to Key West, is the beautiful key region, where the coral polyps have established foundations upon which the land has been able to built first-line defenses that break up the assaults of the sea before they reach vital ground."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Norwich Is Meeting the Boone Demand.

Mr. Editor: In the case of Mr. Arbuckle of which so much has been written, would not a little charity exercised do more good than volumes of vilification? Mr. Arbuckle was tried by a court and jury of his peers which at least presumes his innocence of any crime of violence. The affair where one of the parties met death, was no doubt a rum party. The liquid refreshments being furnished by Mr. Arbuckle were eagerly absorbed by his guests, as is generally the case where everything is free. Miss Rappe, knowing her weakness, should have abstained but did not. But for all this Mr. A. was acquitted. Best known to the public as a screen actor and as a funmaker, clean and above censure, conceded to be the best in the profession. Some are not satisfied with piling on vile names and epithets to prevent his return to his former vocation. Do these letter writing detractors realize that they are giving him a lot of free advertising and creating greater notoriety for him than ever? Why not give him a chance to make good and redeem himself as Christ would if He were on earth and asked for judgment? A large number of screen artists have not the best of reputations, yet they are praised and admired by many. I am not a movie fan and know very little of Mr. Arbuckle except by hearsay and the late scandal. Have never seen his corpulence on the screen and have no particular wish to do so. But in his case I think the public can afford to be more patient and charitable without making themselves any worse morally. There are many things that need attention more than the above such as failure to effect prohibition and check the great crime wave that is flooding the country.

Crimes of every description are enacted every day and trusted officials are evading their duties and defrauding the government on every hand. At Washington where the president and his officials are sworn to enforce the provisions of the Constitution and federal law, whiskey is being smuggled in in cases marked "diplomatic," and embassies are allowed to import liquor for personal use, small drug stores are starting up in various localities, ostensibly for prescription purposes, but really to supply the demand of the booze lover, and here let me say that for every saloon that is put out of business one or more kitchen dives go into commission in more desirable locations to meet the demand of the consumer. Here in this city of Norwich the supply is equal to the demand and some of the home products, I have been informed on good authority is equal to if not superior to the pre-war brand. Enforce the law, let charity wait.

Eligible Dance Halls

Mr. Editor: In the past few days what might be called an invitation to form a "dancing club" has been sent to certain persons in the city.

The invitation says "undoubtedly you know that there is not an eligible place for those desiring to partake in an evening of dancing."

Would the writer of those so-called invitations tell me and other interested parties what is meant by the word "eligible" place.

Various parties run successful dances in several halls in the city and the manner in which these affairs are conducted is not only a credit to themselves but also to the city.

If these affairs were not run in eligible places they would not enjoy the fine attendance of not one class, but of people from every walk of life that they do. Will the writer of the invitation kindly explain and set us at rest?

Stories That Recall Others

Wonder Why.

Mr. Greene had quite a reputation in the suburb which he honored with his abiding presence. It is to be feared, however, that it was not a particularly good reputation. In fact, one hostess had been distinctly heard to remark that his room was better than his company. When he came to tea he also came to stay.

One day he was invited to an "At Home," and, as usual, he was still talking away to his hostess long after the other guests had departed.

"Well, I must be going," he remarked at length.

"Don't let me keep you if you must go," said the hostess hopefully.

"Yes, I really must go," said Greene once more. "But really, believe me, I do so enjoy a little chat with you. Do you know, I had quite a headache when I came, but now I've entirely lost it."

"Oh, it isn't lost," replied the long suffering lady. "I've got it now."

Where?

"Mamma, what makes the street car go?" piped small Joan, much to the amusement of the passengers on the car. Her mother quietly replied that the electricity made the car go. While Joan twisted about in her seat, turning this unenlightening answer over in her mind, the car came to a stop.

"But, mamma!" she said, still puzzled, "where does the electricity go when the street car stops?"

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Lord Burnham, who sails for the United States today, en route to attend a press conference in the West Indies, is proprietor of The Daily Telegraph, one of the leading London newspapers, which was founded by his father. The present holder of the title is a man of unquestionable energy, and is possessed of a remarkable memory, besides being an easy and vigorous speaker. During the war he was a staunch supporter of the British government in all its measures, and a year or so ago it was rumored that in return for his patriotic services he could have received the appointment to the governor-generalship of Canada, had he desired to accept. Lord Burnham was educated at Eton and Oxford, and first entered politics in 1885, when he was returned to the house of commons as conservative member for West St. Pancras. He has paid several visits to America is well known on this side of the water.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Drug Stores and the Dodecanese

Busy Babbit is apt to skip the item "Italy Announces Cession of Dodecanese Invalid, Pending Lausanne Conference" with the exclamation:

"What are these Greeks to me. I build bungalows, not Greek temples; and I haven't time for the theatres or the art galleries."

On the way home, however, Babbit calls at the doctor's office, "Been feeling little sluggish," and he takes the prescription to a drug store.

"That's when the Dodecanese come in," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"On Kos, second largest of the Dodecanese, lived Hippocrates, the father of modern medicine. For service to mankind this intellectual colossus of Kos deserves to overshadow the inanimate colossus of Rhodes, the largest island in the chain that straggles from Samos toward Crete.

"Pharmako, or the island of herbs, now is herbless. But this drug island, occupied some years ago by a single family perpetuates its claim to being the first drug store in the world by the title 'Phar. D.' held by every man authorized to fill your prescription.

"Pharmake is not one of the major land units which give the group its name—Twelve Islands. Even some of the twelve are, to have been uninhabited, and on none of their rocky surfaces are the residents self-sustaining.

"When, in 1521, Kalymnos, just north of Kos, gave up its losing fight and sent a mission to surrender to Sultan Suleiman the delegates took along a highly suggestive geographical exhibit. The gifts they bore consisted of sponges and white loaves. The first symbolized their principal industry—and today the sponges piled high on the drug store counter must likely were collected by a Dodecanese diver—while the white bread showed the islanders' need of wheat from the mainland of Asia Minor since they could not live upon corn of their own growing.

"When the sponge-grounds in the Aegean became depleted the Dodecanese divers discovered other beds off Tripoli and when Italy virtually made a monopoly of the fisheries there some of the divers fared as far away from home as Tarpon Springs, Florida, to play their precarious trade.

"Patmos, northernmost of the group, known wherever the Bible is read because its cave sheltered St. John was without a single inhabitant in the twelfth century.

"It long has been a saying that the Greek Islands are more Greek than Greece. The Dodecanese are among the most Greek of all the islands. Homer knew them all and mentions the leaders under which their armies took part in the expedition against Troy.

"One sort of ruins of the time of Hippocrates may well be considered the precursor of another humane institution of modern life, the hospital. On Kos may be seen the base stones and columns of an Asclepion, one of these institutions which blended the modern functions of a temple, a sanatorium and a clinic. By incantations charms and witchcraft the asclepia sought to heal the sick and if it was against these practices that Hippocrates rebelled. He was not permitted to dissect human bodies but his study of animals and a comparison of their habits anatomy and functions with those of man gave him a remarkable basis for diagnosis of human ills. His ideas about diet and regimen for the sick, for example, are remarkably sound when it is considered he was a pioneer in this field.

"To many sufferers the 'faith cures' effected by the asclenia were potent; others were kept in physical condition by the gymnasia, but Hippocrates' fame as a surgeon, especially, soon spread far. Thus these remote Aegean islands had three therapeutic schools which corresponded to our modern practitioners of mental healing, medical practitioners and physical culturists.

"Geologically the islands are fragments of Asia Minor, torn away by some remote volcanic upheaval. The sporadic formation of the group is attested by their other name, Sporades given them in contrast to the Cyclades so called because of their circular arrangement.

"Should you visit a home in Rhodes you would get a first impression that some members of the household has a hobby for collecting curious, heterogeneous assortments of plates. When a child is born custom decrees that a plate be added to the family collection, and the pattern of this plate must be distinctive. Hence a genealogy records in platters which, if they are the famous Rhodian ware, have great beauty and high price, since only extreme stress or generous offer would impel a family to part with any of the family tree."

An idle brain is the advance agent for a busy tongue.

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and rundown and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."—Mrs. M. OELEN, 3640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Ill.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

WASHINGTON HARBOR EXPERT FOR NORWICH MEETING

The advantage to be derived from the fullest development of the nation's rivers and harbors will be ably presented at the monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce and friends in the Wauregan hotel next Monday evening by Secretary S. A. Thompson of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, Washington, D. C. Secretary Thompson knows his subject matter thoroughly and his address is sure to awaken a greater interest in the development of the Thames river. For 25 years Secretary Thompson has been engaged in the work of advocating the development of the nations rivers and harbors for transportation purposes. His address is not a cold statement of facts and data, but it is interspersed with humor, pathos and anecdotes. This months meeting will certainly prove interesting and instructive.

Major V. L. Peterson has not yet made his report of the preliminary survey of the Thames river at Norwich to the board of engineers of the war department. Congressman R. L. Freeman is responsible for this survey and he has assured the officials of the chamber that he will see to it that the report is given every consideration in Washington. Should the report be unfavorable the chamber has requested an opportunity to appear, through a committee, before the board of engineers in Washington so that every reasonable and justifiable argument in favor of deepening the channel of the river can be presented. Additional facts and data concerning the tonnage of the river when the Uncas Paper Board Co. which will operate the old Ironsides factory have been secured from President J. E. Smith and forwarded to Major Peterson. Mr. Smith expressed interest and pleasure in the activity of the chamber in making its effort to secure a deeper channel.

Theft Trial Next in Superior Court

The trial of William Coman of New London for theft of a roll of silk valued at $150 will be the next case to be begun in the superior next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Coman is accused of stealing the cloth from a truck at night on a street in New London, but he was caught by a policeman to whom he gave quite a battle before he was arrested.

Coman had previously, elected for a jury trial, but his counsel G. C. Morgan, appeared in court Friday to state that they now elected for a court trial.

MARINELLI IS FOUND NOT GUILTY OF ARSON CHARGES MADE AGAINST HIM

Jury Returned Verdict After 10 O'Clock Friday Night—Deliberated 6 1-4 Hours Before Reaching Verdict—Several Times Reported No Agreement—Judge Brown Sent the Twelve Men to Supper in Chage of Sheriff Sidney Brown.

"Not guilty," on all three counts, was the verdict of the jury here in the superior court Wednesday night in the case of Domenico Marinelli, 27, of Groton, who has been on trial for two weeks on the charge of arson on the night of Dec. 1, at his grocery store in Groton.

About 30 men and one woman were in the spectators' seats in the court room when the jury verdict was finally rendered. Marinelli's wife and parents did not attend the court session Friday. He grew white and nervous as the time dragged on in waiting to hear from the jury, but he received the verdict without emotion. At the suggestion of his counsel, he went over to shake hands with the jurors, managing to reach four or five of them before they had filed from the rooms after court had been adjourned.

The case was turned over to the jury at 3.10 Friday afternoon, but it was not until 10.32 Friday night that they were able to report on a verdict, making one of the latest sessions of the superior court in this city in a long time. Several times they returned or were called back to the court room by Judge Allyn L. Brown, each time reporting that they had not agreed upon a verdict. But Judge Brown was unwilling to dismiss them if there seemed to be any chance for a verdict. He remarked to them that the questions of fact seemed to have a pretty narrow compass and he urged them time and again to continue to try to see if they could not reach a verdict.

Judge Brown concluded his charge to the jury just after 3 in the afternoon, having spoken about two hours. The jury retired at 3.10 and two hours later made their first return to the court room, where Foreman Llewellyn F. Smith of Lebanon, in answer to the question of Clerk George E. Parsons, replied that they had not agreed upon a verdict.

Judge Brown asked if there were any questions on which the court might be of help, but there was none presented and he sent the twelve men back to the jury room.

At 5.50 they came back into the court room again and reported no verdict. One man said he thought they could not reach a verdict, but another said he almost thought they could, and Judge Brown sent them back into the jury room again.

Jury Goes to Supper.

At 6.15 he called them into the court room. They were still without a verdict. He told them he proposed to give them a recess for supper at 7 o'clock. Juror John H. Lee of North Stonington told the judge there was sickness in his family and he could not get home unless he caught a bus shortly after 6.30. Judge Brown then said he would give them until 6.25 for further consideration of the case. They were still without a verdict at that time and he told them then that if they felt there was no chance of reaching a verdict he should discharge them.

No one made any response and Judge Brown informed the jurors that he proposed, under the circumstances to send them out to supper from 6.20 to 7.30 and he would see that arrangements were made for getting Mr. Hall home whenever the session was over.

Sheriff Sidney A. Brown took the jurors to the Wauregan house for supper, returning them to court at 7.30, when they again took up the struggle in the jury room.

At 9.30, Judge Brown had the jury called into the court room and again asked if they had agreed upon a verdict. They had not was the reply of Foreman Smith, but one of the jurors told the judge that he thought there was a chance of a verdict. Again Judge Brown sent them back to the jury room.

Not Guilty On All Counts.

At 10.32 the jury returned with its verdict, which was not guilty on all three counts against Marinelli.

In his charge in the morning Judge Brown had directed that a verdict of not guilty should be returned on the count of arson of a dwelling house. In the other two counts, Marinelli was charged as a tenant with setting a fire with intent to defraud and with wilful burning of a private building, not a dwelling house, but so near to a dwelling as to endanger said dwelling.

Thanks Jury.

After the verdict had been given, Judge Brown thanked the jurymen for the patience and conscientious service that had been rendered and told them they would be paid off by the clerk. He adjourned court to next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Clerk Parsons paid off the jurymen before they departed for their homes. This is the last jury case of the term.

Arguments Began in Morning.

When court opened in the morning, Attorney Perry Hollandersky made the opening argument for the defendant, reviewing the facts that had been brought out in the evidence and speaking for about an hour.

He was followed by Attorney Arthur M. Brown with the closing argument for the defense.

Argument For the Defense.

In opening his argument, Attorney Brown referred to the three counts in the information against Marinelli, declaring that the state says we don't know which he is guilty on, but you, gentlemen of the jury, are to take your choice. The state asks you to find Marinelli guilty, a man who had no motive for this fire, but because he had the opportunity the state wants you to find him guilty. The state is obliged to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Marinelli set this fire if you are to find him guilty. We are not obliged to prove that somebody else set this fire, but the state must prove that he did. Ought we to expect that a man like Marinelli, living ten years without a blot upon him anywhere, should suddenly turn criminal? Character counts; God forbid that the time should ever come that character does not count, and this man, ever since he came from Italy lived a straightforward, upright and honorable life. Under the evidence in this case, this man's record ought to be enough to create a reasonable doubt in the mind of any man that this man could have committed this crime.

There has been no sufficient motive shown in the case. You know a man doesn't do a thing like this unless he is driven and impelled by circumstances which are too strong for him to resist. The only thing that the state gives for motive is that Marinelli was in bad financial circumstances and wanted to save himself from bankruptcy. But nothing in the evidence though used with all the sophistry of which the state's attorney is capable, can be twisted into proof of any such thing. The state's own witnesses show how small was the indebtedness of Marinelli on December 1, and that day he had $500 and was able to pay every bill he owed then.

Financial trouble? Why, he was on the solid rock as far as that was concerned.

But the state says Marinelli padded the figures on his stock fixtures. Suppose he did have only $1,000 to $1,500 in stock and fixtures, was there anything in that to make a man want to burn out to defraud an insurance company? There he was with a stock of goods all paid for, ahead on the installment payments for his home, with a splendid character behind him. Why, that man was sitting on the top of the world and had every reason not to do what he is accused of. This man had no motive.

Somebody undoubtedly set that fire. It is not for us to show who set it, and the uncontradicted evidence shows that on that night Marinelli was not in a position to have done it. With customers in his store up to closing time, a man couldn't have had any chance to fix up these baskets and candle. And it couldn't have been fixed soon afterward and not have anything happen from it until 11 o'clock at night. Without any evidence, the state is asking you to disbelieve this man's wife and his old mother, whom I submit were honest witnesses, and to conclude that Marinelli got up in the night and slipped down to the store and set that fire. And then the state asks you gentlemen of the jury, to find Marinelli guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

Do you suppose that, if Marinelli had been a guilty man, he would have left this basket and burlap which the state policemen found in the store two weeks after the fire? They arrested this man in the hope that something might develop and they grilled him at the state's attorney office in the hope that he would say something that would hang him. But they didn't obtain anything. If this man had been guilty, those firemen in the state's attorney's office would have turned him inside out, and the only reason he escaped was because he was innocent.

I submit to you that under the rules of evidence and this court, Marinelli is entitled to acquittal.

Attorney Brown was followed by State Attorney Hadlai A. Hull with the final argument for the state.

State Attorney Argues.

In opening the closing argument for the state, Major Hull referred to war services of persons from his own office and said that he was not lacking in respect to service or to an honorable discharge, but that an honorable discharge of which counsel for the defense had made much, was not evidence in this case; and good character is no defense for crime. We can learn from the papers nearly every day of some person, with long years of honorable record, going wrong. These things happen. We are to be guided solely by reason and truth in reaching the verdict in this case.

Much has been said about the treatment of this man when he was arrested. They say he was brought to the "den" of the state attorney, that he was put through the third degree. They seem to think he should not have been asked any questions. On the opinion of one of the most learned judges of Connecticut, it is most valuable to receive the statement of the accused at the time of the accusation. It is absurd to suggest that when a man is arrested he should be told by the officers, "Don't say anything. See a lawyer." Then the state can spend $3,000 or $4,000 trying to straighten it all out.

The defense throws out suggestions that Frank, Rotondo might have set the fire, or that it might have been Mr. Cohen, or Mr. Arenault through revenge. But the defense has failed to show how any one could have gotten into this store. Marinelli had the means of getting in for he had the two keys to that store. They ask why Marinelli would have left evidence that he set the fire by these pieces of basket and bagging that were found. They forget that he supposed all the evidence had been destroyed until these pieces were discovered when kicking the rubbish around.

This was a diabolical and intentional fire. It was set. There was no chance for anybody to get into that store through the windows, through the water closets or through the rat hole. To get in two keys were needed and Marinelli had them both. The fire could not have been accidental, there were three wholly separate fires and whoever set one, set them all. There is only one rational explanation as to who set these fires. Nobody else but the accused had the opportunity.

Major Hull referred to the fact that he hadn't cross-examined the wife and mother of Marinelli and he pointed out that their agreement on 7.40 as the time when Marinelli returned home showed they had talked this all over and that cross-examination under these circumstances would have been useless. If Marinelli had gone out after supper, you couldn't have expected her to testify of it.

The padlock on the store door was broken and the Yale lock was broken. They were broken by the firemen at the fire. Marinelli had the keys. As to the suggestion of other people who might have set the fire, Arsenault, it has been proved, couldn't have done so. Cohen wouldn't with his family upstairs to be burned, and Rotondo wasn't here to do it.

Judge Brown Charges Judy.

Judge Brown charged the jury when court came in at 2.30 after the noon recess.

He explained the three counts in the case and directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty on the second count on the ground that there had been no actual burning in the dwelling apartments and there was no interior connection in the building between them and the store in the basement where the fire was.

He outlined the uncontroverted facts, gave instruction on what was needed to prove each count, discussed the question of reasonable doubt, motive and weight and character evidence. He also pointed the more important claims made by each side.

$100,000 LOSS IN FIRE AT NEW LONDON

New London, Jan. 12.—Fire tonight swept through the old Yale brewery, now used as a storage building, destroying the entire structure and its contents and causing a loss estimated at $100,000. Late tonight the building was a bright red shell, with its roof gone, and a few scattered flames still rising in the ruins.

The fire, which is believed to have started in an elevator shaft, gutted the building quickly and destroyed tons of hay and feed stored on upper floors. Only the brick walls four stories high, and a brick tower remain. The entire fire department of New London fought the flames for several hours and devoted its chief efforts to protecting neighboring buildings.

The building was erected by the Yale Brewing company about 20 years ago but was abandoned 10 years later and turned over to other uses. It was being used by the P. Schwartz company as a storage for hay and grain and by the Taft company, ice cream manufacturers. The building had been shut for the night when the fire was discovered.

Firemen dragged about 40 automobiles from a neighboring garage threatened for a time by the flames. The automobiles were owned by C. D. Avery, a dealer in second hand cars, and were not damaged.

The "Old Town Mill," one of the oldest structures in New London, across the street from the fire, was saved by prompt work by the fire department. The destroyed building was about a mile from the heart of the city on Mill and Winthrop streets.

HENS AT STORRS LAY AT RATE OF 39 PER CENT

For the tenth week of the twelfth egg laying contest at Storrs the 100 pens entered by contestants from the United States, England and Canada produced a grand total of 2712 eggs or a yield of near 39 per cent. Owing perhaps to the several snow storms during the past week there was a slight decrease of 41 eggs under last week's production. However they produced 948 eggs more than last year for the same period and 893 eggs more than the eight year average for the same honors. The heavy breeds won all the honors for the week except fourth place. A pen of White Wyandottes entered by Woodbridge Orchards of Woodbridge, Conn., was an easy first with a production of 48 eggs. Fernside Farm's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Foxboro, Mass., was second with 44 eggs to their credit. A pen of White Wyandottes owned by Lady Anderson of Harrold, England, and Frank P. Matteson's pen of the same breed tied for third place with a score of 43 eggs each. Ernest Chase's pen of White Leghorns from Ramsey, N. J., was fourth with a yield of 42 eggs.

With the past ten days' weather conditions the houses often become damp which may cause the hens to take cold which often develops into roup. This disease first appears as a cold followed by a very offensive discharge. The head and eyes often become swollen and frequently a cheesy matter may be found in the roof of the mouth and in the eyes. The treatment for this disease is to make sure that the little in the hen houses is dry and all dampness stopped if possible. It is best to use the axe for hens in advanced stages. However, a ten per cent. solution of argyrol will be found very satisfactory if a drop or two is put into the birds' eyes. It is a good idea to withhold the drinking water from the birds until they have become quite thirsty and then give them a strong solution of permanganate of potash to drink.

Market Conditions

Potatoes are being supplied freely to the markets now but the demand for these products at present is not satisfactory. Cabbages, celery, onions, fancy lettuce, and spinach are maintaining former prices. Cabbages are ruling higher as fancy red stock is being supplied in smaller quantities to the markets. The butter markets remain firm on all grades of firsts and seconds which sold well today. Quotations on the fancy grade of butter sold above the regular quotations. Calves were in light receipt today and the markets were inclined to be a little lower. Fancy lambs were supplied in smaller quantities to the markets and a firmer tone was the consequence. Quotations on dressed meats such as prime and medium dressed beef were sustained over today.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Storm-bound roads have had a peculiar effect upon local trade during the week now drawing to a close. Poor traveling conditions have for the time being cut off the motor traffic that figures in out of town shopping trips. There are few who will venture a trip to the cities by motor car these January days. On the other hand, the very same conditions have operated to cut off Danielson's trade from surrounding towns for many car owners who regularly come here with their families to buy will not risk being stalled off state highways in an effort to get into Danielson. Day by day in every way January weather seems to be getting worse and worse. In fact, it seems to be Coo-Cooed.

Trout fishermen will be interested in the announcement that a bill is to be introduced in the legislature providing that no trout under 7 inches in length may be legally taken from Connecticut waters. The present legal minimum is 6 inches. Many trout fishermen will agree that 7 inches should be the length, at least, of any trout worthy of being kept. While no change may be expected in the law until after this year's trout season—April 1 to June 30, inclusive—it is said to be a possibility by 1924.

Another hoary old canard has made its appearance here—the bogus Fourth degree oath of the Knights of Columbus. Some lover of humanity and promoter of brotherly love has been engaged in distributing it at doors about the borough not forgetting the homes of some of the members of the K. of C. This fake oath has been exposed and discredited from coast to coast so many times that it is no longer the dangerous anti propaganda that it was several years ago, and now holds appeal only for those so ignorant and intolerant, feeding on prejudice as the most toothsome morsel that life holds, that life itself would be spoiled for them if all narrow back material were suddenly consigned to perdition.

His friends here learned with regret of the death at his home in Springfield Thursday morning of Russell A. Bailey for many years a resident of Danielson and [illegible] manager of the Quinebaug Brick company which carried on brick making operations at a yard just north of the state highway to Brooklyn and midway between that place and Danielson. Mr. Bailey was in his 56th year.

He was a native of Biddeford, Me., and spent [illegible] with his parents, his father E. A. Bailey, for [illegible] time being agent of the Quinebaug company. He has been a resident of Springfield about 20 years. Mr. Bailey leaves his mother, Mrs. Emily W. Bailey of East Orange, N. J.; three brothers, Benjamin Frank and Milton, and a sister Mrs Mary B Newell of West Orange, also four daughters, Mrs Ralph Day of Honolulu, Misses Helen Ruth and Lois Bailey of Springfield. Mrs. Bailey died a number of years ago.

Danielson may again point with pride to the remarkable small fire loss experienced during 1922. Less than $5,000 covers the total losses experienced in the borough during that period of twelve months. In large measure this freedom from excessive fire losses—a record extending over a period of years—is due to the efficiency of the local fire department and to the effectiveness of the apparatus with which it has been equipped by the borough. Chief A. P. Woodward points out that the minutes saved in getting at a fire really determine how serious the loss may be. As a volunteer department that Danielson fire department is unsurpassed in making a quick response to alarms, which can be promptly turned in from all parts of the borough through the fire alarm telegraph system. Motorized apparatus gets the firemen where they're going in a hurry. Many experienced fire fighters are included in the roster of the department. This combination serves in large measure for the remarkable reports of freedom from heavy fire losses that Danielson is able to make each year.

Recent publicity relative to the newly formed Danielson Rod and Gun club and its objects brought results Friday in appeals to Harold E. Atwood, promoter of the club, to do something to save flocks of game birds, including four flocks of quail, that are in imminent danger of perishing because of their inability to get feed. The quail particularly suffer severely in periods such as this and it seems a pity that four such fine flocks as now appear to be facing starvation should be wiped out for lack of attention. All of these flocks are within three miles of Danielson and have been reported by observers as without food.

Mr. Atwood's response to the appeal was prompt. He was engaged late Friday afternoon in getting in touch by telephone with game officials, that grain may be provided for the game birds. Partridge and pheasant, though more hardy than quail, are also having difficulty in finding feed on account of the long drawn out series of ice and snow storms.

This is a good time for every true sportsman, especially those who love to hunt birds, to put out some feed for them. Why not do it this half-holiday?

During the months of February and March, there will be conducted a group efficiency contest between the 126 Y. M. C. A. groups of the eight counties of the state. Each county association will determinate its own "best group" and will provide a suitable recognition for the state championship and the winning group will be awarded a bronze shield as a recognition of their achievement and which will be their permanent possession and may be displayed in their club rooms. The competition will be along the following lines: 10 points, every member of the group present on time for all meetings; 10 points, every member's dues paid up to date in the group; 20 points, every member present taking part in the Bible tudy of Life Problems' Discussion; 20 points, every member reporting that he has attended church or Sunday school the previous Sunday; 20 points every member reporting some helpful service rendered at home each week; 10 points the group report received at the county Y. M. C. A. office within three days of the weekly meeting; 20 points, every member observing daily health habits as outlined in the Pioneer or Comrade handbooks; 100 points, group reporting every member having advanced one degree on the outlined program during the period of the contest.

Simultaneously with and supplementary to the group efficiency contest will be conducted an indoor athletic contest consisting of the following events; only one of which will be run off during the recreational period of each group meeting. Of course practice is permitted at any and all times but the records will be taken one event each group meeting night. The events are: Standing high jump, standing broad jump, standing hop step and jump, push up, dart throwing.

The rules for the athletic competition will be published in a later communication. It is expected that these contests will create wholesome rivalry between the various groups of the county and the state and that the results will set up a standard or goal toward which all groups should strive.

Following services held in the chapel at Ponneganset, R. I., Friday afternoon Rev. George W. Cullen of the Rockland Christian church officiating, the body of Mrs. Adeline Culley was brought to East Killingly and placed in the receiving vault. The bearers were George L. Salisbury, George Harvey, James Bagshaw and Arthur Clough. F. Weed was in charge of the arrangements.

According to reports received from the state fuel administrator by F. E. Cunneen, local fuel administrator, Danielson has received 1264 tons of coal during the 13 weeks ending December 15. As Danielson is the source of fuel supply for the borough the West Side and for other communities, it is estimated that the shipments so far average only about 1 1-2 tons for each family, a mighty meagre allowance in a winter as severe as the present one.

There is to be an all-day service on Sunday at the Pentecostal church of the Nazarene Academy street. Rev. Floyd Nease of the Eastern Nazarene college at Wallston, Mass., will be the preacher. The services are to be at 10.45 a. m., 3 and 7 p. m.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich will come here next Tuesday to conduct a tuberculosis clinic at the health station in the town hall building.

Members of the Roundabout club met Friday afternoon with Mrs. Walter Anderson.

An important real estate transaction having to do with the transfer of property in the business section was completed Wednesday when what is known as the Burlingham property at the corner of Main and Academy streets passed into the hands of Attorney Arthur G. Bill.

Attorney Bill said that he had purchased the property for his own account. The property has a frontage of 108.3 feet on Main street, extending from Academy street to the Public Library property and extends back along Academy street for 133.26 feet. There are two buildings on the property — a two story frame structure occupied by business places on the ground floor and by apartments in the second floor, and the old Burlington frame dwelling house, close to the Public library building.

Attorney Bill said that he will improve the property in the spring by painting the buildings and giving them other attention. Further than that he made no announcement Wednesday as to his plans.

The property was purchased from the heirs of Daniel P. Burlingham. It has been in the market for a number of years and just prior to the entrance of the United States into the World war was held for $15,000. What Mr. Bill paid for the property was not made public.

It has one of the finest locations in that section of Main street that likely will mark the next spread of the borough's business area.
